HELLO, FOLKS!

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Pethick, of near Swaledale, are the parents of a baby daughter born at 1:10 a. m. New Year's day, at the Park hospital at Mason City. She is probably the first baby born in Cerro Gordo county in 1948 and will receive many nice gifts from Mason City merchants for being the first baby born in 1948.

The Pethicks have named their new daughter, who tipped the scales at 8 lbs. and 4 ozs., Barbara Jean. The Pethicks formerly lived on a farm near Klemme.

HELLO FOLKS

Mr. and Mrs. Art Polsdofer of near Klemme have a new granddaughter born on New Year's day at the Mercy hospital in Mason City to Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Rice of Clear Lake.

SAFER DRIVING METHODS URGED

Iowans have an opportunity to make Iowa a safer state in 1948 by observing driving and safety regulations on the highway during the coming year, according to Prof. R. A. Moyer, highway research engineer at Iowa State college.

During the past year 541 persons have been killed in Iowa highway mishaps. These are figures from the division of public safety through Dec. 30. That record is better than one person a day killed on the highways.

Probably the greatest factor in highway deaths has been speed. Motorists are prone to drive too fast to be able to stop in an emergency. A good driver should always keep his seeing distance ahead of his stopping distance. Other contributing factors have been speeds in excess of safe driving speeds for highway conditions, passing on hills and curves, failure to yield the right of way and failure to pay attention to railroad crossings.

If drivers would adjust speeds to highway conditions, drive at safe speeds, observe courtesy rules of the road and pay attention to their driving, the Iowa highway death toll could be cut materially in 1948.

Boland Surprised On Their Twentieth Aniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boland were pleasantly surprised on Friday, December 26, when Mr. and Mrs. Otto Sclawin, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lemke and family, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Schlawin and Larry, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Stake and family and Mr. and Mrs. Menno Enhuis and family came to help them celebrate a belated twentieth wedding anniversary. Those present, besides Cecil, were Mr. and Mrs. Glen Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Hess, Walter Bachman, Elmer Wessels, Bud Nieman, Wayne Badker, Wayne Buseman and Mike Lemke. After a bounteous turkey dinner was enjoyed Mr. Bridges was presented with a nice gift from the elevator men.

Four Model Kitchens Coming To County

It ought to be standing-room-only out at the Iowa Farm and Home Labor Saving Show, on Friday, January 16, at Mason City, when the four model kitchens go on display.

The kitchens, scaled-down models of life-size kitchens, are the last word in convenience from cupboard to coffee pot. Not a gadget will be missing from the usual kitchen setup. The latest approved arrangements will be featured—among them the "U" shape and "L" shape plans which are so suitable when an old kitchen is remodeled and modernized.

Mrs. Lettie E. Zuber, county extension home economist, reports that Iowa State College home authorities will be present to point out the outstanding features of the model kitchens, and to talk with homemakers about their kitchen remodelling plans.

The Farm and Home Labor Saving Show is a many-in-one practical demonstration of the labor saving ideas developed at Iowa State College.

Hancock County Home Has Higher Valuation

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Roths and family visited at the Fred Bachman home Sunday evening.

FARMER'S INCOME TAX DUE JANUARY 15TH

Law Requires That He Either Pay or File Estimate By That Date

Having trouble with the income tax report? H. B. Howell, Iowa State College farm management specialist, makes the following suggestions to help Iowa farmers properly fill out their tax forms.

First, says Howell, any farmer who had a gross income of $500 or more during 1947 must file a federal estimate of the net income for 1947, or the final return, by Jan. 15, 1948, and pay the full amount of any tax due at that time. If a declaration (estimated net income) is filed, the final return must be filed by March 15. In either case, payment is made Jan. 15.

Forms To Use

As to the proper form, a farmer must use form 1040, "Individual Income Tax Return." He must also use form 1040 F, "Schedule of Farm Income and Expenses," if he reports on a cash basis. Form 1040 F is optional in reporting farm income on the accrual basis. Most farmers will find it the best form to use when reporting on accrual basis, Howell thinks.

Net income, figured on form 1040F, is transferred to form 1040 where it is figured with other items of income and deductions for calculation of the income tax.

Keep a Copy

Howell says to get two copies of federal form 1040, together with one copy of the instruction sheet, and two copies of federal form 1040F. A copy of each form filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue. The remaining copy should be kept by the farmer for reference. This is important. If the return is questioned, the taxpayer must know exactly what he put down in the copy he turned in.

Farmers are not required to withhold the federal income tax from wages paid farm help. It is the hired man's responsibility to make his own return and pay his own taxes. However, Howell says that farmers should report wages paid hired workers, if the wage is $500 or more for the year. This report must be sent to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, using form 1099 and form 1096.

A hired man with a gross income of $500 must file a return. Included in this gross are cash wages plus a fair value for board and lodging or for use of a house, and products supplied him. However, if the hired worker must live on his employer's premises to fulfill his duties, no estimation for board and lodging is necessary.

Mr. and Mrs. Swalve are quitting farming and will sell their livestock, machinery and some household goods. 33 head of Polled Hereford cattle will be sold, also 3 horses and a large amount of farm machinery. See the complete list in the ad in this issue.

Bigger and Better Prizes

"And how are things now?" we asked the Man Who Built a Better Mousetrap.

"Looking up," he admitted. "At last I have hit on a solution to all my problems. The better mousetrap idea is old stuff. I am making just an ordinary mousetrap, but going in for what really sells things."

"What is that?" we asked.

The Man Who Built a Better Mousetrap handed us a long list headed, we observed, by an ivory-bodied beachwagon, two jewel-studded seaplanes a 32-acre estate at Palm Beach, six Arabian horses (in matched colors), a hunting lodge in Canada, a 38-foot yacht and the royal suite on the Queen Mary for the season 1948-49-50.

"That's nothing," he put in. "Keep reading."

We did so and noticed the sum of $25,000 in cash, a contract to do any house over inside and out, fitting it with solid silver door knobs; two television sets and a portable orchid greenhouse.

"My radio program," he explained. "It's to be called 'The Who Is Mister Pipe Down Program,' or 'The Mystery Chuckles.' We pick out somebody who recites a few lines of verse which give a clue to his identity. Then we just pile on more prizes at each broadcast. What do you think of the Netherlands East Indies?"

"You mean for a vacation trip?"

"Oh no. I mean for a radio program prize!"

"You should sell a lot of mousetraps," we admitted.

"Listen, my worries are over. I'm in. These prize programs of real size do it. Path to my door my eye! Know what I'm building?"

"What?"

"Six five-lane highways," he concluded.

Special Delivery:

Mr. Eric Johnston,
Czar of the Movies.

Dear Eric: Well, you are just looking for laughs, I guess, and it is okay, as I like more comedy in the movie world, and you are now eligible for a meter-splitting performance on "Can You Top This?" as a result of that recent announcement of a revolutionary change in picture policy whereby no film based on the life of a criminal will be permitted "unless the character is shown punished for the crimes committed." (You win, Eric, and Harry Hirshfield and Joe Laurie Jr. only pushed the laugh meter to 950.)

I have not had a giggle in years like when I read your statement. Gosh, Eric, you certainly have control of the facial muscles all right, all right. "Unless the character is shown punished for the crimes committed"!!! Why, Mister Hollywood, you have the kiddies splitting their sides, too.

You might just as well have said, "There will be no change whatever in the presentation of crime pictures," on account of the oldest gag in pictures and radio is to have the big plug-ugly get a little chastisement just before the picture fades out into Donald Duck or Mickey Mouse.

Show me any crime picture in the history of the pictures or of radio in which the big gat, machine gun and brass knuckle man, after a blood-curdling life of lawlessness for an hour and 40 minutes, hasn't been sent up the river or been plugged in a phone booth just to fool the mothers' clubs, at the extreme end of the film. Of course, now and then there is a little improvement. I once saw a crime glorification in which the top desperado had nothing worse happen to him than losing the nomination for the presidency. But that was when the presidency seemed attractive.

BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: Isaiah 40:28-31; Matthew 6:9; John 14:8-14; Acts 17:22-31.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 33.

What We Know of God

Lesson for January 11, 1948

THE Scripture for Sunday's lesson is Isaiah 40:28-31, Matthew 6:9, John 14:8-14, and Acts 17:22-31, with Psalm 33 as the devotional reading.

Dr. Newton

"Hast thou not known? Hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. . . . They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

That is the passage from Isaiah. What a promise! In this hour when men are bending beneath the burden of a war-weary world, how it gives lift to one's soul to contemplate the words of this great and blessed promise.

God Our Maker

"HE GIVES to all men life and breath and everything," Acts 17:25. One of our daily prayers should be to thank God that he has let us open our eyes to the beauty of another dawn. We must not take it for granted. It is the goodness and mercy of God that permits us to open our eyes, to breathe, to have food, to think. He gives us life and breath and everything.

He causes the sun to shine and the tides to ebb and flow. He causes the rain to fall and the winds to bear their blessings. He holds the earth in its course. God is the maker of every good thing.

And He Is Our Father

NOT only is God the Creator and Sustainer of the physical universe; but he is also our Father. He knows us each by name. He cares for the sparrows, simply because they are sparrows. He cares for us because we are his children, made in his image, capable of fellowship with him. The end of man, as the Catechism clearly teaches, is to enjoy God and glorify him forever.

Read again the passage that describes Paul's visit to Athens, and how he observed that the people, though quite intelligent, were worshipping many different gods. Paul summoned them to worship the one true and living God.

When we acknowledge God as Maker and Father, we are then enable to serve him in conscious assurance of his love and care for us as his adopted children.

Show Us the Father

READ again John 14:8-14, and join with Philip in the prayer, "Show us the Father." Jesus answered Philip, saying, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." We come to know God as Father through Jesus Christ, and only through Jesus Christ.

Jesus goes on to say to Philip, "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it." The greatest need of our day and generation is a fresh understanding of God—his nature and his will. We can know him through Jesus Christ. And we come to know him through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Enoch walked with God. Abraham was the friend of God. David was a man after God's own heart. And Jesus came to perfectly reveal the Father. The determining factor in knowing God as Father is our willingness to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Belief in God Today

THE Bible is a Book for today—any day, every day. It reveals the purpose of creation, both of the universe and man himself. It reveals the loving concern of God for every soul. It portrays his forbearance and his mercy and his exceeding kindness, even to sinful men and women who reject his love.

Best of all, the Bible tells us the sweetest story ever told — the story of how God gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

Religion, the Christian religion, is the most practical proposition in the world. Every man is constantly in reach of God, if only he will believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. God is yonder in the loneliest watchtower of the timberlands. He is yonder on the storm-tossed ship at sea. He is everywhere, waiting to own and bless any and all who will come to him through Jesus Christ.

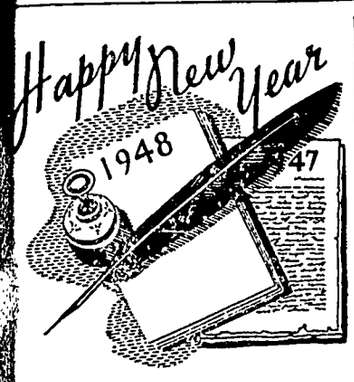
From the Swiss Alps to the Sahara desert, the world will be looking forward to a happier, more complete, and friendlier New Year.



THE New Year, the turning of another page in the book of our lives. Before us appears a new clean white page, a slab of snow-white marble, whereon we must record the events of the coming year as they apply to us, to our country and to the world. What shall we record thereon? As Longfellow said: "Life is real, life is earnest. Let us then be up and doing with a heart for any fate; still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait."

On the new page we might place our first entry: "Smile, save, serve." We can be thankful for another morning of life. We can be thankful for this day; for its failures which we must acknowledge as lessons. We must check our faults and failures. We must scatter seeds of smiles and service, so that they may grow to maturity, so that the reaping will not be shame and sorrow. We will smile, save and serve.

DAY'S MIXUP

The whole world celebrates New Year's Day, but not always on the same date.

The biggest mixup occurred from 1552 to 1772 when Europe and England observed the New Year on the same day but at different times! In 1552, Pope Gregory III eliminated 10 days from the Julian calendar previously in use because it was 11 minutes longer each year than the astronomical year. England did not adopt the new Gregorian calendar until 1772, however, thus observing the same holiday at a later day.

When translated into the Gregorian calendar, the Jewish New Year's varies from September 6 to October 4. The Mohammedans not only celebrate at a different date but their calendar is dated almost 600 years behind the Gregorian since it begins with the Prophet's flight from Mecca in A. D. 622.

AT THE beginning of each New Year two pathways open. One slants downward, slow deterioration clouding and finally blotting out all mental excellence, spiritual appreciation and even physical strength. The other leads to the finer things of existence, ascending gradually to lofty heights of mind and spirit. At the entrance Life stands with cheery greeting and forward impetus for all who heed. Choose well your way! He who lives fully in the year at hand will create grandly for the year that follows. Regardless of any past, he who is his best self today will find much beauty in tomorrow. —L. D. Stearns.

Start of The Year

First community in the world to celebrate New Year's Day every year is the little colony on Chatham Island. This British islet in the South Pacific is the nearest land area west of the International Date Line on the 180th meridian. The people are mostly Polynesian fishermen, but the few British residents hail the New Year in proper style. Chatham is 40 miles east of New Zealand.

Informality Marked Early Holiday Calls

A gala occasion in the lives of the American belles was New Year's Day of former years. Each expected her men friends to accept her hospitality on New Year's Day. On that day barriers were lowered a bit and the strict social form was relaxed to the extent that the men did not need special invitations or formal introductions, and the young ladies could talk more openly and act more natural than on formal occasions.

Fond mammas told their unwed daughters that among so many charming and eligible young men they surely must find one on whom they could bestow their affections. It must be noted, however, that the young ladies had to be fast workers. No matter how informal these New Year's Day calls were, it was a gross breach of propriety for a young man to stay more than 10 minutes.

The theme of New Year's Day always has been one of joy. Regardless of the country or the people, or of the date on which it was celebrated, joy marked the spirit in which it was observed.

New Year's Day of the Mohammedans is given as October 17; of the Hebrews as September, and of the Chinese as early February.

The ancient Egyptians, Phoenicians and Persians began their year at the autumnal equinox, September 21, and the Greeks until the fifth century B. C. at the winter solstice, December 21. In 432 B. C. the latter altered the New Year's Day to June 21.

The ancient Romans celebrated December 21, but this was altered to January 1 by Caesar in adopting the Julian calendar.

March 25 was the date observed among most Christian peoples in medieval days. In Anglo-Saxon England, however December 25 was New Year's Day until it was changed to January 1 at the Norman conquest, but later it was changed to March 25 and so remained until the English adopted the Gregorian calendar.

"I am done with the years that were,
I am quits.
I am done with the dead and the old,
They are mines worked out, I
delved in their pits,
I have saved the grains of gold—
Now I turn to the future for wine and bread—
I have bidden the past adieu—
I laugh, and lift hands to the year ahead.
Come on! I am ready for you!"
—Edwin Markham.

'Biff' Tells a Love Story

By Gene Brockhaven

PICKING his way slowly through the massed humanity crowding toward the exits, Matt Walsh, sports writer, pondered the sensational ending of the ring battle he had just witnessed. He was blase about quick knockouts; he had seen many of them and undoubtedly would see many more. But he still thrilled to the brilliant — if boxing skill could be called that — and masterful job turned in by Spot Mathers.

Well, here was a new champion and Walsh felt he should know more about the boy. Something of his personal life.

It was after midnight when he reached the hotel at which the new champion and his entourage were stopping. At the door of the Mathers' suite he was halted by a blast of noise—the victory celebration. The big living room was a bedlam. Walsh glanced about the room but saw no sign of Mathers. He sought out the boy's manager, Pete Miley, busy in the role of lavish host.

"Mathers? Just went down the hall to room 1117," Miley answered his question. "Go on down and see him."

Walsh did. The door was slightly ajar. He tapped lightly, waited, then tapped again. When there was no response he opened the door and peered in. He stepped back, closing the door softly. Mmm-m, that tableau was something unexpected and unusual on victory night in the fight racket. Young Mathers, his arm around a dark-haired girl — a sleeping baby tucked in carefully between pillows at the head of the bed. This was no time to break in for an interview, so Walsh returned to the other room. He managed there to corral Biff Jones, old-timer in the ring business and Mathers' trainer.

"Biff," said Walsh, "how about some dope on the new champion? And what about that gal and baby down the hall? Let's go some place where we can talk."

"Okay. This party's slowing down anyways."

They went down to the hotel grill and found a table in the corner of the room.

"Now, tell me about Mathers. What kind of a guy is he?"

"Sure, I can tell you lots about that kid and about his wife and baby, too. I like 'em, all three of 'em, and I'd like to tell their story. But I gotta tell it my way." Biff blinked at Walsh.

"All right, tell it."

"Well, it begins some two years ago," Biff began. "Me and Pete Miley is sittin' in Pete's office gabbing about nothin' much when in walks a cocky, good lookin' kid. He's got a letter for Pete from some guy down south. He walks up to Pete, ignorin' me, and says: 'You Pete Miley? This is for you.' Pete takes the letter, reads it and looks up at the kid.

"'So, you're a fighter, eh?' Pete says.

"'Yeah, and good one,' says the kid. . . ."

"Come on, Biff, get on with it," interrupted Walsh impatiently.

"As I was sayin'," Biff continued, "the kid says, 'I gotta get a fight right away. We gotta eat.'

"Pete says, 'We, who's we?'

"'Me and Sally,' the kid says, and goes on talkin' about him and his wife comin' up to New York to pick up some of the big fightin' sugar they been readin' about. They come up in a old jalopy, the kid says, and now the dough's run out. Pete says to the kid what's his full name and the kid says, without battin' a eye, 'Spottingham T. Mathers,' and looks at the both of us like darin' us to laugh. Pete kinda grins but he aint laughin' out loud. I could see Pete's takin' a likin' to the kid and soon he hands him a finif.

"Pete tells the kid to go out and buy him and Sally a big steak and to come around tomorrow with his fightin' togs and he'll see what the kid's got. I go to the gym with them next day and Pete sticks the kid in there with a old warhorse named Batalia. The kid, considerin' he ain't been eatin' so good, does okay and Pete holds him.

"We get our first peek at Sally when Pete moves her and the kid over to Pete's hotel. Pete tells the kid to go to the gym a few days and for me to work with him.

"Well, as I says, we get our first peek at Sally, and boy, she's somethin'! She ain't got only looks but she's got somethin' else I don't know what. Anyways, I go for Sally big — don't get me wrong, mister, my courtin' days is long gone — she's a nice kid. Well, them two kids, eatin' regular again with Pete payin', bloom like a coupla hot house flowers put out in the sun. Soon Pete spots the kid in a four-round prelim at St. Nicks and the kid comes through with a quick kayo. O'course he knocks over a bum, but we like the way he does it.

"It ain't long before the kid's moved up to semi-finals and then final spots, because, as I says, he's good. Him and Sally is livin' on their own now because Pete's been pullin' down some good pots for him and I know personal that Pete ain't takin' any cut, leastwise not much. He likes them kids, specially Sally, like everybody does. But let me tell you, this Sally ain't no eye-waver. She's stuck on Spot and don't make no bones about it. But that Spot, now, he's got a bit of a rovin' eye, and like I told you, he's a cocky punk and he ain't against steppin' once in a while, now the dough's comin' in. But I guess when a kid's 21 he gets to thinkin' he's really somethin' special.

"Well, them once-in-a-while steppin's begin to get quite frequent and many's the night I find myself keepin' Sally company on lonely nights when that milk-sop is sowin' a few oats. I feel sorry for Sally, and I tell her it's just like a case of the mumps or the gallopin' measles, a little while sick and you're good as new again. But that Sally can take it, she's no plater, and she keeps smilin'."

Biff reached for his glass.

"Well," he resumed, "the kid starts going around with a show gal. I talk to him.

"'Listen, knob-ears,' he says, 'you're keepin' outta this.' He tells me a lot more about him and this show gal gettin' married after he wins the title and gives Sally the air.

"NEXT day I tell Pete all and we head over for the gym where Spot's workin' out. Pete quizzes him and all he gets for his trouble is abuse.

"I go around to see Sally next day to see if she knows anythin' about this marriage business. I poke around kinda subtle like and then quiz her if she's heard anything about Spot and this show gal. Well, she starts cryin' and I feel like a four-star dope. I don't know what to do and just stand there sayin', 'there, there,' like I heard a mother once with a cryin' baby It don't do much good. Sally keeps cryin' soft like. That kinda cryin' don't need no sound effects, it goes deep. Pretty soon she says she's goin' back home. And she does, leavin' a note for the punk.

"He goes around a coupla days sour-pussed. I don't hear a word from Sally for weeks and I don't think the punk has neither, but Pete is goin' around with a wise look and I get a hunch he knows somethin'. The kid has changed some He ain't so cocky no more and he seldom goes out at night. One night, just before we're leavin' for the trainin' camp where the kid's gonna get ready for the final 'limination bout, I'm in his room helpin' him pack.

"It ain't long and the phone buzzes. The kid's near it and picks it up. He says, 'I ain't here,' and hangs up. Pretty soon comes a knock on the door and dummy me opens it. A dame is there. I figure it's the show gal and I'm right. She steps over to the kid. 'Honey,' she says, 'you ain't seen me lately?' The kid keeps on packin'. Then he says he ain't gonna see her no more.

"Then the fireworks begin. That dame gives him the trimmin's and when she's in high gear she heaves a water bottle at the kid's head and stalks out. He ducks and the bottle whams against the wall. During the ruckus I duck into a corner. I see mad dames work before.

"It's two or three days later when I see Pete at the camp. I tell him about the show and he looks at me kinda funny and says now's the time to tell him and maybe he's all over it. I don't catch the drift, but I tag along over to the house with Pete. The kid's restin' when me and Pete come into the room. Pete says, 'Spot, I got some news for you, news from Sally.' The kid sits up sudden like and he gets kinda white. He don't say nothin', just keeps lookin' at Pete. 'Sally,' Pete says, 'is gonna have a baby.' Just like that.

"The kid jumps up outta the bed and he starts to cry. I think I kinda like him then, even though he's actin' sissy. 'Pete,' he says, 'I gotta go to her! I gotta!'

"Pete says okay and take a coupla days off. So the kid goes home to see Sally. You never see such a changed guy when he comes back. He's talkin' again and he's happy and he even gets friendly with me and I kinda like it, too, seein' he aint the smart-alex no more.

"So you see, like I once say to Sally, it's like the mumps, a little while sick and you're okay again, and so's them kids, all three of 'em now."

A noted authority on flowers and flower arrangement advises the use of glass or white pottery vases or bowls as these go well with the colors of all flowers and the decorative colors in all rooms. Sagging floors often are caused by wood shrinkage or the warping of a joist. A fairly satisfactory correction can be made by driving wedges between the top of the joist and the floor. Rubber wedges cut from an old automobile tire often will reduce the creaking.

It isn't necessary to soak clothes for more than 30 minutes. Longer soakings will open the fibers.

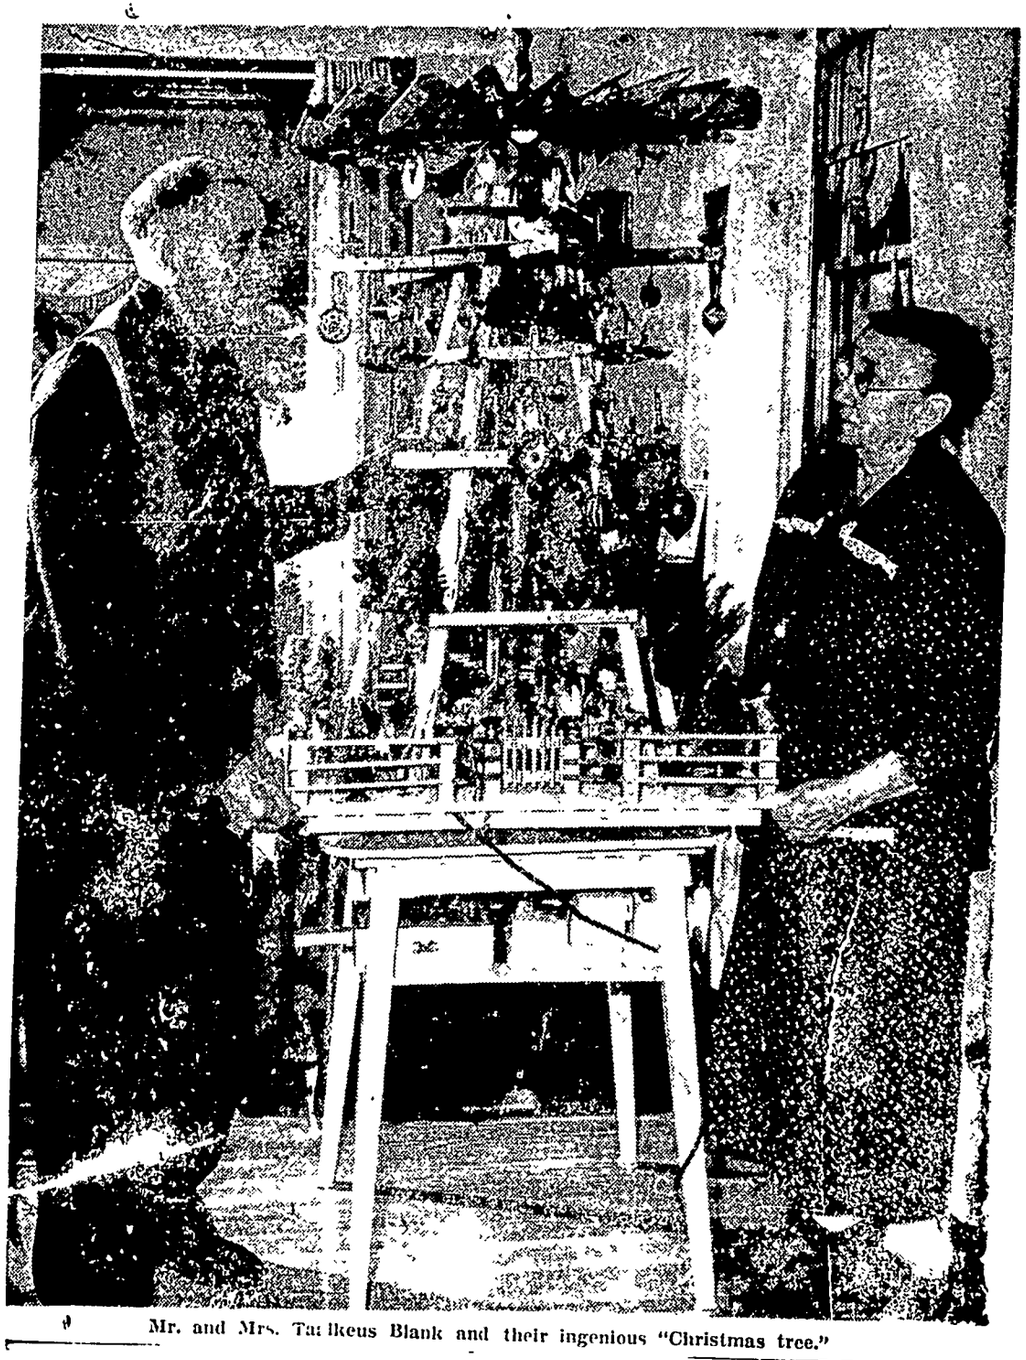
An Ingenious Iowa Xmas Tree



Mr. and Mrs. Taalkeus Blank and their ingenious "Christmas tree."

CANDLES' HEAT REVOLVES CORE

(Des Moines Sunday Register, Dec. 21, 1947, by Don Allen)

Every year people come to this north Iowa town from miles around to see the ingenious "Christmas tree' built by Taalkeus Blank.

There's probably not another like it in the state, although Blank, 83, has seen sketches of similar trees in Ripley's "Believe It or Not" cartoons. One was in New York and another in Louisiana.

From Memory

But Blank didn't get his idea from the cartoons. He built his tree nearly 20 years ago from the memory of a verbral description supplied by a Lutheran minister from Wisconsin.

Time was beginning to hang heavy on his hands about then. He had retired only recently on pension after working 42 years as a section hand and foreman for the Rock Island railroad in Iowa.

The tree has four principal parts—a platform, a five-sided tower, a revolving core or center with three shelves, and a windmill-like fan on top. The sharp end of a needle is inserted in the wooden core. The other end rests on a concave piece of glass, so the core turns easily.

Only an amateur as an electrician, Blank wired the tree with five different circuits to light the 52 plain and fancy-colored bulbs, some of which flash on and off as the center of the tree revolves.

It is this revolving feature which is doubtless the most amazing thing about the whole Blank tree. Heat from the 15 Christmas tree candles—the kind one can scarcely buy any more, rises against the blades of the fan, causing it to revolve.

The fan turns the core of the tree to which it is attached. Round and round goes the core, turning with it the shelves. On them are figures of the Christman story—Mary and Joseph kneeling before the baby Jesus in crude cradle; their donkey; angels, shepherd and sheep; and three wise mn, and Simeon.

Often Overlooked

Simeon is a character often overlooked in modern telling of the story of the Nativity. But Blank, a faithful Lutheran, has read the Gospel according to St. Luke and describes Simeon as the man who said, "Now Lord let me go and rest in peace for I have seen the Saviour of the world." These are Blank's words.

On the platform of the tree are many other figures. The tableau of the Nativity is repeated, but Blank has added camels of the wise men, cattle, a zebra, an elephant and donkeys.

Gaily Painted

The figures are plaster of Paris, gaily painted in appropriate colors. Blank points out that two of the wise men are dark-skinned— "Ethiopians" he explains.

Blank achieved the flashing lights by having the revolving center of the tree "make and break" one of the five electric circuits.

Asserting that he is "a jack of all trades and a master of none," Blank belittled his electrical skill.

Born near the little German town of Bunde, May 26, 1864, Blank came to the United States on April 23, 1886, and directly to Belmond, Iowa, where a brother lived He reached Belmond "with 25 cents in my pocket and an empty stomach."

He left behind his bride of a year—he had to earn money to bring her over.

When he could find work in Germany, he said, he earned 75 cents a week. His first week's paycheck as a section hand at Belmond was at the rate of $1.10 a day. He waved the check and shouted to his brother, "I'm a wealthy man!"

He shouted in German. He was only beginning to learn a few English words. A sociable fellow, Blank has no trouble with the English language now but he talks with a noticable Irish brogue.

"An Irishman taught me how to speak English," he laughs.

Mrs. Blank followed him to the United States in October 1886. He was working regularly then for the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern, later absorbed into the Rock Island system.

Wed Twice In a Day

They had been married March 16, 1885 in German—twice in one day, Blank said. He explained that Germany only recently has passed a law requiring marriage by a civil official. But his and his bride's parents wanted a church ceremony, too, so the Blanks were married also by a Lutheran minister

"I guess that tied it pretty tight," Blank joked. "If we each live a few months more we can celebrate our sixty-third anniversary."

Mrs. Blank at 86 is three years older than her husband, but she is sprier than he. She talks exciteldy and almost flits around their comfortable house in whics much of the furniture is from Blank's work bench.

Her husband walks with difficulty and must have support if he stands very long. The nerves in his legs have given out, he said.

Moved To Klemme

After some years with the railroad at Belmond and then at Hayfield, Blank was moved to Klemme where he was made section foreman. He was a member of the school board here for 15 continious years and of the city council for 18 consecutive years.

The Blanks have had 10 children, six of whom are living, all loyal to Iowa. There are two sons—Fred of West Bend and Ralph of Iowa Falls—and four daughters: Mrs. Agnes Ahrenkill, Goodell; Mrs. Grace Quandt and Marie Blank, both of Klemme; and Mrs. Minnie Usher, Rowan.

SIXTY YEARS

In an unusual presentation at Guthrie Center, T. J. Yyons of Panora and Henry Lyons of Bagley received pins for 60 years of affiliation with the I. O. O. F. The brothers are 84 and 83 years of age, respectively.

Add Safety To New Year Resolutions

Though News Year's day is a week past, here are some resolutions that county extension director Henderson suggests be added to coming plans of all Hancock County farmers.

First, says Henderson, resolve to make farm safety a family affair this year. Put the final responsibility for an accident-free year squarely on the shoulders of every member of the family.

Resolve to check the farm and farmstead periodically to locate hazards and remove them for safer working conditions. Where there are 4-H club members in the family they can take care of most of this checking, but the job should not be left entirely to them.

Resolve to keep shields in place on power machinery at all times and observe rules for safer operation. Take precautions when working around electricity and know your job before doing any farm wiring or repairing.

Resolve that each member of the family will work, play and drive safely—and practice ALL rules of safety fifty-two weeks a year.

N BORERS APT TO BE BAD IN 1948

e Was Large Increase In 47 And Pest Is Now In All Counties

ropean corn borer infesta- have increased greatly in within the last year, and rs can expect a "tremend- ss' next season if all factors vorable for the borers, a released this week by M. Harris, head of en- logy, Iowa State College, tes.

annual fall survey, con- d jointly by the state De- ent of Agriculture, the U. reau of Entomology and State College, showed that borer populations have up until they now infest county in the state.

oncerns More Farmers

viest infestations continue nter in areas of best corn ction, but the spreading of orers means that western Iowa farmers and others who had not previously been bothered must now become "corn borer conscious."

Highest infestation was in Bremer County where an average of 469 borers per 100 stalks of corn was reported. Over 12 counties had an average infestation of 300 or more borers per 100 stalks, as compared to only one in 1946. Lowest population count came from Page and Osceola counties with an estimated 2.8 borers to each 100 corn plants.

Make Plans

To meet this increased infestation threat farmers should plan ahead on a four-point program for next year, Harris believes. First, they should choose a strong-stalked and strong-shanked hybrid, well adapted to their fields. Second, plant early to get the maximum yield and freedom from frost damage in the fall. Third, protect fields which become heavily infested with corn borer eggs by treating them with DDT. And last, cooperate with neighbors by shredding and ensiling stalks. Destroy any crop residues by deep, clean plowing before May 15th.

Apply DDT

Harris said early planting had not been advised in the past in order to dodge the first brood of borers. Now experiments have shown that one application of DDT, properly timed and applied, will protect the corn. With no need to dodge early borers, corn can be planted earlier to avoid bad weather and frost, and to reduce risks of poorer yields. At present corn prices, two bushels of corn saved per acre will pay for the cost of treating fields with an insecticide Harris says.

COMMUNITY RAT CONTROL

Ever walk along Main Street and see a fat, brown rat dart out from one of the buildings.

Paul Henderson, county extension director, called attention to healthy rat population in Hancock County towns. Especially around the garbage dumps. He said there was no reason why any town had to put up with rats.

A four-point control program, devised by Iowa State College specialists has helped at least 25 Iowa towns. It's a fairly simple program Henderson said, but the whole community needs to know about it. Rat control is a job to be shared by everyone.

There's small advantage for you to keep killing off rats on your premises if more of the pests keep breeding at your neighbor's.

The rat control campaign calls first for a clean-up program on a community-wide basis. This means eliminating old trash piles and other junk around homes and business places. Lumber should be piled up neatly, and placed on supports that keep it at least two feet off the ground. Garbage must be kept in tight containers. Next step is to "prebait" for 3 nights. By placing unpoisoned bait, it is possible to determine how many rats are present. In addition you gain the confidence of the rats.

When it comes to poisoning, there are several possible choices, according to Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist. Where pets and domestic animals might get at the bait, red squill is best. It kills only rats. It's disadvantages is that it has a distinctive taste and the rats soon learn to leave it alone. A rat that recovers from red squill poisoning never will touch it again.

If household pets in the community can be confined for a few days, other types of poison are effective.

Antu is a war-developed poison, primarily harmful to brown rats. It kills quickly, but it is also poisonous to other animals. It may be that it has a distinctive taste which warns recovered rats not to touch it again.

Barium carbonate is tasteless and odorless, but it is poisonous to all animals.

White arsenic is tasteless and odorless, but it is extremely poisonous to other animals, and must be used with great care.

After the poisoning campaign has been carried out, a good ratproofing job in buildings will help a great deal, entomologists say. They advise liberal use of concrete in foundations, and repairing walls and floors so that they offer little shelter for rats.

DESTROYING MICE SAVES MUCH OF STATE'S GRAIN

Small but mighty—mighty big destroyers of grain is what the Iowa State College extension entomologist Harold Gunderson says of mice in Iowa.

Mice not only destroy grain on farms and in elevators, they contaminate food in grocery stores and in the home. They chew holes in feed sacks and are carriers of such diseases as infectious jaundice and possibly endemic typhus.

To control mice in the house, Gunderson recommends trapping. Poison will eradicate them, but it seldom works fast enough to kill the mice before they get into places where they can't be reached.

In barns and granaries a few kernels of poisoned wheat or oats sprinkled on runways or in holes will do the trick. Strychnine is the recommended poison. Commercial arsenic-containing liquids is suggested for elevators where all water can be shut off from the mice.

Sparrows, which carry mites and build fire-hazard nests, can also be controlled with the strychnine-treated grain. Best results are obtained if untreatdd grain is scattered on sills and other sparrow roosting places a few days prior to the poisoning. Care should be taken not to scatter poison grain where other birds can eat it.

Take Long Range View Before Pig Crop Cuts

Look ahead to next fall before deciding to cut down your spring pig crop is the advice of Francis Kutish, Iowa State College farm economist.

Many farmers are reported to be planning a reduction in the number of hogs to farrow in the spring. They argue that corn is too high priced to use for raising hogs.

If a good corn crop becomes a certainty next year, feeding margins will favor feeding the livestock, Kutish points out. It's nearly always that way after a short corn crop.

With corn prices high this fall, many farmers would rather sell their corn now than hold it to feed next spring and summer. One way to capitalize on present high grain prices, is to sell the corn and breed sows for late spring farrow. The pigs can be carried along on pasture, with a minimum of grain until the new corn is ready.

Thad's Feet Hurt

After a long, hard day's work on the farm, Thad's idea of how to spend an evening is to take off his shoes, and relax with a mellow glass of beer.

But his missus has other ideas. After being in the house all day, she's all for walking to the village, if it's only for a soda. Likes to see people, catch the latest gossip. But Thad says, no, his feet hurt! Began to cause unpleasantness in Thad's home.

Then Bill Webster comes up with an idea. If Thad takes the missus to Andy's Garden Tavern, Thad can relax with his glass of beer, and the missus can also chat with all the neighbors there. Each gets his (or her) own way.

Worked, too! In fact, now the missus likes an occasional temperate glass of beer herself. And Thad finds it's pleasanter to enjoy his beer with good companions, rather than alone. In fact, his feet stopped hurting too!

ON LUMBER AND BUILDING MATERIALS

1948 probably will not be quite so bad in Building Material shortages as 1947, but there will be some hard to get items such as Steel, Millworks and Cement.

Cement in particular will be hard to get the latter part of the year.

If you are contemplating to use some Cement this year you had better get it on your job in early spring.

We have Steel Gates in stock at the present time, if you need some you had better get them as they might be hard to get later on.

ionists from all over the ave journeyed to Lewis- rting point for the spec- voyage. The round trip iles, and the current of ke is so swift that it re- 12 hours for the trip but four hours to return.

The Snake is called the wildest river in America. Hell's canyon is the deepest gorge on the North American continent — 1,000 feet deeper than the Grand canyon of the Colorado. McGrady's boats on the trip up the river against the current must buck and growl over many treacherous, boulder-studded rapids.

A Tough Trip.

The boats are no plush, showy affairs, but they are sturdy and can withstand the pounding of the unmerciful Snake. And you have to be tough to fight the Snake and Hell's canyon.

The only time Lewis and Clark turned back during their famous expedition was when they tried to find passage through the canyon. A railroad man surveying the possibilities of a line through the canyon came back and said, "Impossible. The Rockies were sissy stuff compared to that canyon."

The trip up Hell's canyon with McGrady is becoming one of the most unusual tourist attractions of the United States, with many people journeying thousands of miles just to make the jaunt into one of the remote areas in the United States.

Overnight Journey.

McGrady makes the trip twice each week — Wednesdays and Saturdays. He leaves at 6 a. m. and arrives at the lodge in time for a hardy supper. The return is made the next day. McGrady charges tourists approximately $14.50 per person for the trip, lodging and food.

Those who have seen Hell's canyon remember the awesome beauty and ruggedness that held Capt. Benjamin L. E. Bonneville spellbound in 1831 when he paused on the brink of a chasm overlooking the canyon and scrawled in his journal:

"Nothing we had ever gazed upon in any other region could for a moment compare in wild majesty and impressive sternness with the series of scenes where the Snake river is overhung by dark and stupendous rocks, dominated by immense mountains rearing their distant peaks in the clouds.

Trainees' Morals Guarded Jealously

UMT Stresses Integration Of Youthful Personalities

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

(In this, the third of a series on universal military training, further differences between this system and previous training methods are discussed.)

WASHINGTON.—Aside from the loss of his freedom, which I discussed in a previous column, the young men called upon for military training object to having their schooling interrupted or the securing of a job postponed.

The national security training act would answer those objections this way. (a): The trainee gets educational and vocational advantages under UMT which in many cases he would not otherwise have; and (b): He literally earns while he learns

Let me quote from the November issue of the Army Information Digest:

"Each trainee during the first phase (and if he elects to take a second six months) would receive a $30 cash allowance monthly. If he is the chief family support, he would qualify for a dependency allowance which would be paid wholly by the government. This allowance would be $50 a month for one dependent and $65 a month for two or more dependents. During initial training, the trainee would be entitled to benefits of the soldiers' and sailors' civil relief act of 1940 and to the death and disability benefits furnished civilian employees of the government.

Baukhage

As to the educational factor, the report of the sub-committee on education, a division of the UMT civilian advisory committee which visits the Fort Knox experimental unit regularly, set forth the principle that UMT should be so flexible "that a man could return to school or to his civilian occupation without a loss of considerable time; and therefore, it is more advantageous to maintain the six-month period of initial training with a minimum of education than to prolong this period of training and permit inclusion of a comprehensive educational program."

To ensure that the trainee does not lose sight of his life objective, a well-planned counselling program is recommended. It would be conducted by an educational staff including a trained psychologist.

The six-month training period where the accent is on the military is by no means ALL military. Bayonet practice and "dirty fighting" have been eliminated, and out of the entire six months only 880 hours are devoted to actual training, the rest to "processing and orientation." There is a once-a-week lecture on citizenship and morality, and general information is included in the regular troop information period. In Apprentice training in plastics and other vocations are some of the extra duty activities offered by UMT experimental unit at Fort Knox.

the experimental unit at Fort Knox, says the Army Information Digest: "It is not uncommon for the officer of the day, while inspecting a rifle at daily guard mount to ask the trainee: 'Who is the secretary of war?' or 'Who heads our diplomatic mission to Moscow?' "

The relationship between trainer and trainee, according to the Digest, is not that of sergeant and recruit, but rather of instructor and pupil.

Nearly 50 per cent of the men at Fort Knox participate in the off-duty educational program, and some have completed graduation from high school by this route.

According to the Digest report made in June, "the barracks smell" of profanity and obscenity does not exist. Without in any way sacrificing virility, the Digest claims that "a new way of looking at things has been created." Sex has its place in instruction. The trainee gets a healthy understanding of the normal place of sex in raising a family, is taught that the only sure way to avoid venereal disease is continence.

Plenty of entertainment is provided at Fort Knox, including a canteen where soft drinks and snacks are available, but no alcoholic beverages are sold.

So much for the first six months. After that period, there are a number of options which the trainee can exercise. He can remain for an additional six months' training in the national security training corps; he can enlist in the armed services, the national guard, or the enlisted reserve corps with assignment to an organized unit; he can enter one of the service academies; take specialist or technical work at an approved college, or exercise other alternatives.

For those who cannot accept any of the above-named options, there is enlistment in the enlisted reserve corps for six years, with active duty requirements of not more than 30 days a year.

The first experimental unit at Fort Knox has just about completed the second cycle of its training, the first cycle having ended in July.

UMT program centers on a selective schedule of instructive military training.

Since last January, a civilian advisory committee of 34 men and women has served continuously, visiting the unit individually and in groups. They have observed the trainees at work, at play, on leave in and around Louisville.

This committee, by the way, represents a fair cross-section of the parents, educators, religious leaders, newspapermen and public officials whose interest, either personal, professional or patriotic, makes universal training important to them.

This committee says that as a result of this year of training the boys have benefitted by definite spiritual and moral training, self-expression through individual hobbies, training for leadership, and respect for authority and the rights of others, as well as gaining military skills which are taught under "discipline, not regimentation."

As one man from Louisville put it to me: "It's an entirely different thing from ordinary G.I. experiences. The boys themselves are the best witnesses."

NEWS REVIEW

London Meet Dissolves; Inflation Bill Defeated

The lethargic, uninspired ending of the Big Four foreign ministers' conference in London was reminiscent of nothing so much as the rather dreary business of tossing out the Christmas tree after the holidays.

There was a small amount of nostalgia and regret expressed over the abrupt finish of the unsuccessful discussions, but there was also a thinly veiled feeling that perhaps, after all, it was a good thing the affair was over.

As seen dimly through clouds of futility and frustration, what the wind-up of the German and Austrian peace treaty talks amounted to was this: The western powers had failed utterly to reach any kind of agreement with Russia on the fate of Germany, and the failure leaves Europe more firmly divided than at any time since the war ended.

Although the delegates were unable to agree on any single issue on their agenda, the point upon which the conference balloon burst was the problem of German reparations.

To the inevitable question, "What now?" diplomatic authorities were answering with a prediction that the United States, Great Britain and France would begin negotiations soon among themselves concerning the unification of western Germany. Russia would be out of it, and there was no prospect of another four-power meeting in 1948 or in any other year.

CONGRESS: 'Straw Man'

Of the two pressing reasons why President Truman called congress into special session in November, one had been disposed of but the other kept hanging around like an evil spirit as the year drew to a close.

The senate and house had voted strongly in favor of authorizing up to 597 million dollars for emergency winter relief for France, Italy, Austria and China, but no such accord was displayed in dealing with the problem of inflation at home.

Rejecting President Truman's 10-point proposal for fighting inflation by imposing wage and price controls and selective rationing, house Republicans offered an anti-inflation bill based upon voluntary agreements for price reductions.

With a two-thirds vote needed for passage, the Republican measure went down to defeat 202 to 188. The house split almost exactly along party lines over the bill, not one Democrat breaking ranks to vote in favor of it.

"The President has asked for bread and you have given him a stone," said Rep. Brent Spence (Dem., Ky.) in summing up the debate for the Democrats. Rep. A. S. (Mike) Monroney (Dem., Okla.) dusted off another bromide when he charged the GOP majority with "setting up a straw man to combat the menace of inflation."

That was the swan song for any anti-inflation legislation during the special session. Although the senate was preparing to act on the house-killed bill, there appeared to be little likelihood that the Republicans would be able to put through their proposals.

Thrift Plan

Meanwhile, although congress had given its approval to the proposition that interim relief should be rushed to Europe and China, the emergency aid issue continued to send forth echoes.

This time the struggle arose over the actual bill to appropriate the 597 million dollars previously approved by congress. The house appropriations committee, showing the same cutting ways it had exhibited earlier in the year toward budget requests, knocked 88 million dollars off the original figure in preparing the bill for floor action.

Thus, the bill carried only 509 million for winter relief. The appropriations committee, headed by Rep. John Taber (Rep., N. Y.), said the cut was represented by items which would have been used by France and Italy for payment of interest on their foreign debts and for making payments on commercial accounts.

Aroused at the Republican display of economy, Democrats labelled the committee's action as an "undercover" attempt to hamstring the aid program. They served notice that they would attempt to restore the cut.

TRAINING: In Driving

If a training course in automobile driving were made a requirement in the curriculum of every high school traffic deaths could be reduced by 5,000 to 10,000 a year, according to Dr. Wayne Hughes, director of National Safety council's college and school division.

A safety council survey made among Cleveland high schools between 1939 and 1941 showed that effectual driver training reduced traffic accidents by 50 per cent, the council said.

"It is our firm belief that if every high school in the nation would put into effect such a course we would see miracles within five years," Dr. Hughes asserted.

Officials pointed out that statistics for 1946 proved that mile for mile the 15-24 age group was a third more dangerous behind the wheel than any other comparable segment of the population. That group accounted for 33.8 per cent of the nation's fatalities in 1946.

At present only 10 per cent of the 25,000 high schools in the U. S. have what the council regards as adequate driver training courses. And only a part of the schools conducting such courses have actual automobiles in operation.

Guard Strength Up

Members of the U. S. national guard totaled 201,041 on November 30, 1947, a strength larger than that of the prewar national guard in any year except 1940, according to an announcement by Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer.

Projected strength of the national guard on June 30, 1948, is 271,000 men, 250,000 of whom will be in approximately 4,500 army units and 21,000 in 365 air units, he said.

BEAUTIFUL SPRING

Inflation to Burst into Bloom

Where price inflation is concerned there is no such thing as a last word. More words, more gloomy predictions always follow.

Latest verbal foreboding by private and government forecasters holds that next April and May will mark a probable crisis peak in the continuing upward trend of retail and wholesale prices.

Flat predictions that meat and some other food prices are likely to soar as winter ends have been made by political officials and confirmed by government and other economists.

Experts in retail dry goods prices are saying that the shelves emptied by the Christmas buying rush will be restocked with goods that will be priced much higher. The goods were being bought in the garment trade centers at wholesale prices nearly equal to last spring's retail prices.

Another factor boosting the inflation bubble is expected to be the peak in foreign demand for food and other items in Europe scheduled to come as winter bows out.

The construction industry, which hit an all-time high in dollar values as the 1947 season ended, probably will begin the 1948 season under an extraordinarily high demand pressure for building materials.

Another considerable influence is CIO President Philip Murray's recent declaration that unions in his organization will seek another round of wage increases, thus helping to form another price bulge. Pressure for higher wages is expected to build up during the late winter months.

In Washington political leaders of both Democratic and Republican persuasion are giving all these signs serious and concentrated study, and both sides are convinced that something must be done.

It is not considered likely that these indications of further inflation will add up to a nation-wide bust next summer. Their biggest significance is that they make up a package of political dynamite which probably will explode with an earth-shaking impact sometime around the presidential election in November.

Farmers Produce Practically All Margarine Materials

Farmers in all but four of our 48 states—Maine, New Hampshire, Nevada and Rhode Island — now produce practically all the material that goes into our annual production of over six hundred million pounds of margarine.

In 1946, we produced 572,537,990 pounds of margarine in which we used 222,830,000 pounds of cotton seed oil; 206,718,000 pounds of soy bean oil; 13,794,000 pounds of peanut oil and 6,589,000 pounds of corn oil.

In addition to this, margarine contains about 16 per cent cultured pasteurized skim milk, one to one and a half per cent of skim milk solid, three per cent of salt and one per cent vitamins and other ingredients, all of which are produced in the United States.—Adv.

Klemme Man Died At Mason City Convalescent Home

HARRY SMITH PASSED ON FROM PNEUMONIA

Obituary

Harry Smith was born on Illinois, where his father was November 20, 1862 in Freeport, employed by the city as a night watchman.

The parents of Harry Smith, Henry and Martha Smith were natives of the State of Maryland and were of Scotch-Irish extraction. There were eight children in this family, four boys and four girls, and Harry was next to the youngest.

The parents of Harry Smith were members of the Presbyterian Church in Freeport where Harry attended Sunday School.

He attended the public schools at Freeport, and after completing the ninth grade at the age of fifteen, he found employment with a railroad bridge contractor, and for 24 years he had charge of the Pile Driver on this construction crew. During this time he helped build bridges in five states: Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota.

In 1899, at the age of 37 years, Harry Smith came to Klemme. He worked as a farm hand for the following farmers: John F. Hartfelter, Alex Ross and Dave Ross, Will Glanville, Mart Bachman and Art Schoenwetter. He also worked for John Henschen doing cement work.

In March 1926, at the age of 64, Harry Smith and Kate Nissen were married, they were a most congenial couple and enjoyed attending our picture shows. And later, after working as a laboring man for half a century or more Harry sort of retired and spent considerable time fishing.

In 1938, after twelve years of married life, Mrs. Kate Smith died, and since then Harry has continued to live in their little two room house in the south part of town.

Harry was just Irish enough to have a ready wit, he got along well with people because he liked everybody and had a smile for all.

It was the last week in Aug. 1947 that Harry had the misfortune of breaking his hip. And now after four and a half months in Mason City, pneumonia brings his life to a close.

The end came Friday morning, January 9, 1948. He reached the age of 85 years, 1 month and 19 days.

Harry Smith had no children. His wife, his parents and his brothers and sisters all have passed away. None of his brothers and sisters leave any living children.

Thus, when we bury Harry Smith, this branch of the Smith family will be extinct.

Funeral services were held Sunday at 2:30 at the Wellemeyer home with Rev. H. E. Harvey officiating. Interment was made in the Ell township cemetary.

INCOME TAX BASIS MAY BE CHANGED

Farmers Must Apply In Next 90 Days To Change From Cash To Accrual

Farmers wishing to change the basis for figuring their federal income tax next year must apply for the change within the first 90 days of the taxable year, H. B. Howell, farm management specialist at Iowa State College, reminds.

He points out that the change can be from cash to the accrual or from acorual to the cash basis. Permission must be obtained from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, D. C., and proper adjustments made. However, a farmer cannot shift back and forth from year to year.

Computed Differently

The difference in the two, Howell says, is in how the return is computed. A return on a cash basis includes all cash income received and all allowable expenses paid during the year. The time the income was earned or when the expenses were incurred makes no difference. By the accrual basis, a return includes all income earned and all allowable expenses incurred for the taxable year, regardless of whether the income or the expense was cash or credit.

Howell points out that a more complete record must be kept for filing by the accrual method than by the cash basis. The additional records needed include accounts receivable, accounts payable and an inventory, including livestock, grain, hay and other farm products and supplies. Depreciation schedules are handled the same under both methods.

Average About Same

The net farm profit is not the same with the two methods in any one year. However, Howell says that over a period of years it will average about the same. The amount of tax over a period of years will not necessarily be the same. Due to the graduated scale of income tax the method that shows the widest fluctuation in income probably will have the higher tax. He points out that one advantage of the accrual method for many farmers may be to level out their reported income and keep them out of the higher taxable brackets in certain years.

He thinks, however, that a farmer having a relatively constant cash income year to year, will find the cash basis the more satisfactory. On the other hand, livestock producers and other farmers who may sell the production of more than one year during one tax-reporting period may profit by using the accrual basis for figuring returns.

TREAT CATTLE FOR GRUBS WITH SPRAY

Experiments Show That Low Pressure Units Will Do Efficient Job

Iowa farmers can now use low-pressure custom spray rigs to treat their cattle for grubs. This was shown by an experiment conducted last fall by Iowa State College extension entomologist Harold Gunderson.

In the past it was recommended that cattle either be hand-dusted or sprayed with a rig having a 250-pound nozzle pressure. Gunderson found spraying at 75 pounds, a pressure that any of the 500 outfits now operating in Iowa can attain, gave satisfactory results.

Experiment Made

Gunderson, working with Floyd Goodell, Henry County extension director, experimented with three groups of 500-pound Texas calves. One group was dusted with a 1.67 percent rotenone dust. A second group was sprayed with a solution containing 7 pounds of 5 percent rotenone per 100 gallons of water. To this was added 8 pounds of 50 percent DDT wettable for louse control. The third group was given the same mixture plus a wetting agent to help carry the solution down to the grubs. Each calf got 1 gallon of spray at 75 pounds nozzle pressure.

All calves carried from 25 to 30 grubs at the time they were sprayed. When examined three weeks later, the dust treatment had killed about 90 percent of the grubs. The spray containing wetting agent was 85 percent effective and the spray alone gave 75 percent control.

Dusting Good, Too

From his experiment, Gunderson concludes that dusting is entirely practical for the average Iowa cattle feeder having fewer than 100 head to treat. It is not an easy way to control lice, however.

Where high-pressure equipment is available it will probably give better results than low pressure. However, it is better to spray than not to treat at all. A wetting agent should be mixed with the rotenone to aid penetration.

COMMISSION SETS 1948 FISHING SEASONS

The State Conservation Commission, has by administrative order, set the 1948 fish seasons and has made numerous changes in regulations.

Most important to anglers of all the change, has been the removal of length limits of some of the most popular panfish, including crappies, perch, silver and yellow bass, sunfish, bluegills, rock bass, and trout. All of these fish, regardless of size, may be kept by anglers during the coming year.

The daily bag limit and possession limit on bullheads has been removed.

The increasingly imporant and popular channel catfish daily catch limit has been reduced to eight per day from fifteen, with possession limit reduced to 16.

The daily catch limit on walleye and northern pike has been reduced to five, possession limit ten.

The daily bag on trout remains at eight with the new regulation allowing only one day's catch in possession.

The crappie season has been advanced a month, opening, under the new regulation, May15.

The season on smallmouth and largemouth bass, sunfish, bluegills, and rock bass will open this year June 1 instead of June 15, as in the past.

J. A. Chambers of Klemme was re-elected chairman of the Hancock County board of supervisors at the organization meeting.

SHAMROCKS WON DOUBLE HEADER FROM KANAWHA BULLDOGS

Thursday night the Kanawha Bulldogs were hosts to the Klemme Shamrocks in the Klemme gymnasium. The Kanawha high school brought over their fine band and a big crowd of fans. The Kanawha gym is quite small and so the Kanawha school rented the gym here for their game. Gate receipts were over $100 and the Kanawha superintendent and coach were well pleased with the good turnout.

The curtain riser between the Bull pups and the Little Shamrocks turned out to be a stem-winding thriller in the last minutes of play. The Little Shamrocks were trailing 7 points with only a minute to go when they started hitting the net from all over the court and ran the Bullpups into a 19-19 tie at the end of the fourth period, and in the over-time they cashed in with a field goal and a charity shot to win 22 to 19 and to hand the Bullpups their first defeat of the season. Brinkman lead the Little Shamrock barage with 8 points while Josten dumped 3 field goals for 6.

Shamrocks Dump Bulldogs

In the main feature contest the Shamrocks led the Bulldogs all the way: 10-4, 16-14 at the half, 19-15 in the third quarter with the final score 32 to 24.

The second half was a slow affair and 13 minutes went by without either side scoring a field goal. With 3 minutes left to play the Shamrocks found their shooting eye and hit the loop from all angles and soon had the game on ice, winning 32-24.

Grosshuesch hit 10 points for Klemme with Baack and Carolus with 8 each, Montgomery 4 and Schmidt 2. Pruisman led the Bulldog attack with 10 points.

SMALL TOWNS, U.S.A.

Rural America Is on Threshold Of Many Revolutionary Changes

By EARLE HITCH
Released by WNU Features

(Editor's Note. First in a series of articles on the vital problems and opportunities of small town and rural America.)

Almost like clicking a switch, rural America has been snapped into a new age. It is the era of big-scale, scientific agricultural production. Farming is undergoing revolutionary changes. As a consequence there is a shifting and shuffling in rural occupations. The new farming demands fewer workers. But it wants more mechanical skills, more capital and more business brains.

Industry is decentralizing. Branches of big plants are getting away from the congestion of cities. More small shops and mills are springing up in rural environments. This, too, is changing the character of rural employment. As machines displace labor in farming, new rural occupations will have to be created. Otherwise local population losses are inevitable.

Hence the people who live in the country today need, and will have, a new kind of community. The new community must be more than a place for trade It must be the civic center of the whole country roundabout, as much devoted to matters of health, recreation and social good, as to matters of business.

New Outlook Demanded.

To keep pace with these changing conditions, the small towns will have to get new shapes and new outlooks. They will have to adapt to the needs of their particular surroundings. They need re-designing to make their activities suited to the new rural life that is developing.

The country itself is becoming "citified." That is, country people are as style conscious and as socially alert as city people. They have new expectations of their towns. Thus the towns must reconsider their reasons for being. The towns that recognize this will find ways for more community usefulness. Those that act boldly and with imagination are going to be heard from.

These are the conclusions of those who are watching the trends over rural America. That is why the years just ahead promise to be an era of activity in rural community planning.

For the small towns which bestir themselves a bright and larger future is in prospect. Now, for the first time since the automobile and the smooth highway switched trade to the city, the rural communities have a chance to "come back." They need not be content with obsolescence. What they need is to come alive, to shake themselves and take hope.

That's the opinion of leaders in the rural life movement, among whom are Eugene Smathers, who has developed a model plan at Big Lick, Tenn.; Dr. Baker Brownell, who directed the Montana rural study for Rockefeller foundation; O. E. Baker, social scientist of University of Maryland, and Monsignor L. G. Ligutti, secretary of National Catholic Rural Life conference.

Pioneer in Program.

Important pioneering has been done in rural community reorganization. The lead in actually demonstrating what can be done has been taken by the Catholic and Protestant churches, which have established missions for social work in several rural communities, and by the American Friends Service committee, which has community projects in Pennsylvania and South Carolina. Surveys and studies have been made by Rockefeller foundation, by various farm bureau federations, the farmers' union, the national grange, some of the agricultural colleges and the U. S. department of agriculture.

Taken together, these surveys and inquiries show what is needed and practical ways to go about filling the needs.

The inquiries and experiments have confirmed what civic leaders have been maintaining — that there are many ways in which the small community, probably to its own surprise, can provide what growing numbers of people want and cannot find elsewhere. That is, first of all, a pleasant place in which to work and live. The towns which realize this and act on the idea will be in favorable position.

Things most needed over the country generally are better health services, clinics, hospitals, park spaces and swimming pools; new jobs to take the place of those that are being eliminated by farm machinery, and more opportunities for small farming on a family-supporting basis.

Devise New Projects.

Among the practical projects that have been devised are rural homesteads for industrial workers, other types of homesteads for young rural couples wishing to get land and make a start in small farming, new rural industries like seed testing, poultry killing, alfalfa and sweet potato dehydrating, mechanical repairs and upkeep for farm machinery and electrical installations in rural homes, and various cooperative projects, like machinery pools, creameries, canning and other processing enterprises.

To keep the rural economy stabilized and to help the small farm families survive in the competition with big-scale farming, is a national policy to which congress long has been committed, and which is supported by churches, farm federations and political parties.

The farm is the seed bed of the nation, say the population specialists and the rural economists. From the farm come many of the men and women of tomorrow. The cities never have replaced themselves and are not doing so now.

The rural institutions that have been outmoded should have the attention of the whole rural community. Over the country generally, everything from churches to mercantile systems needs overhauling, and there should be considerable education about what a modern rural community should undertake to do for its people.

The idea that the small town has new and important functions should be planted at once in the communities that are determined to catch up with the trends, and should be emphasized by repetition until the citizens are convinced they should do something about it.

Seeing Is Believing.

To get the rural community out of its obsolescence and persuade it to catch up with farming progress, the whole people, youth and adults, must be made to see community deficiencies. They will not see until they are made to take a look. This is going to take tact, persistence and energetic leadership.

To help develop and direct such leadership is one of the objects of the agencies backing the rural life movement. This movement will be described in the next article in this series.

Navy to Close Historic Arms Dump

IONA ISLAND, N. Y. — After 47 years as a prime link in the chain of American sea defense, Iona island, nestled in the scenic land of Rip van Winkle, goes on the shelf. The navy has offered its ammunition dump on the island for rent, preferably for conversion to manufacturing, laboratory or institutional use.

The island's 123 acres do not permit further expansion and modern safety requirements in the handling of high explosives are difficult to maintain here, the navy explained in announcing the rental proposal.

The most stirring chapters in the little islands' history were written during the two world wars, when the ammunition dump provided shells and other weapon fodder for navy vessels, merchant ships, overseas bases and shore stations.

"World Varieties" Smash Hit in 1947

Atom, U. N., Flying Disks, 'Hamlet' Fill Passing Year

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

FLORIDA, 1947-1948.—The last pink blush of the setting sun has faded from the Indian river. The palm fronds are quiet and only the plaintive peep of the last wakeful bird can be heard over the whisper of the waters.

A year has begun, but only the baby owlets realize that something is different. Life has begun for their generation as it begins each winter almost precisely at this day and hour.

I'm looking through my diary.

Baukhage

New Year's Day — Little news, but down the street the church bells ring and for some reason I go to the bookcase and pick up "Pilgrim's Progress." Weave a long quotation into my broadcast and very glad I did—so many people liked it. Back through heavy snow to dinner.

January 6 — Here is a red card with the seal of the United States on it: "House of Representatives, admit bearer to Radio Gallery." A new, Republican - dominated congress, the first in 14 years. The new "ins" riding high. The "outs" pretty gloomy. The Gallup poll showed Truman at his low point. (The crowd to hear the President's message is no bigger than the one which jammed the senate to see Senator Bilbo barred.) Cowboy Glen Taylor of Idaho, however, stole the Republican show. A difficult broadcast. It looks strange, indeed, to see Joe Martin and Senator Vandenberg sitting there presiding with Truman below them at the speaker's desk.

January 7 — Had a birthday but didn't record anything. It couldn't have been important.

January 16 — Press conference at the Polish embassy. (What a change since I broadcast from the drawing room in the days when Hitler began to show his claws.) Now the Soviets have what Hitler took. Nobody believed a word of what the charge d'affaire said as he insisted on the purity of the government's pre-election activities.

Invited to tea for Otto (Hapsburg) of Austria. Couldn't make it. (How are the mighty fallen.)

January 30 — Broadcast from Roosevelt's bedroom at Hyde Park. Just as he left it. Bedroom slippers, dressing gown, the last magazines that he looked at before he left for Warm Springs, Fala's dog biscuit.

January 31 — Broadcast from Poughkeepsie. It's centenary of Smith Brothers' cough drops — all the employees wearing beards.

February 7—Palestine is boiling.

February 15 — Took Elizabeth (godchild) through White House.

February 19 — Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Palmer (pastor of my parents' church, First Presbyterian of Lockport, N. Y.) called.

February 20 — Heaviest snowfall of year begins. Attlee announces India to be freed.

February 27 — Baby senators' dinner. Commentators as "pitchers" grill freshmen senators "up to bat" at Press club. I had Flanders of Vermont, McCarthy of Wisconsin and Robertson of Virginia.

March 12—Broadcast from house radio gallery again. President's message on aid for Greece and Turkey. Announces "Truman doctrine." Presidential party departs in Sacred Cow. Nat (Nathaniel Peffer, professor of foreign affairs, Columbia university) addresses forum: "Get out of China—Chiang is a crook."

Late in March—A southern journey. Daytona Beach, Pensacola, filled with vague memories of my grandmother's stories of her pre-Civil war days here. Lunch aboard the carrier Saipan. Birmingham, Anniston — southern hospitality and sympathetic audiences.

April 9 — Back in Washington. Saw Maurice Evans in "Hamlet." Very modern. Gravediggers' scene omitted, Ophelia finds her flowers pressed in a book. However, I liked it.

April 28 — Farmers don't hate daylight savings time any more than I do. Washington on regular time, we get up an hour earlier. As hard for me as it is for a cow to change habits.

April 29 — Poor Richard club of Philadelphia gives me their "citation of merit." Had a very jolly luncheon. Wally sits next to me (Wallgren, cartoonist of the Stars and Stripes). Later the United Businessmen's association gave me a public service shield.

May Day — Mexico's President Aleman addresses joint session of congress. Later we meet him for cocktails and an interview at the decorous Blair house, state department's guest residence for VIPs. Terrific crowd, heat, the poor President nearly pushed into the garden. "Viva Mexico, viva Estado Unidos!"

May 16 — Called on Dr. Loudon, Netherlands ambassador. He tells me he is leaving. It's not often you establish pleasant friendships with officials whom you may know very well professionally and socially. Dr. Loudon was an exception. Hate to see him go.

May 20—Boys back from foreign ministers' conference in Moscow. Baltimore Sun's Paul Ward and Washington Post's Ferdinand Kuhn addressed the overseas writers off-the-record. What they said confirmed other off-the-record conferences with high officials. Not much hope for Russian-American amity.

Couldn't Get Maple Sugar

May 21 — Hear violent argument "Vermont maple sugar is better than Ohio maple sugar. . . ." Affirmative: Presidential Secretary William Hassett of Vermont. Negative: Dr. Louis Tuckerman, bureau of standards, nuclear physicist of Ohio. Later broadcast my willingness to judge if given samples.

June 5 — Secretary of State Marshall, at Harvard, outlines ideas on European recovery.

June 11 — Dinner and forum. Dr. Chisholm, Canadian minister of health, gave a splendid talk. He believes it will take a lot of education to change human beings from "the kind of people who go to war every 25 years." Still no samples.

July 8 — The air is full of flying saucers. So are the airwaves and the newspapers. Typical mass illusion.

July 25 — Off for a week in New York state and Vermont. Showed my wife scenes of my hiking days. Climbed Mount Mansfield again (on a ski lift). (Maple syrup, $10 a gallon.)

August 2 — Back to tropical Washington. Re-stocked office aquarium with guppies, black mollies, zebras, angel-fish and jumbo snails.

August 11—Preview of film "The Roosevelt Story." Good historical documentary, but commentary quite out of tune, for those who lived through most of it.

August 19 — Tragedy — angel-fish succumbs and is eaten almost alive by the predatory, if sanitary, snails.

August 20 — Bill Benton, director of state department's "Voice of America" program, calls us in for criticism. He has a rather impressive factual report on its effectiveness.

September 16 — Back in the ABC broadcasting booth at the United Nations in Flushing, N. Y., to watch the general assembly re-convene. Too busy to make any diary entries from now on.

September 27 — Returning to Washington. Progress at the assembly seems to be caught in the "njets," but there is a will to peace there which will hold the organization together to the last ditch.

October 14 — Interview with Stassen.

In huddle with state department's second-level experts. Marshall plan by no means ready. Paid for my own lunch.

October 28 — Folks in Upper Darby, Pa., seem less interested in the '48 presidential campaign than in the international situation.

November 10 — Folks in Oak Park, Ill., seem more interested in the '48 presidential campaign than in the international situation.

November 16—MC'd "Decade of Destiny" program on Richmond News Leader's WRNL station for their 10th anniversary. Smithfield ham and more Virginia hospitality.

November 17 — Extra session of congress opens. President's European aid and domestic anti-inflation message received with polite but restrained enthusiasm by the majority party.

Delivered a learned discourse: "Journalism: Its Cause and Cure."

December 7 — Television interview with Senator Flanders of Vermont and Senator Lucas of Illinois on inflation. We didn't do much to bring down prices, but our temperatures rose slightly under the kliegs.

December 12—Off to Florida.

BOTTLE BABIES . . . Porkey and Jacob Werner of Baltimore, Md., must drink 17 gallons of water a day between them in order to go on living. They are victims of a rare kidney ailment that brings about body dehydration. Seventeen gallons of water weighs about 142 pounds; combined weight of the children is 54 pounds.

NEWS REVIEW

Panama Bases Denied; List Grain Speculators

Unanimous rejection by Panama's national assembly of a treaty which would have given the U. S. the right to lease and man 14 military and airfield sites to defend the Panama canal not only precipitated a diplomatic disaster but also left this nation in the position of a fighter without a left hand to guard his jaw.

The action, strongly opposed by Panama's President Jiminez, left the U. S. with just one alternative—to pull out—since commitments had been given that no American troops would remain in Panamanian territory without sanction of an authorized treaty.

Military officials later announced that the withdrawal of some 2,000 U. S. soldiers from the 14 bases surrounding the canal would be begun immediately. That meant, probably, that the troops would be pulled into the canal zone proper, which the U. S. leases from Panama.

This was, by all odds, the most crucial issue to arise in U. S.-Panama relations since this country purchased the canal from France in 1904. And it was aggravated by the fact that the inability to man defense bases around the canal left this most vital point in American military security dangerously exposed.

Rep. Albert Engel (Rep., Mich.), chairman of the house appropriations subcommittee on defense, stated his belief that the national assembly's 51 to 0 vote against the treaty was influenced at least in part by the Communist movement in Panama; and he suggested that the U. S. build a new Atlantic-Pacific canal outside Panama if that nation continued to refuse use of bases.

There did not appear to be much chance of further negotiations, however; the assembly's rejection of the pact probably closed the door on that course. Some officials were speculating on whether the problem might not wind up in the lap of the United Nations for solution.

SERIAL: Grain Opera

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, at the behest of the senate appropriations committee investigating commodity speculation on the part of government officials, came through with the first installment of the "names" he had promised to name.

There were 711 of them — big traders in grain and other commodities. But except for the name of the man who precipitated the investigation, Edwin W. Pauley, presidential advisor and special assistant to Army Secretary Kenneth Royall, there were no spectacular disclosures on the list.

While there is no law against speculation, the current investigations ordered by congress stem from reports that government officials have profited from "inside" information on government commodity buying plans.

Anderson's 711-name list was the first installment in a series which the agriculture secretary will forward to the senate appropriations committee, simultaneously making each list public. An estimated 14,000 names are available for such listing.

Meanwhile the senate appropriations committee, as well as a house committee, were ready to start sifting the rolls for possible irregularities and especially for leaks of inside information.

WARNING: On Prices

The President's council of economic advisers, an astute group that sometimes functions as Mr. Truman's conscience, has warned that the U. S. must return to "real price competition" if the present boom period is not to collapse into a shapeless economic mess.

In its annual report the council sharply criticized "monopolistic practices" and declared also that:

"Many industrial prices must come down at least in relation to other prices and many rates of profit must subside while reasonable profitability is established in other areas."

The report surmised that the present era of prosperity was "abnormal" because of such factors as heavy exports, short crops and great military expenditures. To remedy the situation the council offered these recommendations:

1. Elimination of deliberate curtailment of output as practiced by some labor organizations.

2. Discontinuance of the practice of big business of hampering the development of new, small businesses.

3. Development of natural resources and increase in the industrial facilities of the nation.

Search for Researchers

One of the adverse factors developing to hamper the nation's post-war program of scientific progress is a critical scarcity of scientists in certain branches of military research, government officials have revealed.

They discount, however, statements that an aversion on the part of scientists to working on death-dealing weapons is the primary cause of the shortage.

Economic factors and a scholar's normal desire for complete freedom in study, rather than any anti-military philosophy, keep many of them away from government work, officials of the military and the atomic energy commission observed.

Greatest shortage is in certain key personnel, it was disclosed. The need was stressed for scientist-administrators who are capable of organizing and directing large research projects of the type the government is sponsoring. Long-range planning is being directed at correcting the situation.

WHAT CAR DO YOU LIKE?

'48 Auto Is Child of Evolution

That sleek, snake-hipped automotive beauty that you probably are on a waiting list for is a shiny example of the "survival of the fittest" principle operating in the industrial world.

It is the evolutionary descendant of 2,200 different makes of cars which have appeared on the market in this country alone during the 55 years since the first gasoline-powered automobile drilled down the pike.

Of those 2,200 different manufacturers who introduced their products into the American scene, only 21 today continue in actual production of passenger cars in the U S Nevertheless, this year's models owe much to these enterprising manufacturers who failed to survive. Many of them, in the true evolutionary spirit, added something new that was incorporated into the cars we drive today.

High on the list of major engineering contributions by companies no longer in production, according to the Automobile Manufacturers association's data, is the steering column control introduced by Pierce in 1904.

Brush brought out a car in 1907 with coil springs, and in 1909 Hupmobile caught automotive engineers by surprise with its single unit power plant — engine, clutch and transmission.

The center gear shift control by King in 1910 caused a sensation unequalled in the motoring public's eye until Pierce-Arrow put headlights in the fenders in 1914. And the Dusenberg's four-wheel hydraulic brakes of 1920 were little short of revolutionary.

When Eddie Rickenbacker brought out the Rickenbacker car in 1922 he added the aircleaner to automotive equipment. The Franklin contributed the covered running board to the automobilist with the "Pirate Phaeton" in 1933.

Although all of these companies have disappeared from the field, the engineering discoveries they sponsored live on after them, and some of the refinements offered today are based upon improvements which were displayed in bold type in catalogues published around the turn of the century.

Don't Forget Salads in Winter Meals

Cold Weather Salads

Just because you don't have a garden full of green things outside your window is no reason for you to neglect salads in cool weather meals. Actually there's an abundance of material on the market for refreshing and delightful salads.

We like to recommend salads because they add texture and contrast to the meal, but most important of all, because many fresh and uncooked foods may be combined into them. And why is it so important to have fresh things? Because the vitamin and mineral riches are not cooked out of them, and we need them more than ever in winter.

You can add bits of meat and cheese to vegetable salads and serve them with a piping hot cup of soup, and your lunch, for example, will be complete and well balanced.

Luncheon Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

cup green beans, cooked or canned cup carrot strips, cooked cup celery strips cup french dressing
ard-cooked eggs
ead of lettuce
p ham, cut in strips

Marinate green beans, carrots and celery for one hour. Slice hard-cooked eggs on bed of lettuce with vegetables. Sprinkle with slivers of ham and serve.

Sauerkraut and Beet Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

ackage lemon-flavored gelatin cup cold water
ps sauerkraut, chopped
p beets, cooked and cubed

Soak gelatin in cold water. Drain sauerkraut and save juice. Add enough water to make 1½ cups. Heat and add to dissolved gelatin. Add sauerkraut and beets. Pour into molds rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm and unmold on salad greens. Serve with mayonnaise.

Mixed Vegetable Salad.
(Serves 6 to 8)

cup cooked peas cup cauliflowerets, cooked cup green beans, cooked
cup french dressing
o 8 lettuce cups
teaspoons anchovies

Marinate vegetables in french dressing. Toss in anchovies and mix gently. Fill lettuce cups and garnish with radishes and spinach leaves, if desired.

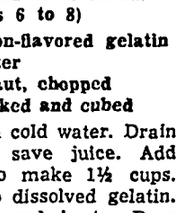
There are other vegetable salad combinations you'll find handy for future reference these days:

Shredded carrots, chopped celery, diced apples and preserved ginger.

Grated carrots, diced celery, cooked lima beans and a dash of lemon juice.

Cabbage, celery and green stuffed olives.

Green beans, cooked, with diced hard-cooked eggs and strips of pimiento.



Lima beans, cooked and marinated, serve with tomato slices.

Shredded cabbage, apples and raisins.

Or fruit salad combinations for winter that are as exciting and colorful as the array of vegetables. Start off combining shrimp with apples for a nice luncheon dish:

Shrimp-Apple Salad.
(Serves 6)

2 hard-cooked eggs
1 can shrimp, cleaned
2 tart apples, diced

SAYS:
Vitamin Values These Tips

In cooking vegetables, cook quickly, cover tightly, use little water and then serve immediately. Never let cheese get too moist during storage or it will become moldy. Never cook it too rapidly or it will become stringy.

Refrigerate and cover foods in storage if you have milk to prevent drying, vitamin loss and the odors arising from other foods.

Fats should be heated carefully, avoiding smoking. Smoked fats lose food value as well as tending to become rancid more readily.

Milk should be purchased according to each days needs. Store it immediately, never letting it stand in the sun, as this will destroy the vitamins.

Buy flour, bread and cereals that have been enriched. This means that some of the vitamins and minerals lost in the milling or refining have been restored.

Marshall Plan for South

WASHINGTON.—The need for a Marshall plan for our own southern states has been recommended in a shockingly frank report prepared for the house agriculture committee. Written by a group of southern economists, in cooperation with experts from the agriculture, commerce, labor and interior departments, it recommends that 27.4 billion dollars be advanced to get the South on its economic feet.

In rather blunt terms the report sets forth the evils that make the South what it calls the nation's poorhouse. To cure them, it urges a revolutionary eight-point program.

Underlying cause of southern poverty, the report states, is the rutted agrarian system. An overbalance of manpower is struggling without adequate tools to wrest a living from mediocre soils, which are highly erosive and badly damaged by past cultivation. Added to this is the prolific population on southern farms. The reproduction rate is 80 per cent higher than needed to replace itself.

"Until non-farm alternatives can be found for a part of the present farm working force and for all the net increase in farm population," declares the house agriculture committee report, "there can be no lasting improvement in the productivity and in earned incomes of southern farm people."

These old agrarian problems, however, are overshadowed by a spectacular new force—farm mechanization. Revolutionary new tools, such as the mechanical cotton picker, flame weeder and improved tractors, are expected to displace 2,150,000 southern farm workers by 1965.

Program for Future

At the request of President Truman, the council of economic advisers is drawing up the following things:

1. A long-range study of the prospects for continued prosperity.

2. A program for the increase of social security.

3. Stabilized wages and price controls to guarantee the continued productivity of American agriculture.

When these studies are completed, the White House will send them to congress.

New Reclamation Formula

Washington's hard-driving Sen. Harry Cain is working on a revolutionary new scheme for financing reclamation projects, a plan that he claims will settle a half-dozen questions at one time. His idea is to issue federal revenue bonds to the general public, then pay off these loans from power and irrigation profits.

Under the present system, Cain argues, the reclamation bureau must show that its projects will be self-liquidating anyhow. On the other hand, Senator Cain claims that his bill will:

1. Eliminate the annual squabble over reclamation appropriations and reduce the drain on the budget; 2. Permit the harassed reclamation bureau to plan more than a year ahead; 3. Stir up public interest in reclamation by the public's sharing in the financing; 4. Serve as an anti-inflation measure by drawing off large amounts of surplus money.

Library of congress researchers already have gone over the plan with a fine-tooth comb, and have reported favorably to the senator.

Hoof-and-Mouth Menace

President Truman heard some blunt warnings about hoof-and-mouth disease from Mexico when he conferred with Albert Goss of the National Grange, C. E. Weymouth of the Texas Cattle Raisers association, and Charles W. Holman, secretary of the Milk Producers federation, and a group of cattle spokesmen.

The cattlemen warned Mr. Truman that they didn't think the secret treaty now being negotiated with Mexico would work out either to the benefit of the United States or Mexico. Additional steps, not embraced by the proposed treaty, will have to be taken to stamp out the dread disease.

One necessary step, they said, was the appointment of an administrator who would work in liaison with the Mexican government and have full authority to make commitments for the United States. Such an administrator would report directly to the President, but would operate in unison with the state, agriculture and other agencies.

Goss and his colleagues urged "planned eradication" of infected Mexican cattle as another step. Cattle vaccinations, now being tried in many parts of Mexico, will delay the spread of hoof-and-mouth disease, but will not stamp it out, the cattlemen emphasized.

"Planned eradication," incidentally, is one phase of the treaty now being negotiated.

SCRIPTURE: John 4.5-26; Romans 8:12-17, 31-39.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 103.

Our Relationship to God

Lesson for January 18, 1948

THE Scripture lesson for Sunday is John 4:5-26 and Romans 8:12-17 and 31-39, with the 103rd Psalm as the devotional reading.

Dr. Newton

The passage in John presents the dramatic story of Jesus meeting with the woman from Sychar at Jacob's well, and of her discovery of the Water of Life.

There is no more convincing evidence anywhere in the Bible of Jesus as the one and only approach to God. He is the Door through which one must pass into the Kingdom, whether bond or free, rich or poor, ignorant or learned, high or low. "I am the truth and the life and the way."

Jesus Teaches About God

IN THIS great story we see Jesus, wearied from the day's arduous tasks, sitting on the curb of Jacob's well, resting. The disciples had gone across the valley to the village to buy food. The woman comes to draw water from the historic well. She did not notice Jesus until he spoke to her. He is never too busy, never too weary, to seek to bring all men to a knowledge of God's love.

He asked for a drink of water. That was his way of making contact with her. She drew back, wondering why a Jew would speak to a woman in public. But Jesus got past the immediate wall which she threw up between herself and him, and soon was teaching her the way of everlasting life, to which she responded with gratitude.

How We Worship God

READ John 4:5-26 and see how Jesus led the woman of Sychar to understand true worship. Strangely enough, she knew a good deal about Jewish rites and ceremonies, but she had never known the basic truth that "God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

Included in the record of how Jesus taught the woman to worship was the necessity of confessing her sin, having five husbands, and living at the moment with still another man. We cannot worship God if there is unconfessed sin in our hearts.

We often miss the joy of true worship because we fail to confess our sins. God looketh upon the heart. If there is sin in our hearts, it must be forgiven.

Our Need of God

"IF YE live after the flesh, ye shall die," Romans 8:13. Here is a solemn truth that many seem to forget — apart from God we are dead. The young person who undertakes to live with eating food will soon discover that his body is wasting away and his mind is broken and dissipated. Just so with the spirit of man. We are spiritual creatures, made in the image of God. If we live by the flesh, we die spiritually.

In the preceding chapters in Romans, Paul has shown how sin worketh death. He sets forth the penalties that result from carnal thinking and behavior. But in the 16th verse he comes on to say:

"It is the Spirit himself bearing witness with our spirit that we are the sons of God, or children of God," Romans 8:16.

Strong in the Lord

OUR age has made much of might — might that expresses itself in speed. We think in terms of atomic power. This lesson would help us to understand that we may be strong in the Lord. All power is with him. "All power hath been given me in heaven and on earth," said Jesus.

And this leads us to the climax of Sunday's lesson, when Paul declares:

"For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord," Romans 8:38, 39.

Satan had the woman of Sychar completely in his power until the grace of God lifted her feet upon the Rock of Ages. She could then stand in the midst of the people of Sychar and declare that she had met One who had released her from the bondage of sin. That is what will happen in every heart that comes to God through Jesus Christ.

Bay Colony Law Still Bars Rhode Islanders

One of the oldest and most unusual laws in this country has been on the books of Massachusetts since 1636. It was passed after the Bay Colony had banished Roger Williams for his religious views and he and a few of his followers had founded the first settlement in Rhode Island. Still unrepealed, the statute imposes the death penalty on any Rhode Islander caught in Massachusetts.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To The People Of Hancock County

If you have not already received a letter from the infantile paralysis committee, you will in a short time, asking for your donation to the fund for Hancock County.

Last year this was done and you people all gave a very good showing. But now we find that with added costs and the extra money that is needed, we will be forced to set our quota at

$5,000.00

This means that we must nearly double the amount asked last year and we know you will help us to do this.

Last year our collections came to a little over $2,500.00 and we sent $1,250.00 to the National Foundation. We paid every bill that was sent to us in Hancock County for cases of Polio.

National headquarters have advised us that they must raise a minimum of $30,000,000.00, to meet all obligations in caring for the staggering case load of patients now undergoing treatments for residual paralysis and to prepare for adequate emergency aid in the event of another violent outbreak of the disease in 1948.

The money sent to the National Foundaion is kept with the other funds and in case Hancock County has an epidemic amounting to more than we have on hand they stand ready to meet any amount we may ask for.

You as a citizen of Hancock County can feel assured that in case this dread disease hits your family that you need not worry about the cost. Is this not the cheapest insurance that you could possibly have? Is it not a big load off your mind in case we do have a lot of cases hit in this territory?

We hope that Hancock County escapes this dreaded disease this year, but we never know and must, therefore build our reserve for the future.

The job is a big one and when you receive your letter, do not lay it aside, open it and put in your donation, make it as large as you feel you possibly can. No postage required on return letters.

We will have collection cards in the several towns. We will run a film in every theatre. They will take collections at that time. In fact we are doing everything possible to bring to the minds of our people that we must raise a large fund to do this enormous task.

THE DRIVE BEGINS JANUARY 15

Won't you give some child or even an adult a chance to walk by contributing generously?

OUTLOOK NOT GOOD FOR NEW FARM MACHINERY

The old farm tractor may have to be coaxed into grinding out another year's work. That is what agricultural engineers say after looking at the 1948 prospects for new farm implements.

From most indications, the supply will still be too far behind demand, they say. Meeting home and overseas food commitments requires machinery. Too, the backlog demand built up during the war and the extra demand created by farmers with cash in the bank still hasn't been met.

If you can get it, even with present high prices, machinery is a good buy, say the engineers. Although 1946 machinery prices were 38 percent above 1935-39 averages, farm wage rates have risen six times that much. On a bushel-of-corn basis, 700 bushels of corn will buy a 3-plow tractor. Farmers spent twice as much for machinery last year as they averaged yearly between 1935 and 1939. Yet, last year's investment represented only 5 percent of their net income as compared with 7 to 8 percent the other years.

Details of the Marshal Plan will be another factor in determining next year's machinery supplies. European nations are asking for over $1 billion worth of new farm machines, and the State Department is now thinking in terms of $600 million worth. Machinery supplies will be short here if the government comes anywhere near meeting European demands.

Another uncertainty is the availability of steel. Work stoppages are another. Automotive and farm equipment say they will ask for pay increases this spring. Any strike affecting steel production would directly affect the output of new farm machines.

The farm machinery men see one glimmer in the picture, however. That is the weakening in used machinery values throughout the state at farm and community auctions. Used tractors which sold for $1,500 to $2,000 a year ago now sell for around $1,000—quality being the same—which hints at a possible lessening demand.

The college engineers recommend giving the tractor a check, and if repairs are needed, order them now. Repairs may be harder to get next spring.

A group of hunters from Cherokee county staged a successful fox hunt there recently, bagging five and wounding a sixth in one afternoon.

Poems are the chief interest in Literature now. Mrs. Harvey is a great poem lover, but is having quite a time getting the seniors to love it.

In history we are studying the slave problems of the 17th and 18th centuries. While Algebra finds us studying logarithms.

A few members of the class are still working on the practice sets in Bookkeeping. The rest of us are studying for uor semester tests which will probably be a "doozer."

Tuesday afternoon we all enjoyed an hour of good music. Mr. Wood sang several familiar, humorous, and negro folk songs. He also favored us with a few poems. His accompianist was his wife.

Some of the boys certainly have some flashy ties as one can plainly see when they walk into the classroom. Keep it up guys it looks nice!

CONTINUE WAR ON TS IN COLD WEATHER

weather offers no excuse lling an armistice in the gainst rats, says Harold rson, entomologist at Iowa College.

points out that it is par- ly important this time of o get rid of rats in baby brooder houses and pig ing sheds. Both type gs should be carefully ofed to minimize chances ses. Doors should be fix- they will self-close, door covered with tin, and re cloth or galvanized g put on floors and low- er walls.

Old junk piles, heaps of old boards, empty oil barrels and other refuse—all rat harbors—can be cleaned up even though winter is here. Now is also a good time to scatter old stack bottoms, another rat hidout.

Among the latest recruits in Gunderson's rat-killing campaign are 4-H boys over the state. A complete program of rat control for 4-H clubs has been mapped out with a goal set for every boy to make one farm rat free. If this is achieved, more than 12,000 farms will be rid of rats.

Gunderson points out that poisoning rats can be affective during cold weather if the right bait is used. He suggests mixing poison with cereal to make a semi-dry bait during below freezing weather.

Gas can be used where it can be confined in burrows or under tight doors. It won't work in an open corn crib. Gunderson says carbon monoxide from the exhaust of an automobile is the most effective gas to use in cold weather. Calcium cyanide isn't so effective under cold conditions. He cautions that gas is dangerous to all animals and to the man who does the gassing.

HOUSING POULTRY BETTER DOES PAY

Tests Show That Well-Housed Flocks Lay More Eggs, Need Less Feed

Iowa poultrymen find that outwitting old man winter with better housing and insulation pays off in higher income as well as assurance of continued success in the egg producing business.

W. R. Whitfield, extension poultryman at Iowa State College, has evidence of this in results of 2 years of study under the Record Demonstration Flock program. The results compare the achievements of 23 producers who have insulated their poultry houses in order to maintain temperatures above freezing during winter months with 21 flock owner who had no adequate temperature control.

More Eggs

Flocks having an insulated house laid 187 eggs per bird during the year while those in the poorer houses laid 171 eggs, a difference of 16 eggs. The extra production gave a higher income per bird, amounting to $1.84 above expenses, as compared with $1.15 labor income in the poorer housed flocks. means that investment in improving the laying house returned 69 cents more per bird.

Birds housed in warmer, insulated buildings required less feed than flocks in cold houses. Well-housed hens at only 6½ pounds of feed to produce a dozen eggs while the other hens took 7½ pounds.

Profitable Investment

Whitefield points out that although the flocks having good houses required slightly greater investments ($3.01 for insulated houses as against $2.65 for those non-insulated), their added performance more than paid for the additional investment. Figuring 50 cents an hour for the time spent by the flock owner, the larger investment insulation returned 27 percent. Only 14 percent was returned on the investment in poor houses.

Whitfield says a yearly average of five extra eggs per bird will pay the cost of good housing even when new buildings are built with high-priced lumber. Remodeling of houses will cost far less than building a new laying house, he points out. He figures that good housing costs annually around 15 cents per bird.

SHOULD DO HOME BUTCHERING SOON

Curing meat on the farm is easy but a few pointers need to be kept in mind for good results, says Buford McClurg, Iowa State College meat specialist.

He believes that some farmers butcher too late in the year. In order to give the meat time to cure while the weather is still cool, butchering should be done before or during the third week in January. If the curing is not completed in cold weather, sour hams and spoiled meat may result.

Good Animals

The first step to insure good results in home curing meat is to select a good healthy animal. Then make a good stick so it will bleed promptly and completely. Meat from improperly bled animals will not keep well.

Completely chill the carcass quickly without freezing it, McClurg says. The best procedure is to hang the carcass over night in a place sheltered from the wind and cut it up the next day when the meat is cold. Cold meat cuts more easily. It is important, he says, to carefully trim rough edges or tag ends from the pieces. They get too salty and are unpalatable.

Temperature

The ideal temperature to cure meat is from 36 to 38 degrees F. There is danger of hams souring if the temperature gets above 40 degrees. The often-used furnace room is too warm for the job. McCurg says that it is better to keep meat too cold than too warm for at least it won't spoil then.

A simple but satisfactory curing mixture for 100 pounds of meat is 8 pounds of salt, 3 pounds of sugar and 3 ounces of saltpeter.

Curing time depends on the cut and the size of piece. Bacon takes 1½ days per pound (15 days for 10 pounds of belly). Picnics and hams require two days per pound (30 days for a 15-pound). For every day the temperature drops below freezing, add 1 day to curing time.

WAGES FOR FARM LABOR ARE RISING

Industrial Jobs and Farming On Their Own Taking Many Workers

Farm labor wages are showing an upward trend as farmers near the end of their heavy seasonal work and begin looking for year-round help for next season, Iowa Emergency Farm Labor summary figures indicate.

Daily wages, without board, averaged $7 for November, a rise of $1 over October, John Fitzsimmons, who has been the state farm labor supervisor at Iowa State College, reports. The number of workers ordered by farmers was 547 for November, which was more than in Oct.

Need Steady Men

If this demand trend continues we can expect to go into the first of the year with more farmer orders than were on file last January, Fitzsimmons believes. Seasonal help requests, while still strong in November, will taper off, past records show, as farmers begin looking for steady hired men to work on the farm for 5 months or more.

Orders for these dependable year-round workers, either the married or single, will be harder to fill in coming months, Fitzsimmons thinks. He points out that placements of this type have already started to fall behind requests. Good paying city jobs and the desire of the young men to farm for themselves are mainly blamed for this growing scarcity.

Peak In Summer

Past records show that, in general, worker requests move upward from a January low to a high in March, then drop off slightly during the spring. Demands again build up with the coming summer and hit their yearly peak in July and Aug.

The Emergency Farm Labor Program, conducted by the Extension Service in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, terminates Dec. 31. The Iowa State Employment Service will resume recruitment and placement responsibilities.

AROUND IOWA

When a cache of files, hacksaws blades, knives and keys was found in Wapsipinicon state park in Anamosa last week, residents of that city were puzzled. Investigation revealed that the hidden "gte-away" tools had been planted, not by persons contemplating on assault upon the reformatory, but by one of the guards. The files and saw blades had been rounded up from inmates of the reformatory in a "spring housecleaning."

SHOT IT UP

Some boys in a car "shot up" the school house in District No. 2 near Woden recently. School was in session but fortunately no one was hit by the two shots, one of which destroyed the light meter. The miscreants were in an automobile and made good their escape.

LOST LEG

An accidental shot gun wound cost Charles Cook, 15, of Diagonal, his left leg recently. The accident had occurred during a hunting trip, the full charge stricking Charles just below the knee. Amputation was necessary.

HIT BY BUS

Some years ago, the late John Renfro of New Market was struck and killed by an automobile. During the Christmas holidays, his daughter, Melba, now a resident of Tacoma, was struck by a bus in that city and died the following morning.

OUT OF GAS

When he ran out of gas, Don Patterson of St. Joseph landed in a pasture west of Northwood recently. After refueling, he and some helpful farmers spent three hours clearing a runway but was unable to take off with his passengers, his wife and 2 children. Eventually he took off alone, landed at a filling station on a nearby highway and his family joined him by automobile. With traffic held up temporarily, a successful take-off was made. It was the second, time this streath of pavement had been used as a landing field, two army planes doing so during the war.

Who Are We, Anyway?

Subject came up at Bill Webster's, the other day, as we were chatting over beer and pretzels. Just who are the folks who make up our town? Where'd they come from?

Well, Doc Hollister's Scotch-English ancestry; Will Dudley's folks were mining stock from Pennsylvania; Skip Powell's family were brewers back in Holland.

Guess our bloodstream's got a bit of every country of the globe—and every section of America. We've still got differences in taste and background—whether they apply to music, history, or beer. Only those differences don't matter—because we're self-respecting people, in a free, united land.

And from where I sit, that's what makes our towns and cities—our America—so strong, progressive, tolerant. Our championship of individual liberties has brought us people from all faiths, all lands—to prove that respect for one another's rights is the greatest bond humanity can know!

'NO BLANKS, FOLKS!'

"It's a gift!" This is the theme song of business promotion. The something-for-nothing urge has the country by the neck, but not much farther up. People no longer greet one another with "How are you?" The query is "What have you won lately?"

We are supposed to be a country opposed to gambling. Our lawbooks are full of statutes against it. We arrest crap shooters and bookies. Our self righteousness is such that the idea of a national lottery to get us off the hook makes us sprout wings all over. But everybody and his neighbor are taking chances on super prizes.

"To the $35,000 in awards we now add a silver trailer, a streamliner train and three years on the Riviera," bawls a voice on the radio. You twist it slightly and get "Right! The first name of the President is Harry. And, Mrs. Clabby, you get a sedan, the houseboat, the six floors of furniture and $5,000 in cash."

For naming a calf, giving a slogan in an eat-more-walnuts campaign or stating in 30 words why you think powder makes a better footease than carpet tacks you can make the upper brackets and live in luxury.

Our highways have a new traffic jam caused by 10-ton trucks delivering portable bungalows, ice-boxes, television sets, steam pianos, rare tapestries, gold-plated dishwashers and rocket planes to people who have saved the necessary boxtops to get shoulder-deep in a gamble in which the chances are 1,000 to 1 that their letter won't even be reached.

And here's the laugh. Cheering the trucks as they fly past is that sterling character, Jasper Poots, the arch enemy of pinball machines as a bad influence on the young. And in every contest you will find Minerva Gunch, chairlady of the Committee Opposed to Turkey Raffles, Slot Machines and Pinochle for Money.

No wonder our people don't work as hard as they used to. It isn't raining raindrops, it is raining cash, commodities and miscellaneous luxuries.

Down the Pike With Ike

John Orr Young, well-known advertising man, has started an advertising campaign for Eisenhower for the presidency. It will take, we assume, some slogans. How about these?

1—Give Up the Uneasy Moment for the Eisenhower!

2—Choose Your President for the Love of Ike!

3—Down the Pike With Fighting Ike!

4—He Came Through When Things Were Worse.

5—The White House Needs a Fighting Front.

6—To Attain an Objective Name an Ace Objective Taker.

An advertising expert obviously would want some jingles. We are fascinated by:

A dozen candidates, that's a lot—
Plenty of 'em ain't so hot;
Subtract two when down to three—
Eisenhower is the man for me!

Have you headaches night and morn?
Are you feeling quite forlorn?
Are you filled with aggravation?
Watch the "General" situation!

Are you on needles?
Are you on pins?
Take Eisenhower
For vit-a-mins!

Old Guard Rebels

DAPPER, smiling and wavy-haired Charles Halleck of Indiana, Republican majority leader in the house of representatives, suffered two major defeats as some of the faithful in the ranks of the Old Guard rebelled at his leadership in closing days of the special session.

Halleck first led an onslaught to slash some 100 million dollars from the emergency aid to Europe bill when that measure was up for consideration, and was defeated. Then he sought to ram through, under suspension of the rules, a fiddle-faddle inflation control bill which was so ostensibly a political and not an economic measure that his own party turned him down and he again was defeated.

Halleck

The 26 Republican votes which with a solid Democratic vote defeated the measure, came almost unanimously from the farm bloc led by Congressman Clifford Hope of Kansas, chairman of the house agricultural committee.

From a political standpoint the two rebellions at his leadership are all the more significant since Congressman Halleck is chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee and also served in that capacity during the 1946 campaign.

The fish and wildlife service of the department of interior, with one eye to its own aggrandizement and the other on the high price of meat, is conducting a campaign urging folks to eat fish instead. Trouble is, except for the less desirable varieties, fish costs as much as meat if bought at the retail markets.

Bruise 'Em Gentle

Democrats guffawed and Republicans snickered when laconic Congressman Harold D. Cooley of North Carolina, in a burst of humor, made a satire of a dinner in New York attended by the "foremost 50" leading business men, who were addressed by Gov. Tom Dewey as "fellow victims of the New Deal."

After painting a vivid picture of "sufferings" of the "foremost 50," Congressman Cooley quoted their salary figures, which ran to $5,640,000 a year.

"I figured that would buy a lot of medicine to ease the pain of being a victim of the New Deal," Congressman Cooley said, "and, in fact, if I were all bruised up from being a so-called victim of the New Deal, I could think of no better cure than massaging my bruises with 100,000 nice crisp new $1 bills every year."

High on the agenda for the second session of the 80th congress, which convened January 6, will be several national health bills involving appropriations estimated as high as 300 million dollars per year. The nation's health is involved in the solution of production and labor problems. Health officials estimate six times more man hours are lost through sickness than through strikes or lockouts.

Reasons for Alarm

There is little question but that the politicians in both parties are frightened over the continued upward climb of living costs. While some of the more enlightened are afraid because of the effect it will have on living standards of the people, a great many are more interested in the effect it will have on votes in the 1948 elections.

There is everything to indicate that both prices and wages will continue to rise, yet nothing basic has been done by congress to head off the inevitable result.

If big business would not listen to pleas from President Truman to voluntarily allocate materials and reduce prices, there is no reason to believe it will listen to congress. Hence thinking here is that mandatory controls eventually will be necessary.

Big Question Mark

General Eisenhower can't "hole-up" much longer. He, as the saying goes, must fish or cut bait — and say whether he'll run or not. One woman politician questioned whether or not the five-star general would maintain his glamour once he doffed his uniform and brass and started to answer questions about political and economic questions of the day. At any rate, he is now the big question mark in the national political arena.

THE LEOPARD'S SPOTS

By WILLIAM C. FORD

THE bank examiners were coming Monday. And Blake needed five thousand dollars.

He checked over some of his personal papers again as he sat in the President's office of his bank. No use! Nothing he could realize on right now. Good enough later, but no good to him before Monday.

His buzzer rang, and he put the papers away hastily. It was Carter, his cashier.

"Mr. Steinberg is here, Mr. Blake," said Carter on the extension phone. "He wants to renew his note again. He says it would break him to pay it now but he'll be on his feet in two months. I told him I'd have to speak with you."

Carter had been with him long, but he didn't take much responsibility.

"Let him renew it," said Blake. And he hung up.

He ran the pencil down his private papers again. No use. "Got to do something," he told himself.

He picked up his hat and hurried out.

On the street in front of the Lawyers' building he met Carter's daughter. A slender girl, she was, with fine hair, and skin, and a flush on each cheek that heightened as she came toward him.

"You're looking fine, Doris," he greeted her.

"Good morning, Mr. Blake. Oh, I'm feeling first rate, thank you," she said.

He looked at her. "Not overdoing, are you? What'd that doctor tell you this time?"

The girl set her mouth into a smile. "Oh, he was all right," she said. "Always has that silly notion about my going away for a while. But I told him I couldn't leave father. He says I'm doing fine."

Blake tapped her shoulder. "Cheer up, Doris. We'll fix it," he said. "Take it easy, as he told you."

Blake waved goodbye and swung into the doorway of the Lawyers' Building where his foster son Ernest practiced law.

Blake had brought up Ernest and educated him and started him out. Now Ernest was building a reputation as a two-fisted, hard-fighting jury lawyer.

"Hello, Governor," said Ernest. "What can I do for you?"

"Plenty," said Blake. "Plenty today. You know that five thousand dollar fund I set up for you when you were 21? Well, I want it for a little while — need some money in a hurry."

Ernest stopped on his way to the swivel chair behind his desk.

"That five thousand!" he exclaimed. "Why governor — you gave me that outright! I've made my plans on that—I—What do you want it for?"

"Does that make any difference?"

"Well — it might — the way I'm fixed."

"All right then, if I must say it. It isn't everywhere I could go. I happen to need it in a hurry — The bank examiners are coming Monday."

"The bank examiners," said Ernest softly, and Blake saw the lines harden round his mouth.

"What I mean, Ernest — I'm not in a position to tell you the details. I tell you I need it — that ought to be enough."

Ernest straightened. "Of course. But right is right. I've got my principles, Governor, and I've got a right to know if you've done something illegal."

Blake's eyes narrowed as he watched him.

"O K. Ernie," said he. He rose.

"Wait a minute, Governor," said Ernest. "Try to see it my way. I'm trying to do what's right. I can't go against my principles. You wouldn't want me to do that. I've noticed things lately, Governor—and I've felt for a long time I ought to talk to you about them."

Blake sat down. "Go ahead!" said he.

Ernest put the tips of his fingers together.

"Well, first, you're too easy going, Governor. You're not hard boiled enough for a banker. This being in a hole now proves it. Your borrowers know you'll always help them. You've got to get hard boiled."

Blake took a deep breath, and got up.

"All right, Ernest," said he. "Be hard boiled! That's that. The leopard ought to change his spots. Much obliged."

He started for the door.

"Hold on! There are a couple more things, while we're on it." Ernest held up a hand.

"All right, Ernest," Blake told him. "Let's have them."

"That daughter of Carter's — I saw you from the window when you met her just now. And you're old enough to be her father. She's crazy about you. Everybody knows it."

Blake smiled.

"Well, Ernie," he said. "I feel a bit flattered. Of course it's only a passing notion, if it's there at all; she'll get over it mighty quick. But she's a fine young woman, Ernest. Keeps house for her father now and has taken great care of him since her mother died."

"She's too good to him," Ernest snapped. "Better if she tried to get him to work out of his rut and make something of himself."

Blake got up.

"Don't be so righteous, Ernest," he said from the doorway.

He walked back to the bank. It was after hours. Carter was gone. No one was there.

Blake tapped her shoulder. "Cheer up, Doris. We'll fix it," he said. "Take it easy, as he told you."

Blake went over to the drawer by the cashier's cage, where the revolver was kept. He took it out and fumbled with it for a minute. Then he put it back.

He went to his private box and took out a life insurance policy. He studied it a while and slipped it into his pocket. He started for the street door.

Blake found Tom Martin, the insurance man, in his office. He tossed the insurance policy to him.

"I want to surrender that," he said. "Just what is the surrender value?"

Martin looked at it. "Five thousand dollars," said he. "A little over. But, Mr. Blake, you've been paying for this for Ernest for years and years. I couldn't advise you to surrender it now — why look —let me explain." He reached for pamphlets and tables.

Blake stopped him. "Where do I sign?" he asked.

"Here, Mr. Blake," said Martin—"If you really insist."

"I really do," said Blake. "Ernest can take care of himself first rate now."

On Friday Martin brought the insurance check and Blake cashed it at Carter's cage. After that he went into the vault. He came out in a minute and went to his office. Then he rang for Carter.

Carter came in, bent, lined with worry, pale.

"John," said Blake. "The bank examiners will be here on Monday."

Carter's hands closed. His forehead was wet.

"Yes, Mr. Blake," he said.

Blake stood up.

"It's all right, John," he said. "Don't worry any more. I've just put that five thousand in the vault. Your cash will balance when they come."

Carter staggered and his face whitened.

"You knew, Mr. Blake?" he faltered.

"Yes," said Blake, "I knew. Of course I knew. It's my business to know. And I saw how hard you tried to put it back, too."

Carter held one hand in the other to stop their trembling.

"Oh, I've tried," he said. "I've prayed. It wasn't for myself, Mr. Blake. It was for Doris. She's been so—brave—The doctor said there's a spot on her lung—and she must go to a high dry place—and I—thought—"

"All right, John," said Blake. "All right. I've known all about that, too. Of course you can't stay here—you can't work in a bank any more—But you'll resign after the examiners O. K. everything. And I've got you another kind of a job—in Arizona—I'll tell you about it later. You can pay me back when you get on your feet. And Doris will be all right now. The air's clear and dry in Arizona. In no time at all we'll be hearing she's married some fine young Westerner."

Carter's lips were moving.

"Thank you — thank you—" he was saying. "It's the—the Mercy of God. I can't tell you, Mr. Blake. I can't—"

"Sure," said Blake. He put his hand in his pocket and dropped six cartridges on the desk.

"Load that revolver again now, John," he said. "I saw you looking at it the other day, and I thought I'd better—"

Carter picked up the cartridges and turned to the door. He stopped again with his hand on the knob.

"You're a good man, Mr. Blake," he said humbly.

He went out.

Blake looked at the grease that had been left on his hand by the cartridges.

"I wonder," said he.

BY GRANTLAND RICE

WHAT sort of baseball property fell to the lot of Bob Hannegan and his St. Louis associates recently? The answer is a Cardinal outfit that still will be extremely dangerous next season.

Eddie Dyer got the shock of his life when he returned to St. Louis last spring to find Stan Musial a sick man and the better part of his pitching staff, including Howie Pollet and Murry Dickson, unfit for winning action. Through the first weeks of the season a team that looked to be the pick of both leagues couldn't beat the Crab Apple Blues from the Fried Chicken circuit.

DYER

Musial, normally a .360 hitter, hovered around the .150 mark for several weeks. Pollet still had a kink in his left shoulder and Dickson was about as bad. Schoendienst couldn't hit and Terry Moore was lame.

So in place of jumping the gun and taking an early lead, the odds-on favorites were parked in last place. From this dismal start the Cardinals moved into second place, but the Dodgers had too much of a lead to cut down.

The Cardinals are not getting any younger. But they are still a much better ball club than they looked to be for most of last year. They still have Country Slaughter — one of the best. They still have Musial and Marion. Whitey Kurowski may be fading, but he is still a valuable man. Terry Moore is over the hill, one of the star outfielders of all time. The pitching staff is the main problem, But Red Munger has the stuff to be a 25-game winner.

Dyer rates Munger one of the best pitchers he ever has handled. He will be a better pitcher next season that he was last year. Jim Hearn, the ex-Georgia Tech star, will be one of the best next campaign—at least he should be. Joe Garagiola and Del Rice are two good catchers.

But to beat out the Dodgers and the Braves the Cardinals still need help — another good infielder, at least one more good outfielder and two good pitchers.

The Dodgers should be even better and so should the Braves. Dyer has two tough teams to roll back, two improving teams who have more youth and more speed.

Best Heavyweight Fights

In the wake of the last heavyweight fight between Joe Louis and Joe Walcott, the battle of the Joes, there is still a hum of gossip concerning the best of all the heavyweight fights. The records show there haven't been too many such thrilling encounters.

The top of all time was the Dempsey-Firpo, two-round, hurly-burly in New York that never had an equal—where a million dollars and the title were hanging on two or three seconds. This was the Big Brawl, more than 20 years ago.

Before this, the meeting between Jim Corbett and Jim Jeffries had all the thrills and all the color that anyone could ask for. Corbett, far in front, had the fight won until Jeffries finally nailed him.

But most of the heavyweight fights have been on the drab side. Corbett had no trouble against Sullivan. His battle against Bob Fitzsimmons was entirely different. Here was another thriller with Corbett well in front until Fitz nailed him in the so-called solar plexus, in the 14th round. Jeffries had little trouble with Fitz later on. Then Jeffries retired.

From that point on, there was no sizzling action. Jeffries was a fat, bald-headed starter against Jack Johnson at Reno. Johnson was a weary, disgruntled fighter against Willard in Havana, and Willard was a set-up for Dempsey at Toledo.

Dempsey was a big thrill until he started meeting boxers. He was wrecking all the heavyweights until he ran across Tom Gibbons and Gene Tunney, where in 35 rounds he had only one knockdown.

Killing punchers don't care for good boxers. They never have and they never will. A hard puncher can't get set against a good boxer who knows how to handle himself and keep out of the road.

Harry Greb could have done better against any heavyweight than he could against a Tiger Flowers, or some smaller, faster opponent. Greb loved the slower moving targets. He met such fine heavyweights as Gibbons and Tunney, until he began going blind. He wanted Dempsey—but Jack never wanted Greb.

Joe Louis has had trouble in the past with Tommy Farr, Godoy and Bob Pastor. But Joe also has taken part in more than one fantastic contest. His finest fight was the second Max Schmeling encounter.

Louis has had several exciting contests because he couldn't quite absorb a right-hand punch to the head. This has seemed to be his only weak point. He always came back, but he was still in trouble. Just how he would have made out against Jack Dempsey is something I wouldn't know.

REVIEWING 1947 . . .

We See A Need For Increased Care Of CREAM

All food products shipped out of the state must meet U. S. Government Standards, as interpeted by the Federal Pure Food & Drug Administration. This includes 80% of all Dairy Products manufactured in Iowa.

At any time that federal food inspectors find cream at a creamery that is not fit for making butter, they can serve an injunction on the creamery stopping the sale of any of their butter outside the state. This happened in some Iowa creameries during 1947. We don't want it to happen here.

We have urged our patrons to keep their cream clean, and have had good co-operation, but efforts must not be relaxed during 1948.

Keep milk as clean as possible while milking, strain it carefully before separating, and keep cream in a place where it will not get any dust.

And remember, besides helping the creamery meet federal regulations, you'll be adding to your dairy profit — because clean cream helps us make top grade butter . . . top grade butter brings better prices (the spread is as much as 10c per lb. between 90 and 93 score butter) and under our cooperative plan, the bigger profits made from better prices is turned back to patrons in higher prices for butter-fat.

Klemme Civic Club Met To Plan Extensive Program

MEETING WELL ATTENDED BY REPRESENTATIVE GROUP AT HALL

Several Projects For The Future Were Discussed At Meeting

A meeting of the Klemme Civic Club was held at the Community Hall Thursday evening with a large number of business men present. In the absence of Dr. Dulmes, president, "Mike" Lemke ably took charge of the meeting.

Mr. Gray, of Alden was present and presented facts concerning outdoor movies for the summer. The Club voted to have movies but did not set the date at this meeting.

Other important discussions included houseing. Dr. Dulmes who arrived at the meeting later, gave a report on the progress he has made along this line which certainly looks very encouraging. Anyone in the Klemme trade territory contemplating on building a new house in Klemme should contact Dr. Dulmes who may be able to offer valuable assistance. So far there are prospects for more than a half dozen new homes to be built in Klemme this year.

The matter of lighting the ball diamond for soft ball was brought up and progress has already been made along that line. Nearly $200 had already been contributed by farmers for this communtiy project. Orville Stokesbary is receiving contributions for the lighting system.

Improvements to the city park in the way of more picnic tables, ovens and possibly a shelter house and comfort station is now in the planning stage.

Light improvement along the Main street was discussed with the suggestion that the highway leading into Klemme be lighted from U. S. Highway 69 into town.

If possible band concerts will be held once each week during the summer months. Other entertainment is in the planning stage.

The Civic Club is working not only for the good of Klemme, but for the entire community surrounding Klemme. Many farmers are just as interested as the town people and have pledged their support in several of the projects being planned. With town people and farmers working together we can make this a better community in which to live.

George Brown has been a trusty in the Cass County jail but isn't any more. On an absence from the jail, he bought a used automobile and paid for it with a worthless check. When the police started looking for him, they finally found him—back in his cell.

SHAMROCKS WIN TWO FROM CRYSTAL LAKE HIGH SCHOOL

The Klemme Shamrocks won both games Tuesday night here, the Reserves winning 26 to 5, while the varsity squad won 40 to 36 in a hectic game in which 38 fouls were called, 19 on Klemme and 19 on the Lakers an in which Klemme lost Grosshuesch and Carolus and the Lakers lost one regular. In the reserve game 27 fouls were called, which made a total of 65 for the evening. It was the most whistle-blowing affair this writer has ever seen and the referees did a sewll job of ruining what might have been a good game otherwise.

FRIENDS PICKED CORN FOR NEIGHBOR WHO WAS IN HOSPITAL

There are a mighty swell bunch of farmers living east of Klemme as was demonstrated some over a week ago when they came to the assistance of their friend and neighbor, Kenneth Curry, who was in the hospital.

The farmers got together and went to the Curry farm with several corn pickers and husked out and cribbed 80 acres of corn for their neighbor.

The Times was unable to get the names of all the farmers who helped but the following were present: Howard Bellamy, Luverne Johnson, Adolph Meinders, Verner Lewis, Phillip Bock and son, Claude and Alvin Miller, and others. Mr. Curry appreciated the act of kindness beyond words, but the farmers said it was a lot of fun for them, and they were glad to help.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank all my friends and neighbors for their kind assistance during my recent illness. Kenneth C. Curry. (1tp)

Schmidt was good for 8 points, Grosshuesch 7, Bock 6 and Montgomery 1 to complete the Shamrock scoring. Farmers Warned To Watch For Rabies In Livestock

A PROCLAMATION TO THE PEOPLE OF HANCOCK COUNTY ON RABIES

The disease known as rabies or hydraphobia has been positively identified and diagnosed as present in Hancock County in the following townships: Amsterdam, Erin, Boone and Magor.

The disease is transmissible both to man and domestic animals and in developed cases is invariably fatal. Rabies is a reportable disease subject to the quarantine regulations. Therefore we warn all people in Hancock County especially in the above mentioned townships to comply with and abide by the following instructions for its control.

1. Any person bitten by any animal showing symptons suspicious of rabies or whose hands have been contaminated with saliva from such an animal shall report immediately to their physician.

2. Any animal showing signs of unnatural behavior or undue aggressiveness or paralysis shall be immediately reported to the Township Trustee and to the nearest veterinarian. Skunks, civent cats, squirrels, red fores, dogs, cats and all species of domestic livestock may develop and transmit the virus of rabies.

3. As the disease is most commonly spread by the stray dogs, all stray dogs should be killed. All dogs shall be held at home or kept tied during the next ninety day period of quarantine or properly vaccinated by some one qualified to do so. ALL STRAY DOGS SHALL BE DESTROYED.

4. Stray dogs, skunks or other animals showing symptoms of rabies shall NOT be destroyed by shooting in the head, as this destroys the brain for labratory diagnosis.

5 Any livestock showing the symptons of rabies shall be immediately segregated in a secure place free from any possible contact with any other animals, and all people stay away from them.

6 All farmers in Amsterdam, Erin, Boone and Magor townships are urged to cooperate with the State Conservation Commission, who will trap and kill the skunks and civet cats in these townships. Skunks and civet cats are known to carry rabies in these townships Any farmer knowing where skunks or civet cats are located or their dens must report this informaation to the following veternarians; Dr. H. H. Sewart, Kanawha; Dr. H. C. Harriman, Kanawha; and Dr. C B. Wilson, Britt, who will pass on this information to the State Conservation Commission trappers.

7. Asking all people to fully cooperate with veterinarians, State Conservation Commission, and county health officers in enforcement of this necessary quarantine measure.

Signed at Garner, Iowa this 19th day of January, 1948. By Supervisors of Hancock County, Iowa.

F. J. SCOUN, Chm.
GEO. TH. GERDES, Member

SUB-ZERO WEATHER FELT IN NORTH IOWA PAST WEEK

North Iowa had it's coldest weather of the season the past week when the temperature dropped to a low of 15 degrees on several mornings. High winds prevailed part of the time, but fortunately there is but little snow on the ground to cause drifting. North Iowa has had some cold days, but most of the winter has been ideal.

RABIES HAS BROKEN OUT IN FOUR SOUTHWEST TOWNSHIPS IN COUNTY

Disease Being Spread By Skunks, Civet Cats And Dogs

Last Wednesday Dr. H. H. Stewart of Kanawha notified the Board of Supervisors, the Sheriff and County Attorney that he had found several cases of rabies or hydrophobia in four of the southwest townships: Amsterdam, Magor, Boone and Erin townships in Hancock County.

On Thursday afternoon a conference was held at Kanawha with the following people attending: Dr. H. H. Stewart and Dr. H. E. Harriman, Kanawha veterinarians, Sheriff Brower and Deputy Cooper, Hub Colby, Conservation Officer and Co. Attorney Rhiem. At this meeting the following information was brought out:

About a year ago Dr. C. B. Wilson of Britt had a case of rabies in a cow. Dr. Harriman reported that on December 22, 1947, that he treated a farmer's dog which died of rabies. At that time a civet cat was killed, which it is believed to have bitten the dog. Both the dog and civet can upon labratory tests showed them to have rabies. Dr. Stewart reported that last spring he was called to a farm to see a sick horse which turned out to be the rabies and died. The farmer in this case had no dog and it is believed that a civet cat infected with rabies had bitten the horse and transferred the virus to it. Dr. Stewart reported on January 14, another farmer's cow died of rabies and it is believed in this case an infected skunk had bitten the cow and given it rabies. These four known cases of rabies occurred within a six mile square area in Boone, Erin, Magor and Amsterdam Townships. Dr. Stewart presented what he considered the necessary precautions that should be taken which was adopted by the Board of Supervisors on Jan. 19, 1948, with minor changes. Dr. L. W. Eller, M. D. of Kanawha, also urged that some program be adopted. As a result of this conference, Ray Beckman of the State Conservation Commission of Des Moines was contacted by Hub Colby and we were informed that he would take it up with Dr. Carl Jorden of the State Department of Health and the State Veterinarian.

Beginning January 23 State trappers will be on the job to trap skunks and civet cats. The Board of Supervisors has passed a proclamation which is published in this issue.

Since the control of rabies seems to be primarily with the individual owners of domestic animals, it is imperative they should know what to do in the event some of the livestock, cats or dogs become infected.

All the doctors above mentioned have urged that the widest and most effective publicity be given this program to control rabies before it gets any worse.

This is a serious proposition. Although there have been no cases reported in this part of the county, everyone is urged to be on the lookout and report at once any suspicious animals.

RONALD BARZ PURCHASED HERD OF DAIRY CATTLE

R. W. Elder, who has been in in the dairy business for several years and who had a dairy route in Klemme which he later sold to the Klemme Cooperative Creamery Co., has disposed of his entire herd of dairy cattle to Ronald Barz, who began farming a couple of weeks ago on the Edmund K. Josten farm.

Dentists and Income Tax

A dentists' convention was recently told that dentists suffer from these occupational hazards: flat feet, ulcers, backaches and income tax worries. It is a relief to find there is something that, in the opinion of a dentist, really hurts.

And when they admit in convention that the income tax is a chief occupational hazard they are applying a new significance to that old dental office query, "How does the bite feel?"

We knew something was worrying our molar expert. He hasn't seemed his old self.

"Well, how are you, Mr. Wigeon?" he asked us on our 500th visit.

"The name is Boffle," we corrected, "and always has been, man and boy."

"Print plainly. . . . Give street, city and state address," he went on. "See paragraph IV."

We got into the chair.

"What seems to be the trouble?" he asked.

"It's this one," we explained, pointing.

"Ah! It's in parenthesis," he exclaimed. "This is difficult. I'll need my strong glasses."

He came back with a ledger, two billfolds and some papers.

"Is this ache for the current year 1947?" he mumbled.

The question seemed rambling.

"This is a separate ache, not a joint ache, I assume," he went on. "Makes a big difference if any part of it is your wife's. . . . And remember, you are only allowed six cavities for each child."

We were now somewhat alarmed, but he had his knee in our lap and was exploring away with a forceps, two blue pencils, a blotter and four large ink erasers.

"Looks like a fiduciary," he mumbled. "Or a loss by depreciation. . . . Am I hurting you? . . . If not see Paragraph X, Section VI. . . . Stop struggling, will ya?"

The White House Pooch

The White House has a dog. It's a cocker spaniel sent to the President and Mrs. Truman for Christmas. No longer may it be said of the trials and tribulations that come to White House occupants "This shouldn't happen to a dog."

But being the First Dog of the Land can't be so soft. If the President rolls on the floor with him, the republicans will call him juvenile.

If Mrs. Truman asks the butcher for a little extra meat for the pup, it may mean a scandal. It could even put the pooch on the witness stand before a congressional subcommittee.

And look at all the strange people a White House dog has to get used to! How many of them can unbend, shake off their dignity and act as if they loved dogs. Suppose the pooch bit a Russian envoy? War!

What chance has a dog for much attention around the White House? Certainly not much from the cabinet, which is always in a state of flux. Clint Anderson can't show enough interest in a pup to feed it something in times like these. W. Averell Harriman can't be expected to shake off inflation cares long enough to toss a rubber ball around for the animal.

And wahat freedom does a dog have in the White House? How can he shake off the worry that the bed he jumps all over may be Abraham Lincoln's? Suppose the chair leg he chews up is in the Blue room?

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

A little work, a little fun,
A struggle somewhat unabating. . . .
A little praise, a little urn—
But, oh the sting! — no Hooper rating!

To this department the annual chicken show in Madison Square Garden, New York, is a top big city believe-it-or-not. One can imagine Harry Balogh's voice ringing out "In this corner that peerless exponent of the art of egg laying, "Kid" Minorca. . . . Her opponent, that idol of the back country "Kayo" Buff Cochin. . . . And may the better cluck emerge triumphantly."

From Beauticians to Rat Catchers—All 'Engineers'

During a recent campaign to kill by ridicule the flagrant misuses of the word "engineer" in this country, lists compiled showed that it was being employed as a totle by persons engaged in nearly 2,600 kinds of work, most of which had little or nothing to do with engineering, says Collier's. Among the many absurd titles were Pajama Engineer (manufacturer), Exterminating Engineer (rat catcher) and Appearance Engineer (beauty parlor operator).

STREAK OF IRISH

By GARTH R. SPENCER

Russ Van Hosen was late but feeling good, with the check from another car sale tucked in his pocket. He walked in at the back door. Pat was stirring something at the cupboard. She heard him, but didn't glance around.

Russ squeezed her shoulders and kissed her, then waited hopefully. Pat didn't respond. After a minute Russ turned away and walked on into the living room. So Pat was still sore. Well, one thing was certain; the next peace move would have to come from her.

He sat down and reached for the sport page. Golf was opening at the Pyaconda Sunday. Well, they probably wouldn't go now; they probably wouldn't go anywhere. Lately, it seemed, they'd been quarreling all the time

It had begun this time as usual, with a quick sizzling flash of Pat's Irish temper. One of those brief flash-ups which usually ended with little damage done. Only this one hadn't ended yet; it was still dragging on. Well, let it drag!

Maybe by the time it was over Pat would have learned to keep that streak of fighting Irish temper down.

Pat came in from the kitchen.

"Russ Van Hosen," she said sharply, "put that paper down!"

"All right." Russ knew what Pat wanted — to carry on from where they stopped last night.

"I want to know," Pat said tightly, "just why you left the party with that Gertie Hale last night!"

Russ' jaw grew stubborn. "I told you: I went out to start her car, that's all."

"It certainly took you a good long time . . . Where was her husband — why didn't she have him start it?"

"I don't know — he was somewhere around, I guess. Anyway, I had sold her the car."

"Yes," Pat said, "two years ago — before I'd even met you. . . . Russ, are you getting a little tired of me?"

Russ groaned. Pat knew better, of course All she wanted was a row. Maybe he had spent too much time with Gertie, but what of it? What about Hal Kirk last week? Pat had asked him to stop over and see her on his way in to Chicago. Talk about old pals!

"Well?" Pat insisted.

Russ turned back to his paper. "I've said all I have to say."

Pat started to speak again, then stopped. Over the paper Russ saw her face tighten. "All right," she said quietly.

Russ watched her walk across the room and begin to climb the stairs. He listened, and after a moment he could hear her moving about in their bedroom above. Doing what? he wondered. After ten minutes he went to the foot of the stairs and called.

"Pat!" No answer. "Pat!" he called again.

Pat was coming down the stairway; she had on her hat and coat. She carried her bag in her hand.

"Pat," Russ demanded, "where are you going?"

"Why," Pat answered coldly, "should you care?"

Russ studied her face. She was bluffing, of course; threatening to leave. Well, two could bluff. "That's right," he said, "why should I?"

"I'm going back to work for Hal, if you want to know."

A little stab went through Russ' heart. "Simply because of Gertie Hale?"

"Not entirely. . . . Russ, we simply can't go on fighting all the time."

"You know," Russ said evenly, "I've been thinking that same thing."

Pat's lips whitened again. "So that's settled. . . . I'll need some money," she said.

Russ took out his billfold. It held three fives and a ten. He offered her the bills. Without looking at them Pat shook her head.

"That's not enough," she said. "I'm taking the next plane at the airport."

Russ was sure now that she was stalling, giving him a chance to beg her to stay. If he gave in this time he'd have to give in always. The stubborn lines of his jaw hardened. Taking the car check from his pocket he endorsed it with his pen.

Russ took out his billfold. It held three fives and a ten. He offered her the bills. Without looking at them Pat shook her head.

"This is on Conway & Company," he said; "you can cash it anywhere in the state."

Pat's cheeks went fiery red. Her voice was low, but it trembled. "Russ Van Hosen, I could murder you! Give me those bills and let me go!"

Russ said nothing. He watched her back the car out onto the drive.

Not until then did full realization come over him. He had held firm; he had won a moral victory. But Pat was gone.

Russ walked slowly back into the living room. He was still dazed, unable to believe it. Ten minutes passed, a half an hour. Then memories began to rise and choke him, a hundred memories of the swell times they'd had together—

From that first day when they'd met at the golf course. They'd played together and he'd beaten her, in spite of the ribbing she'd given him over his mis-matched patched-up clubs. He'd been saving to buy a new set — but he'd bought her a ring instead.

If there were only some way to get her back—

Russ swallowed against the painful aching in his throat. What a fool! To think their little spats had mattered — as if every couple didn't have them during their first year. . . . Maybe even now, if he should call the airport—

The clock struck ten, booming through the awful emptiness of the house. Russ grabbed the phone; the plane left at ten. Feverishly he dialed the number. "Airport? . . . Listen, has the plane — It's gone?"

The silence of the house beat against his ears. He couldn't stand it here; he had to get out, do something. Russ started for the front door, then remembered it was raining. His raincoat was in the closet off the kitchen door.

The closet was dark; his searching arm knocked down a package, a long package that clinked as it fell. He dragged it into the light. From Kirk's Sport Shop, Chicago. It contained a set of perfectly matched clubs.

So that was it! That was why she had had Kirk stop there. To get a present —for him. All these months, Pat had been scrimping on her clothes, pinching, saving—

What a heel—WHAT A HEEL—he had been!

A sound from behind startled him, the turning of a latch. He whirled. Pat stood in the doorway. Pat's eyes were blazing; her cheeks were on fire.

"Russ Van Hosen!" She stamped her foot, and it shook two bright tears out on her cheeks. "Russ Van Hosen, I COULD MURDER YOU!"

"Honey," Russ gasped. "Honeygirl!"

"Don't honey me! For a half hour you've let me sit out there in the drive. In the rain! Waiting . . . . . for you to come out and get me. But you wouldn't. Oh, how I hate you! Instead you waited until I had to give in myself — humbling my pride——" Suddenly Pat's voice broke. Her arms went around him. "Oh, Russ, I don't care what you did. But say you love me—that you'll always love me! . . . Because, I love you so!"

Russ didn't answer; he didn't want to answer. All he wanted was the assuring feel of her in his arms.

"Russ," Pat was sobbing, "even while we were quarreling I loved you. If you could only forgive that streak of Irish in me—"

"I can," Russ said humbly, "if you can overlook a streak of stubborn Dutch."

Shoes Require Special Care in Wet Weather

Shoes often suffer from wet weather. Once soaked they may never look as well or fit as comfortably unless they are properly dried and cared for.

Extension clothing specialists say that wet shoes should be taken off as soon as possible. Leather is weak when it's wet. Wearing wet shoes may pull them out of shape and cause breaks and other damage. Wet shoes should be stuffed with soft paper or absorbent cotton to take up moisture. Never use tension shoe trees because they may stretch the leather out of shape. Instead of drying the outside of shoes by rubbing, which may roughen the leather, pat with a soft cloth. When the inside moisture is absorbed, remove the stuffing and let the shoes dry slowly away from the heat. Fast drying with heat makes leather shrink, harden or crack.

As the shoes dry, clean them with saddle soap. Follow this with a little sulfonated castor oil rubbed in by hand. This treatment keeps leather soft and pliable. Work or play shoes that do not need polishing may be softened and made to resist moisture by rubbing them with beeswax, tallow, wool grease or petroleum jelly. Well-oiled shoes not only turn off moisture but also last longer. Outdoor work or children's shoes may be softened after getting wet by rubbing them with warm — not hot — neat's foot oil, castor oil or tallow.

Leather soles can be made moisture resistant by setting the shoes in a pan of just enough warm oil to cover the soles. Let them stand in this 15 minutes, taking care not to get the heels in the oil, for oil rots rubber.

FRANK FRISCH, sometimes known as the Fordham Flash, was talking.

"You know," Frisch said, "they talk about the toughest and most important jobs in baseball. Maybe it's the pitcher. Maybe it's the catcher who has to watch both infield and outfield. Practically every job at every position is an important one. But how many people do you ever hear talk about the coach at third base? To my mind that's as big a job as there is in baseball. Just to take one example, how many remember the number of games Art Fletcher won for the Yankees? I can tell you the number either, but Fletcher won plenty. I could tell you about the game that Gonzalez had saved for the Cardinals. There are many others."

Frisch

"Why is the third base coach so important, and why is the job so tough?" I asked Frisch.

"Third base is the scoring spot," Frisch replied. "It is the big corner. There are men on first and second. A hit follows. The third base coach has to judge the speed of the hit. He has to know something about the outfielder's throwing arm. Should he send the runner home? Should he send the first base runner on his way round to third? He must watch the ball. He must watch two base runners.

Games Lost at Third

"It might surprise you if I should tell you the number of games I saw lost last season through incorrect decisions on the part of the third base coach. I couldn't blame them for they had too many spots to cover, too many places to watch, all in split-second time."

Looking back, you can see what Mr. Frisch was talking about. Baseball is packed with close games—with games won or lost by a run. Should the base runner be sent home, or held at third? Should the runner on first be sent around to third? With two men scampering around the bases and the ball bouncing around the outfield — three different spots to watch — what is the next move?

"Third base coaching is not only a tough spot," Frisch says, "but a highly important one. It can mean the difference of 10 or 12 games a season, a margin that could win a pennant for three or four teams. There are so many things that look unimportant in baseball that can win or lose your games," Frisch continued. "Just a little mistake here — just another one there. Not much of a mistake. But there goes your ball game."

"Frisch is right when you look over the number of ball games won and lost by the margin of a single run. Just a run, that's all. But it means the ball game.

The Dodgers won a flock of games by one run last season. Suppose a third of those had gone the other way? What a sad hamlet Brooklyn would have been.

Hard Training Needed

There seems to be a wide difference of opinion as to how Joe Louis will look and act on his reappearance in front of Jersey Joe Walcott in June.

No one, of course, expects to see the Louis of his peak years, the Louis that used to be. On the other hand, I don't think you'll view any decrepit old man. You'll see a much better Louis than the one who met Walcott a short while back.

When Louis came to this contest he had actually fought only seven full rounds in six years. The rounds against Billy Conn consisted entirely of walking, barring one or two punches. The Mauriello flurry lasted less than three minutes.

Louis had been leading a soft life up to his brief training period, looking on Walcott as a soft touch to be eliminated without much effort. So there was neither any physical hardness nor any mental lift to the Louis effort. He had overlooked the fact that while he was loafing, Walcott had been fighting. This can make a terrific difference when one has passed 30, and has been around the ring 12 or 13 years.

I still believe Louis can whip himself back into first-class fighting shape, if he has that much ambition left. For this isn't going to be any easy job.

Road work isn't the only answer. Back in training, he needs sparring partners who can jolt him, hurt him and cross him up. Joe has never been the ring's quickest thinker when he gets crossed. He needs time to figure things out. He untracks slowly. But up to the Walcott party, he had always been willing to throw a punch, once he got in reach. This time, after catching up with Walcott, he waited for Walcott to lead.

A serious, hard-training campaign of three or four months could bring Louis back a long way—quite long enough to win—if Louis is willing to pay this price. At least he will never look as bad again.

Painting Icons

Several centuries ago in Russia, many artists, when painting icons of sacred personages, employed a strange method in order to give complete individuality to each figure. They would first paint the skeleton, then add the body organs, then the skin and, lastly the cloths.

THIRD AND FOURTH GRADE NEWS

Wednesday afternoon and on Thursday forenoon we took the Basic Skill Tests. The Fifth Grade came in our room and took them with us.

Sixteen of our dental cards have been returned. Only one over half of our room.

The Third Grade finished their reader "Streets and Roads" and are beginning in "More Streets and Roads". They will have new work books, also.

Miss Tanner is reading the book "Smoky" to us. It is about a wild horse. Ray brought us the book.

Shirley Barz is sick and is in the hospital. We hope she will soon be better.

In our Art work Friday we began cutting letters for poster work.

Marie Nuehring visited in our room Thursday afternoon.

Seventh and Eighth Grade News

Eric Meyer was a visitor in our room Thursday afternoon.

In Art class we made drawings of winter scenes. Some were pencil drawings while others were chalk and crayons.

We are beginning work in Civics in the eighth grade and health in the seventh grade. These two subjects replace our work in science for the first semester.

State tests were given in the gym for grades six, seven and eight on Wednesday afternoon and Thursday forenoon. About thirty-five rural students joined us making a total of eighty.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

By Red and Jerry

By now we are all tired out but relieved that semester tests are now over. Most of our grades are back and I think we are all fairly well satisfied. Of course, our grades show us that there are those who will have to work harder next semester.

For this semester in English we will be studying Literature on Thursday and Friday, while the remainder of the week will be devoted to our English II books. This will give us a change and break the monotany.

In Geometry we are not only going in circles, but we are trying to learn the construction of them.

Thursday and Friday of this week were devoted to the Weekly News Review in Biology. One day of each week is taken for the study of up-to-date news.

In Home Economics the girls have new books on sewing and homemaking. They seem to think this is harder than last semesters study about cooking.

In Manual Training we are still putting our time on the odd looking lamps that were mentioned last week. The gun-racks have been finished and now some are working on hall-trees which is the largest project we have undertaken this year.

JUNIOR NEWS

—Reported by Marion Anderson and Phyllis Boland.

What a relief! At last our semester tests are over, and everyone is anxiously awaiting report cards which will be handed out some fatal hour next week. But we have to give those hard-working teachers some time to figure out those A's and F's.

Now, in the place of Economics, we are taking Government, which is a pretty, new orange book that contains a lot of knowledge which we'll have to know.

At last we're through with our headackes which were received in English. We are taking up American Literature in its place. It looks as though it might have quite a few interesting stories.

Some of the Junior and Senior girls are taking shorthand and we must include also one ambitious Senior boy. Mr. Patterson has said that shorthand will not be hard, just difficult.

Another new subject is Geography, which many Junior and Seniors are taking. Some are, however, still continuing with speech.

We hope that this coming semester will prove as interesting as the last and will pass just as quickly.

From Sheepskin to Sheep

There aren't too many college graduates in our town. Good honest thinking, yes...but most folks went from high school into farming.

No harm in that! But I admire veterans like Dick Newcomb... who's 23, but going to college under the G.I. Bill of Rights. Intends to be a sheep farmer—but a better-informed, more scientific farmer, with more know-how!

And veterans like Dick aren't letting anything interfere. What little relaxation they allow themselves is in the form of needed exercise, or books, or conversation and an occasional glass of beer with friends.

Seems as if, just by having their education postponed, they've put a higher value on it... and on things like temperance (that glass of beer, for instance), understanding, and good citizenship. And from where I sit, when Dick gets his sheepskin—he won't have lost much time. He'll be an even better farmer than his Dad. (Exactly what Dad wanted!)

"Time and Chance," Tale of a Credo

Artist-Writer Builds Self Philosophy 'for to Admire'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—Every once in a while, I devote this column to a book. Not a review, but just my feelings about the book and its author.

I couldn't help writing about "Time and Chance" by artist Cyrus LeRoy Baldridge. Not merely because the book interested me, or because it is a most attractive piece of autobiography, or because the drawings are a book in themselves, or because other reviewers liked it—but because I happened to share some of the experiences it describes and because I lived, as he (and you) did, through the times and chances which Baldridge interprets in terms of his own.

Also I want to write a review because of what these experiences, the fruits of the varied environments which the artist-author describes, did to form a career, a character, a philosophy, which is "for to see and to admire."

In Roy's own words, it is the story, partly done in pictures, of "how a well-meaning, but provincial farm boy got an international point of view."

Baukhage

He summarizes his own thoughts on this attractive 400-page volume in a note to me, this way:

"Grandfather (was a) sharecropper and vet.

"At seven (Roy) was driving a horse on mother's wagon through Arkansas, selling cooking pots.

"Worked way through college with Baukhage."

(Roy did the working, I, subsidized, loafed considerably.)

"Peace conference (Paris, 1919) with Baukhage, and sold on Wilson's idealism. Still sold on idealism, the term now altered with the times.

"Worked enough to save money enough to see Far East, Near East, Africa, India." (And how he worked!)

Then he concludes:

"All men the same, discounting the apparent differences caused by varying backgrounds caused by 'time and chance.'"

To reach that conclusion, Roy made an Odyssey beginning with the "cooking pots" into domains of which Homer never dreamed. He had an artist's eye trained from the age of 12 when he was tolerated in a Chicago art school with young artists who were later to achieve national reputations. Such men as John T. McCutcheon, cartoonist; Webster, creator of the "Timid Soul," and many others. Goudy, the great type designer, who died last year, was Roy's teacher, along with the school's director, Frank Holme, who became a second father to the wide-eyed child. At that school, Roy learned his most important lesson—self criticism.

His mother re-married, and Roy became bellhop and baggage-smasher in his stepfather's small-town commercial hotel; finally he went to college on a scholarship which, when he arrived, he found wasn't there. Utterly alone, without the social prestige of a college fraternity, he achieved campus success; became what was considered a "prominent student."

He grew to realize the emptiness of "college honors" but, unlike Vincent Sheean who was to follow him, Roy learned to admire the university which he had "collegiately" exploited. At our 20th reunion, he interpreted the word "university" in its obsolete but new meaning: "the whole . . . all things . . . the universe . . . a body of persons . . . the body of the people."

I shared those campus years with Roy, but I missed most of their significance and experience, for I was carefully sheltered (after a few freshman heartbreaks) behind the protective coloring of Greek letters. But I managed to know Roy and learn a little from his experiences. He is a man who inspires high loyalties.

There was a post-college period when we lost each other. He was commercial-arting and living in the University of Chicago settlement, where he taught art to little toughs from the stockyard district, developed a social conscience, became a national guard cavalryman (because he dreamed of "going west" and being another Frederick Remington), got his first peep into the world of culture and fell in love with a chaming and "modern" mentor out of a world until then strange to him.

One day shortly after World War I broke out, I received a long distance telephone call. It was Roy, he was going overseas. Wouldn't I join him? I had just completed a tour of European wandering much more conventional than Roy's was to be. I also had a job. So I, the congenital bourgeoise, rejected the idea.

Later I learned that he then had two incentives I lacked: A broken heart and a sketchbook, as spurs. Unbelievably, without credentials, he wormed his way through beleaguered Belgium to the German front, where he learned to hate war. He came back to fight out a career in New York.

I'm not going to write any more of Roy's story for it is his story told far better than I could hope to recount it. I can only say that when World War I came to America he had his part in it, a fraction of which I again was lucky enough to share with him. He was a cartoonist on the Stars and Stripes, after experiences on every front with the French. I joined him in Paris after the armistice. Walking down Rue de la Paix one day with Roy I was mumbling reminiscences of riding beside my battery of 155s. Suddenly he grabbed me by the arm. "Buck," he said, "that's poetry. Let's write a book. I'll illustrate it."

Of course, it wasn't poetry but it was verse the G.I.s of our day understood and the illustrations were art, if art is life — and death — as Roy had seen it.

We came back and went our separate ways. He now had a partner, Caroline Singer, a perfect complement. She was a California newspaper woman. They built a home, leaving it periodically to travel the Seven Seas — China, Japan, Europe again, India, Africa, criss-crossing out their books in perfect collaboration.

But Roy's book is his own story, a perfect American saga. As American as the wind that blows the Midwest corn fields; as foreign as the sounds and smells of Peking, Yokohama, the click of sabots in a tiny French village, varied as its ribbon-breasted diplomats, kings, Senegambanian belles and Teheran beauties. But it's more than that. It's the story of the making of a human philosophy old as the Mongolian mountains which are a part of its background, new as today.

"Left and right," writes Baldridge, "are not two evils, they are the same evil; and safety without the solidarity of class-conscious groups, screaming slogans, or party orders to lean upon, liberals must be staunch enough to walk a lonely road."

I know that Roy would like to have me conclude this review — if you want to call it that — with the following quotation which gave him his title, the biblical quotation:

"The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favor to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all."

I would not dare to doubt the words of the Preacher (Ecclesiastes IX:11) — but I know that here was a man who grasped time by the forelock, was able to hog-tie and saddle it, and one who took his chances if not without fear, at least without faltering.

NEWS REVIEW

Wallace Enters Race; Romanian King Leaves

Henry Wallace was deluding no one, not even himself, about his chances of being elected President of the United States in 1948 on a third party ticket when, with zealous idealism, he announced that he would be an independent candidate.

His entry into the contest, as he announced on a nation-wide broadcast from Chicago, was based upon his revulsion against "the bi-partisan reactionary war policy which is dividing the world into two armed camps."

Both Republicans and Democrats, he indicated, can be filed in the same political pigeon-hole because both stand for the bi-partisan policies which are leading the nation to war and depression.

"That menace can be met and overcome only by a new political alignment in America which requires a new political party," averred the former vice president.

Whether or not it could be met by a third party — a "peace party" — founded on the assumption that the U. S. must adopt a softer, more co-operative attitude toward Russia and at the same time reject universal military training and preparedness in general was a question that probably even history would not answer.

Wallace

Domestic political significance of Wallace's emergence as a third party candidate may be summed up briefly: Republicans like it, Democrats don't.

If Wallace can get on the ballots in one or more of the pivotal states — New York, Ohio, California, Pennsylvania or Illinois — he may be able to split off enough of the Democratic vote to swing the election to the Republican nominee, and if he makes his inherent devotion to Rooseveltian ideals stick, he may be able to corral a considerable section of those on the left side.

Always the eminent liberal, Wallace is angling for all or a portion of the left-wing Democratic vote.

One thing was certain. Wallace would have the hearty, although somewhat onerous, support of the Communists, no matter how much he might avow his own anti-Communist principles. He would have to go through the campaign with the Reds and fellow-travelers hanging to his coat-tails.

REPUBLIC:
Michael Quits

Communist-controlled eastern Europe cast off its last tie with a happier past when King Michael I of Romania made public his abdication from the throne.

His announcement had not yet fully registered on Romania's bewildered populace when the Communist government promptly proclaimed the nation a "popular democratic republic."

Thus, with the 26-year-old monarch's abdication, ended a dynasty established in 1866, the last monarchy in the Soviet sphere of influence in eastern Europe and the last throne held by the House of Hohenzollern.

Michael, as some romanticists would have had it, might have renounced his throne purely for the love of Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma and Denmark, but the Communist establishment of a "republic" and immediate reorganization of the government came too swiftly, too efficiently to lend much credence to that theory.

As the king himself pointed out in his abdication proclamation, he was resigning the throne because a monarchy no longer coincided with the "great political, economic and social changes" in Romania.

Nor was it logical for the Communists, grim advocates of their "international dictatorship of the proletariat," to be countenancing and cooperating with a hereditary monarchy. And Michael had acted as a sort of brake on some Communist actions in Romania.

NEW HIGH:
Farm Prices

U. S. farmers continued to set new records in price levels, both for the produce they sell and the goods they in turn buy.

It was reported by the department of agriculture that the general level of farm prices rose 5 per cent between mid-November and mid-December to a record high of 301 per cent of the 1909-14 average.

Previous all-time high was 289 per cent, set last October.

At the same time, prices paid by farmers for items for living and farm production also reached a new record. On December 15 the index of prices paid was 245 per cent above the 1909-14 average.

The farm price level in mid-December, the department said, was 14 per cent higher than January, 1947, and the index of prices paid 16 per cent higher.

Between mid-November and mid-December, average prices for virtually every group of farm commodities except fruit showed measurable increases.

London Braces

England is full of suspense but it isn't the kind that keeps a man's trousers up.

British braces (suspenders), made under a government order limiting the elastic to three inches at the back, have been the cause of a number of London breeches falling down and finally drove Historian Arthur Bryant to reporting his plight in a letter to the London Times.

In the past year, he said, he bought four pairs of braces. "After each occasion," lamented Bryant, "the braces have broken irretrievably within three months."

The Times, in a helpful mood, deplored the situation in an editorial:

"The Four Freedoms are a hollow mockery if our braces are going to be bursting all the time. No nation can be expected to hold up its head if it also is required to hold up its trousers."

PUSHBUTTON BILL-OF-FARE

Meatball Due To Be Electrified

The pushbutton may never replace the meatball, but with the rapid ascendancy of electric vending machines it is promising to exert a profound influence on the destiny of that spherical aggregation of ground beef, as well as on many another item in the American diet.

Even now plans have been drawn and preparations are being made by C-Eight laboratories in Newark, N. J., to open a retail store in Los Angeles where customers will be able to make a variety of purchases —from food and beverages to dry goods—simply by stepping up to an electrical vending machine, inserting the prescribed amount of money in the slot and pushing a few buttons.

This unique establishment, scheduled to open its doors in April, will be operated in Los Angeles on an experimental basis. If customers indicate that they are pleased with this brave new twist in merchandising, similar electric vending machine stores can be expected to spring up in other parts of the country.

Presupposing that such a trend is established, persons living in small or rural communities can look forward to seeing these robot sales clerks in their local stores around 1950.

The experimental store in Los Angeles will feature machines quivering with electrical impulses and ready to dispense at a touch such varied merchandise as bottled coffee, mouthwash, peanuts, fruit, juices, bread, canned goods, eggs, blouses, stockings, neckties and other ready-to-wear goods.

Still in the developmental stage are other pushbutton marvels which will accommodate deep-frozen foods or, to go to the other extreme, complete, cooked meals that will erupt from the vending machine piping hot and ready to serve instantly or in an hour or half-hour as you wish.

The deep-freeze and cooked foods machines, however, are still too expensive and complex for widespread use; so housewives can't look forward to being emancipated from standing over a hot stove all day for at least some time.

What happens to the sales clerk if electrical vending machines sweep the country on a mass scale? That is a question for which no one has come up with an answer so far. As a matter of fact, no one has started worrying about it yet.

SMALL TOWNS, U.S.A.

Rural Life Program Seeks Improved Standards of Living

By EARLE HITCH
Released by WNU Features.

Concerted action aimed to develop an improved rural life must be launched on a widespread scale if small town America is to survive. That is the motivating factor behind the rural life movement, an energetic program which now is getting under way throughout America and which eventually will attempt to reach all small towns and rural communities of the nation.

Aim of the program is a better rural life — an attempt to make the country a better place in which to live and work. Rural problems have been discussed for years, and various solutions have been proposed. Experience has shown that the best results come from local action, planned by the people on their home grounds.

Aroused Citizenry Needed.

Before action can be expected, community consciousness has to be aroused. There must be determination to act. Then plans have to be made. The plans that do the most good are made to fit the local situation. All rural communities do not need the same things, nor can they go about getting what they do need in the same ways.

Rural America At Stake — No. 2 In a Series

The rural life program is simply this — a recognition that the nation needs to add new features to its rural economy. This is because the types of rural labor are changing. Machinery has changed farming, and in some areas farm land has worn out. Some men who once worked at farming are having to turn to other occupations.

The present system of farming is far out of balance. Too many farmers are living on slim fare Of the 5,800,000 farmers in the United States only the top third are enjoying the present high-level incomes for agricultural produce. The lower third, about two million, are averaging no more than $400 a year. This sum does not provide an adequate standard of living for happiness and health.

Machinery is revolutionizing our farming system and our whole rural economy. Power is taking the place of men on U. S. farms, the plowman of old rapidly is vanishing from the scene.

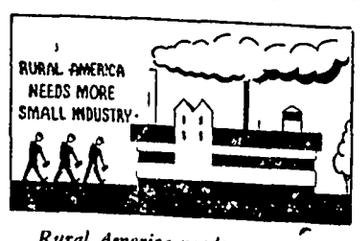
Cities, Too, Concerned.

From the standpoint of national stability there is urgent need for solutions which will prevent great numbers from being forced off the land. There is need to give those in the lower brackets encouragement and help to make them self sustaining. Growing numbers moving to cities add to job competition there, and make heavier unemployment risks in times of business slumps. Thus the cities as well as the rural areas have cause to be concerned.

Consequently leaders in public affairs are growing more disturbed as they witness:

1. The continuing shift of population from country to city.
2. The decline of the country church, which always has been a strong moral force in the nation.
3. A declining standard of living in many rural homes, from which comes the bulk of our population growth.

The government, acting through congress and the department of agriculture, has been giving help, and various organizations and agencies are following programs of their own. Among them are the Farm Bureau federations, the cooperatives, the Farmers' Union, the National Grange, and Protestant and Catholic churches acting through the town and country departments of the leading denominations.



Rural America needs new occupations and more small industries. New rural occupations must be developed to provide employment away from the fields.

HIGH-LEVEL INCOME FOR TOP THIRD
$900 A YEAR FOR MIDDLE THIRD
NO MORE THAN $400 FOR LOWEST THIRD.
5,800,000 FARMERS IN THE UNITED STATES

Income from farming is unevenly divided. Only the top third of the nation's 5,800,000 farmers are reaping the present high-level incomes for agricultural produce. The middle third are making about $900 a year while the lowest third average no more than $400 a year, according to estimates from census statistics based on 1944 reports.

All these organizations are agreed on general objectives. Briefly these objectives are:

1. To provide more opportunities for earning a good living in the country.
2. To establish better rural health and rural hospital services.
3. To provide more rural recreations and better uses for rural leisure.
4. To discover civic and cultural outlets that will add to a feeling of appreciation of the importance of country life and the country home.

The work to be done in this broad program does not concern farm people alone. Every small town has a stake in it. Whether the towns of the future grow in importance or languish depends on keeping a happy and satisfied population both in the towns themselves and the country roundabout.

Ways to do this are what the leaders of local community enterprise will have to discover. A knowledge of what has been done by communities that have made notable progress will be of interest to small communities everywhere, particularly those in a mood to do likewise.

Future articles in this series will tell about some outstanding small community programs.

Seamstress Cuts Police Uniforms And Tax Outlay

CHARLESTON, W. VA.—With her fast flying sewing machine, Mrs. Adana Summers is saving money for West Virginia taxpayers. Her job is to alter and make over uniforms worn by state police officers.

Each rookie trooper before going on duty receives $326.65 worth of clothing, including a number of articles discarded by older policemen. Mrs. Summers alters these leftovers to fit their new owners, at the same time checking to see that they are completely equipped with the buttons considered so essential to a smart looking officer.

Mrs. Summers, who worked as a machinist in an industrial plant during the war, admits that her job is sometimes tedious and exacting but insists that she prefers it to that of a secretary, taking shorthand notes or pounding the keys of a typewriter.

How well she is doing her job is shown in Capt. Harry C. Meyers' estimate that during a six-month period alterations and mending of uniforms saved West Virginia taxpayers approximately $2,000.

Doctor Includes Cows In 'Medical' Equipment

EUREKA, N. C.—Dr. Henderson Irwin, who insists he is just an old-fashioned country doctor, includes 34 cows in his "medical" equipment.

If a patient doesn't have a cow, the doctor lends him one. The patient gets the benefit of plenty of milk. The doctor gets a return on his investment in the form of all the calves.

"From a $150 cow I can sell the calf for $35, a good return," says Dr. Irwin.

Years of family practice have convinced him, the doctor says, that "a couple should be refused a marriage license unless they can say they have a bed, a stove and a cow."

Midnight Snacks Pay Collegian's Way

LAWRENCE, KAS. — Because college students still follow the old practice of nibbling late evening snacks while poring over studies, Elmo W. Geppelt, University of Kansas engineering student, is able to help finance his own education.

Geppelt, 24-year-old married veteran, decided last September that his fellow students would rather have food delivered than go out after it, so he went into the business of preparing the food and delivering it.

Now five student-owned cars make regular deliveries to 50 student living houses. Two men operate from each car, making trips each evening, Sunday through Thursday.

Geppelt's wife, Betty, a former Kansas university student, and six helpers prepare most of the food in the kitchen of the Geppelt home. Four part-time workers prepare sandwiches in a second kitchen.

Vegetable Loaf.
(Serves 6)

½ cup cooked peas
½ cup cooked string beans
½ cup chopped carrots
1½ cups milk
1 egg
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika

Press peas through a sieve, cut beans into small pieces, and combine all vegetables. Add milk, slightly beaten egg, crumbs and seasonings. Turn into a greased baking dish and bake in a moderate (350 degree) oven until firm. Serve with 2½ cups medium white sauce to which has been added 4 tablespoons of deviled ham. Blend thoroughly.

There are innumerable ways in which that good protein food, cheese, can stretch vegetables while substituting for meat. Here are several taste-tempting ideas.

Macaroni-Stuffed Peppers.
(Serves 6)

6 green peppers
1 cup cooked elbow macaroni
⅓ pound grated American cheese
1 cup cooked tomatoes
1 cup soft bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Cut a slice off the top of each pepper and cook in boiling salted water for 5 minutes. Drain and remove seeds. Mix remaining ingredients, saving ⅓ of cheese for top. Fill peppers with mixture, stand upright in pan and sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes.

Broccoli With Cheese.
(Serves 6)

1 onion, minced
6 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk
1 cup grated parmesan cheese
2½ pounds cooked broccoli
½ cup dry bread crumbs

Cook onion in 4 tablespoons of butter until tender, stir in flour and add milk gradually, stirring constantly. Add seasoning, egg yolk and cheese. Pour half of sauce into baking dish, arrange broccoli on top of sauce and cover with remaining sauce. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and dot with remaining butter. Bake in a hot (400 degree) oven about 20 minutes.

AID TO SPREADS

A little citrus juice mixed into many sandwich spreads not only improves the flavor but also thins the mixture for easier spreading. Try a dash of orange juice in cheese spreads, ham or peanut butter.

Farmers Declare All-Out War To End Predations of Coyotes

Nebraska Discovers Organized Hunts Are Effective Weapon Against Pests

WNU Features.

LINCOLN, NEB.—Farmers and ranchers are a patient and long-suffering people. It takes a lot of punishment to get their dander up but, once aroused, these people do not waste time getting to the source of their trouble.

This attribute has been demonstrated once again in Nebraska's total war on coyotes, a beast which has preyed on livestock, poultry and game ever since the Midwest was settled. His appetite for lambs, calves, chickens and pheasants, however, has gotten him into a peck of trouble in Nebraska

Alarmed at seeing their livestock and game dwindle away as a result of coyote predations, farmers and sportsmen, with the assistance and cooperation of the state game commission, have staged a series of organized coyote hunts. A record number of hunts was conducted last winter, but no accurate record is available of the number of coyotes killed or the square miles that have been rid of these predacious pests.

Midwest coyote populations reached an all-time peak during wartime shortages of manpower and shotgun shells. At the same time jackrabbits and cottontails, favorite food of coyotes, hit a low ebb of the population cycle. Deprived of a major item of natural diet, the coyotes increased their barnyard and game bird raids. With the return of G.I.s and a slight increase in shotgun shells, unrestricted war was declared on the coyote.

Lures Many Hunters.

One of the biggest hunts on record took place last winter near Bladen, Neb., when nearly 2,000 farmers, ranchers and sportsmen scoured the coyotes from a 144 square mile area.

After weeks of planning for the hunt, the male populations of several small towns and hundreds of farmsteads were transported in stock trucks to strategic positions around the hunt area. At zero hour lines of men moved in toward a predetermined central location, driving the coyotes ahead.

Exacting discipline on 2,000 hunters scattered over a 48-mile circle was maintained by the use of six airplanes Small, privately owned planes circled the hunt area, following the advance of the lines. Where a group lagged behind schedule the planes flew in front of the men as a signal to speed up the cadence. Another plane signal was devised for lines getting too far ahead

Shotguns could be heard popping off along the lines whenever a coyote flushed from cover or a jackrabbit skipped out of a weed patch. But when the lines reached the coyote kill area, hunters stood elbow to elbow and banged away until the coyotes were filled with shotgun pellets.

Estimates of the total coyote kill differ, but it is certain that coyotes will be scarce for a while around that locality.

Although organized coyote hunting destroys vast numbers of these creatures, there is a terrific toll of rabbits. And killing rabbits wholesale is very apt to direct the coyote's attention more keenly to barnyard raids.

Another unfortunate effect of mass hunts involves pheasants. These birds fly and run ahead of the hunt lines until they collapse, literally, from exhaustion. A few birds, at least, have been known to die from the ordeal. Occasional poaching doesn't help matters.

Despite these handicaps, land operators and sportsmen will continue to make forays on the coyote, and game officials insist there can be no question of their right to do so.

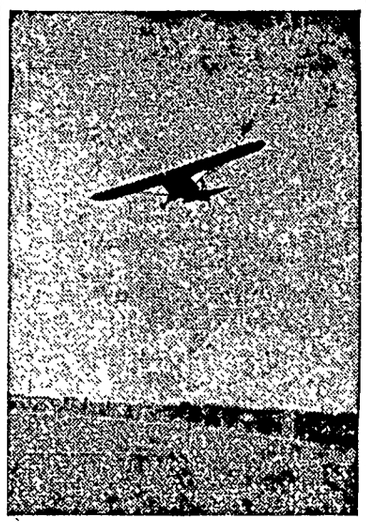
Other Control Methods.

There are other methods of coyote control which may be even more exciting than organized drives. Ranchers up in the sandhill country use light pickup trucks to cruise over the hills in search of prey. When a coyote gets up he is chased with the truck until a fence or a stream halts the chase. At this juncture dogs, which have been riding expectantly in the back of the truck, are turned loose. In short order the coyote becomes a well-chewed mass of hair, flesh and bone.

Another sport has evolved with the return of flying veterans. Two men in a small plane can kill a lot of coyotes in a few hours' time. One airborne hunter pilots the plane low over the ground, fairly hedge-hopping along until a coyote is flushed.

Once spotted from the air, a coyote's chances of survival are remote. As soon as the plane can be maneuvered into shotgun range, the other hunter lets go with both barrels, if necessary, and probably holters "Scratch one coyote!" Thirty-four coyotes were killed in a single flight within a few miles of the Lincoln city limits.

THE HUNTERS MASS . . . This army of hunters, many of them armed, gathers for final instructions before an organized coyote hunt in Nebraska. The coyote doesn't have a chance against a crowd of hunters like this one.



ON PATROL . . . Small planes like this one are used to keep lines in order. Aviators also hunt down the coyotes and frequently fire a load of buckshot at the beasts.

Although it is certain that coyotes prey on livestock and game, very little is known as far as factual food-habits data are concerned. There is one way of finding out for sure what a wild animal eats, and that is a posthumous examination of its stomach. A few years ago Charles C. Sperry of the fish and wildlife service did considerable research on coyote food habits. Sperry collected the stomachs of 8,399 coyotes killed in 17 western states, and made an analysis of the contents. Since these coyotes were killed during various seasons of the year, the analysis gives a fairly clear picture of the year-around diet.

The breakdown of the stomach contents by percentages included: Rabbits 33.25 per cent; carrion 25.17 per cent; rodents 17.52 per cent; domestic livestock (calves, lambs, poultry) 13.59 per cent; big game (fawns, et cetera) 3.63 per cent; birds (game and songbirds) 2.92 per cent; fish, frogs, et cetera, 0.08 per cent, and vegetable matter 1.75 per cent.

Among the oddities found by Sperry were such diverse articles as sticks, gravel, paper, string and leather.

As these stomachs were from coyotes killed in western states, the figures obtained would not necessarily apply to Midwestern coyotes. Work now is under way by Nebraska game authorities to get the story on Midwest coyotes' diet. They anticipate finding plenty of game and young livestock.

Father and Son Team Together To Crack Safes

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Operating with the full knowledge and consent of police, an unusual father and son combination is engaged in the business of cracking safes—but it's all legal.

The father, Charles A. Fowler, has been breaking into Utah safes, legally and by request, for more than 30 years. He estimates that over those 30 years he has cracked more than 6,000 strongboxes.

When the son, Blair B. Fowler, went to college, he studied to become a mechanical engineer. But when he got out of school he decided to follow in his father's fingerprints and become a safecracker.

Most of the safecracking jobs come to the father and son locksmith team from merchants who have lost or forgotten their combinations.

But illegal burglars bring a lot of business to the legal breaker-in-ers. Some burglars who try to break into a safe but can't do it succeed only in wrecking the box so badly that the regular locks won't work. Then a call goes out for the Fowlers.

Few safes are made that won't respond to the Fowlers' drills and cutting torches. The few that won't work are the new jobs made of manganese steels, which Blair Fowler says are "fireproof, drillproof and burnproof."

The incident best remembered by the Fowlers is one which occurred when they were returning to Salt Lake City from a safe opening job in the southern part of Utah.

Their tools were piled on the back seat of their car—drills, sledge hammers and blow torches.

They stopped and picked up a hitchhiker. The transient climbed into the rear seat and then paused when he saw the tools. He asked: "What do you gents do?" Blair Fowler nonchalantly told him, "We are safecrackers."

The hitchhiker quickly backed out and ran away.

Atomic Mail Order House Booms

Well, prices keep going up and hemlines keep coming down but you still can get $1,000,000 worth of carbon radioisotopes for only $50.

As Chancellor Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago put it in commenting on the unpredictable benefits of scientific research, "there's no inflation in isotopes."

The chancellor was reminding materialists everywhere that by-products of scientific endeavor often turn out to be more important than the original goal.

Radiocarbon is a case in point. Scientists who developed the first atomic energy pile at the University of Chicago were searching for a bomb. They found the bomb all right, but they also found a revolutionary method of producing radioactive substances.

The result today, less than five years later, is an atomic mail order house at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Instead of the incredibly expensive cyclotron method, scientists at Oak Ridge merely bake elements in an "atomic oven" and they come out radioactive.

Of course at $1,000,000 a millicurie (an incredibly tiny scientific measurement) radiocarbon was out of question for everyday research purposes. At $50 a millicurie it has become a most important tool for medical, industrial and scientific research.

This strange mail order house has a regular price list and the demand for its products is brisk. Radiogold selling for $12 a millicurie, radiosilver for $15, radiozinc for $33 and radiophosphorus for $1.10, are examples.

In all, 90-odd radioisotopes now are being produced at Oak Ridge. Their use in solving problems now blocking advances in medical, industrial and scientific knowledge offers bright hope for everyone living in this atomic age.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: II Corinthians 5:20 to 6:10; Hebrews 11.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 12: 9-21.

When We Work With God

Lesson for January 25, 1948

DR. E. STANLEY JONES was in Atlanta on one of his several visits, and some of us were asking him about his notable and unique experience as a missionary in the Orient. "If you had it all to go over, Dr. Jones, would you devote your life to the peoples of faraway Asia, or would you choose to live in America with its abundance of good things?" he was asked. Quick as a flash of lightning he replied: "If I had a thousand lives to give, they would all gladly go to the wistful souls of Asia."

Dr. Newton

Paul would have been enheartened in the day that he wrote II Corinthians 5:20 to 6:10, and Romans 12:9-21, to have heard someone talk as Dr. Jones talked that afternoon, for in our lesson for Sunday, Paul is summoning every Christian to the highest possible commitment to the will of God as we go forth in the task to beseech all men to be reconciled unto God through Jesus Christ, who hath taken upon himself the iniquity of us all, "that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

Thus we come to see the significance and the meaning of the memory verse for Sunday's lesson, "We are fellow workmen for God," I Corinthians 3 9

PEOPLE WHO WORK WITH GOD

READ Hebrews' 11th chapter for a picture of some of the noble souls who really worked with God, by faith, as the writer delights to put it.

Abraham, for example, "went out, not knowing whither he went," but when he came to the end of life's day, he was accounted the friend of God. Moses, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, endured as seeing him who is invisible."

HOW WE WORK WITH GOD

READ again that eleventh chapter of Romans to discover how the men and women named there worked with God. Two words will quickly come to light — faith and obedience. They believed God, and they obeyed God. Junior boys and girls will do well to recall some of the heroes of history — men like Washington and Lincoln and Lee—and in every instance you will discover that they, too, believed God and obeyed God. Remember the story of Washington kneeling in prayer in the snow at Valley Forge?

We cannot work with God unless and until we believe and obey him. "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" You cannot please your earthly father unless you believe him and obey him.

GOOD WORKMEN ESSENTIAL

WE COME now to the deeper implications of the lesson, revealed in II Corinthians 5:20 to 6:10. "We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain; but in all things approving ourselves in much patience, in afflictions, in distresses, in watchings, by kindness, by love unfeigned, by the power of God. . . ."

Here is the acid test of doing the work of an ambassador of Christ — we must first be fully committed to him before we can persuade others to accept him as Saviour and Lord. We shall not have better homes and better churches until we first have better Christians. We shall not have better business until we first have better business men.

And the only way by which we become good workmen is through the redeeming, transforming grace of the Lord Jesus Christ.

JOY OF WORKING WITH GOD

WHY did Dr. E. Stanley Jones answer so quickly about giving a thousand lives to the benighted, wistful souls of Asia? Because he had discovered the unspeakable joy of working with God in reconciling men unto him. The largest, surest wages in this world is the experience of working for and with God. "What I kept, I lost; what I gave, I have."

Do you believe it? It is difficult to believe until you try it. Indeed, I would say that it is beyond all imagination to grasp the meaning of working with God. You have to take Christ at exactly what he meant when he said, "Come and see."

"When we walk with the Lord, in the light of his word, what a glory he sheds on our way!"

One of the queer tricks played by magnetic storms is to cause a conversation on a telephone line to jump to a live radio line near by and be broadcast without the knowledge of the two persons talking.

This occurred in New York a short time ago when such a connection caused an intimate phone call to be heard on a coast-to-coast program.

SENIOR NEWS

As reported by Alice

Semester tests are over and we hope it's the last one for us.

English, History and Geography are the large classes each having thirty or better.

Those of us that are taking Shorthand find it quite different than we expected. One good thing about it you don't have to know how to spell.

Those in Speech class are taking up declamatory speeches. They have to give them before assembly.

In Bookkeeping we are studying depreciations; you know that deducting for wear on certain items. This school could get quite a depreciation on the study hall table.

KILLED

An accidental gun-shot wound, plus a flat tire, combined to end the life of Louis Amling, 21, of Guttenberg. He was shot in the abdomen while engaged in cleaning a gun, with his brother. On the way to the hospital the car in which he was riding lost a tire. Despite quick assistance by the highway patrol, the youth was dead before the party could proceed on its way to the hospital.

POOR GERMINATION IN SOYBEAN SEED

Sylwester Urges Testing All Seed Before Planting Time In Spring

Farmers planning to grow soybeans this year will do well to have their seed tested before planting it, E. P. Sylwster, acting head of the Iowa State College Seed Laboratory, warned this week. It may mean the difference between an 80 and a 100 percent crop next fall.

Sylwester has ample reason to back up his warning. Samples of soybeans tested so far this year at the laboratory have germinated unevenly and sometimes very poorly. The seedlings lack vitality. In many instances they are unable to discard the seed coat.

Blames Weather

Sylwester thinks the extremely hot and dry growing conditions under which the soybeans matured last fall may account for this lack of vitality.

However, the situation is not alarming, he says, if the soybean seed is tested before it is planted. If a farmer knows beforehand that his bean seed will germinate unevenly, he can increase the rate of seeding to make up for the lowered rate of germination. In that way farmers can get a good stand even with poor seed. Heavy stands mean cleaner fields and bigger yields.

Send To Seed Lab

The seed laboratory will test seed for Iowa farmers. Sylwester says to set aside seed for planting now, take a good representative sample(about one pound) and send it to the Seed Laboratory at Iowa State College.

Additional information on how to take the sample or how to send it in is available at the county extension director's office or can be had by writing directly to the seed laboratory.

Miss Helen Harberts, 84, long time resident of Belmond, was burned to death when her home in which she lived alone caught fire and burned completely at 4:30 a. m. Friday. Her body was not recovered until 4 hours later.

When the fire department arrived the heat was so intense that nothing could be done to save the house or any of the contents, and it was not until about 8:30 a. m. that it was possible to remove the body which was badly burned.

SET GOAL OF HALF MILLION GARDENS

Iowa Will Need Them To Cut Home. Food Costs And For World Aid

Half a million home gardens in 1948 has been set as Iowa's share of the national Freedom Garden campaign for this year.

The campaign, which calls for some 20 million gardens to be grown in the nation, is planned to help relieve pressure on the family pocketbook and, at the same time, make more food available to a starving world.

Value High

With half of a worker's wages going for food these days, garden stuffs will cut grocery costs, points out L. C. Grove, extension horticulturist. He figures a backyard-size garden can produce $50 to $100 worth of garden stuff a season. And a larger space will run that figure up.

The first task for the home gardner is to get the Freedom Garden plot located. He will have the cooperation of service clubs, civic organizations and garden committees set up in each community. The garden committee will make surveys of available land in each community.

Land Problem

Finding land may not be easy, Grove warns. Nearly all tillable land is producing crops of some kind and many homes now rest on what were vacant lots a year ago. But land can still be found.

Railroads are releasing land on their right-of-ways for the gardening purposes. Wasteland around factories can also be used. Then areas planned for other crops may be rented too, provided rents and permission from owners can be arranged early enough. Garden committees will have a lot to do towards finding the land for gardening, then making it available.

You can't get started too soon in locating that 1948 family garden plot. By being ready with plot, seed and tools that first nice spring day, you will not only help your own family but will help the whole world and its food program.

Postal Authorities Warn Of Old Swindle Being Worked

KNOW YOUR TRAFFIC LAWS

A STATE LAW: "Upon the immediate approach of any authorized emergency vehicle giving audible signal by sound, the operator of every other vehicle shall immediately operate the same to a position as near as possible and parallel to the right-hand edge or curb of the roadway, clear of any intersection of highways, and shall stop and remain in such position unless otherwise directed by a traffic officer, until such authorized emergency shall have passed."

When a motorist hears a siren, he should immediately pull over to the curb to allow the emergency vehicle to pass. It may be an ambulance rushing someone to the hospital, a fire truck hurrying to the scene of a blaze, or a police car on the trail of a criminal. The emergency vehicle has right-of-way because its mission at the time is urgent.

This law does not operate to relieve the driver of an authorized emergency vehicle from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons using the highway. It is advisable not to follow closely behind any emergency vehicle.

SEE RETURN OF SPANISH SWINDLE FRAUD LETTERS

Chief Inspector J. J. Doran of the U. S. Post Office Department warns patrons of the revival of the age-old "Spanish Prisoner Swindle," stating that such "swindle" letters have been received in this country from Mexico in increased numbers during the last several months. Although the Post Office Inspection Service have no knowledge that anyone has received such letters in this vicinity, patrons are cautioned to be on the watch for them and bring any received to the attention of their local postmaster, who will in turn forward them to the proper authorities.

The "Spanish Swindle" letter usually originates in Mexico, and is supposedly written by someone in debtor's prison who claims to have hidden a large sum of money in a trunk deposited in a U. S. customhouse. The letter begins by asking if the addressee would be willing to help save this "treasure" for the sake of the future of the writer's "dear daughter" as well as his own "very existance," the reward for such favor to be one-third of the treasure. Amounts usually mentioned as being held in the trunk range from $325,000 to $385,000. The recipient of the letter is advised that upon receipt of "undeniable evidence" from the writer it will be necessary for him to go to the foreign country with a sum of money to be used in securing release of the trunk from the customhouse. If the recipient replies to the "come-on" letter, he will receive specific instructions for making the trip, as well as faked newspaper clippings and legal appers intended to substantiate the story. If he goes as directed, he will be relieved of his funds, by trickery or by violence, after his arrival.

Apparently the swindlers are currently selecting names and addresses from "Who's Who in America" and from lists of professional people, particularly the doctors and dentists.

REMOVE LIMBS, VINES FROM ELECTRIC WIRES

To prevent disruption of your electric service, S. S. DeForest, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College recommends that you keep tree limbs, bushes and vines from growing into your service wires between the meter pole and the house or other buildings.

This condition will cause the insulation on wires to wear through, resulting in a short circuit, and disruption, not only of your power system, but also those of other members on the line.

If the trimming is particularly difficult, call a lineman. They have equipment to trim high branches and to get into hard-to-get places, DeForest says.

Don't go beyond your transformer when doing trimming, he emphasizes. That work is too dangerous, and should be left to linemen who have the equipment and experience for such work.

Recently Emil Natelle of Panora, who had not seen any member of his immediate family since leaving Italy as a boy 44 years ago, walked into a Chicago grocery store in search of a man believed to be his uncle. The proprietor told him that the uncle had died; also that the deceased was the proprietor's uncle. It developed that Mr. Natelle and the proprietor of the grocery store, Ben Natelle were brothers. The Iowan also located another brother, John, who is also a Chicago resident.

OUR OWN REVIEW OF 1947

The year of 1947 was not bad and not good. Looking back it seems to have been a combination of suspensions by Happy Chandler, federal probes, wild swings by Larry MacPhail, Big Four adjournments and appeals to the public to eat Tuesday's chicken pie on Thursday. Washington abandoned the gold standard and substituted creamery butter. Harry Truman got a spaniel when what he needed was a bloodhound.

Elizabeth and Philip got married, thus lifting 1947 out of the complete flop class, putting romance, sentiment and love above spheres of influence, vindictive speeches and general hatreds. For a brief moment the world took the shuttle back to Fairy Tale Heights.

Edward Pauley took a high federal office with the distinct understanding anything of importance would be kept from him. Elliott Roosevelt sold, for one dollar each, Christmas trees that his pop had planted years ago. This resulted in a nationwide wish that Elliott was in the meat and egg business.

Henry Wallace developed a type of corn never developed before by grafting an ear of hokum with the stalk of common native baloney. General Electric produced artificial snow. General Eisenhower developed artificial reluctance, General Marshall developed artificial hope and Marshal Stalin developed artificial logic. The all-hot went to 20 cents. A way was found to make hamburgers out of everything except meat.

Two young fliers flew around the world in one-motor airplanes but didn't get much publicity due to the fact they didn't crash. Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, two other fliers, flew around a congressional committee and crashed abruptly, thus getting more publicity than they desired. Tojo said the Japanese war was his own idea and that the emperor thought it was a movie until the fighting had been on for two years.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

SCRIPTURE: Isaiah 53:4-6; Matthew 1:21; 5:17; 20 26-28; Luke 19:1-10; Hebrews 4:15, 16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 1-12.

His Work of Salvation

Lesson for February 1, 19

PROFESSOR WILLIAM J... was once asked to give a definition of Christianity. He replied, "I doubt if there is a satisfactory definition of Christianity, but I can give you an example of it — Dr. Phillips Brooks."

Dr. Newton

Our lesson for Sunday tells us many things about Jesus, his work, his salvation. But before we understand what he does, we must look again at what he was and is. We begin with Isaiah 53:1-12. Who can read those majestic words without tears? And then we come to Matthew 1:21, "And thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Then go on to Luke 19:1-10, Matthew 5:17-28, Luke 19:1-10, Hebrews 4:15, 16.

The key verse, it seems to me, in Sunday's lesson is Luke 19:10, "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost." Here is the key, and every door will open in this lesson.

JESUS HELPS ZACCHAEUS

IN THE first ten verses of the 19th chapter of Luke we have the fascinating story of Jesus calling Zacchaeus down from the tree, forgiving his sins, and entering into his house. The disciples complained that Jesus had gone to lunch with a man that was a sinner. It was then that the Master declared, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Zacchaeus is but an illustration of what Jesus seeks to do for every man. He has not come to save a few, but "whosoever will." He will not force himself upon any man, but he waits in hope of saving every man.

The "worst" boy in your community may be saved — will be saved — if only he will do as Zacchaeus did, come to Jesus, just as he was, confessing his sin and believing on the Lord Jesus Christ.

HOW JESUS CHANGES PEOPLE

JESUS saved Zacchaeus by not only giving his sins and putting a new attitude in his heart. He had harmed many people, or at least he thought he had. They would not only give him.

He may not have asked them to forgive him, but when he met Jesus and was changed by the redeeming grace of the Saviour, he proposed to restore fourfold wherever he may have wronged anyone. More than that, Zacchaeus offered to give the half of his goods to the poor. He gave convincing evidence that he was a changed man. So will every man who believes in Jesus.

But we must remember this, that Zacchaeus bared his soul to the Saviour in repentance of his sins and believed on him as the Son of God before he manifested a changed attitude.

THE PURPOSE OF JESUS

RECALL again the words of the angel to Joseph, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." He was to save sinners like Zacchaeus that Jesus came down from heaven and died on the cross. That was and is his purpose.

"He went about doing good, for God was with him," Acts 10:38.

We shall never understand the work of Jesus until we come to see him at work in every man and amongst all mankind to do the will of the Father in saving any and all who will come to him in faith believing.

"SO SEND I YOU"

JESUS calls upon you and upon me and upon every follower of his to accept as the central purpose of our lives this mission of winning lost souls unto him. "As the Father hath sent me, so send I you."

I sat in a boat with two prominent business men, fishing in a private lake one afternoon last November. Mr. Asa G. Candler of Atlanta and I were guests of Mr. Carr P. Collins of Dallas. We were at his Wild Briar farm, a few miles from Dallas. We were talking about the plight of the world. Mr. Collins said: "What is man worth if we think of it apart from the purpose of God? Until we come back to the words of Jesus, 'I send I you,' we cannot hope to improve the sorrowful plight of our frightened day and generation. All men are lost until they come to know him as Saviour."

Let this testimony of one of God's gentlemen be heard and heeded by laymen and preachers alike, and fear will give way to faith, and the kingdoms of this earth will become the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

"Who dat?" stammered one of the Negroes.

"Why, you wall-eyed ignoramus," rejoined the other, "dat am de President ob de United States!"

"Yeah?" said the first Negro. "What he done?"

THE FICTION CORNER

WILL OF THE WIND

By WILLIAM BRANDON

MRS. HACKETT found her in the bedroom crying. She stood in the doorway and said grimly: "I came in to borrow some sugar, Sylvie. The door was open so I just walked in. Now what on earth's wrong with you?"

Sylvia sat up and dried her eyes. Her starched gingham skirt was wrinkled and her black hair was tangled and disordered. A curling strand of it hung down beside her nose like an ink stain. A pin had come out of her imitation lace collar and it had fallen down to catch in the red buckle at her waist. She said shakily, "Hello, Mrs. Hackett. N-othing."

Mrs. Hackett drew down the corners of her mouth. "Nothing, my foot. It's because of Chip wanting to pull up stakes and go to Canton. Isn't it? Of course it is."

Sylvia slapped the lock of hair out of her eyes. "I won't be a boomer's wife!" she flared. "I won't!"

"Mm," Mrs. Hackett said sourly. "'A boy's will is the wind's will.' That's a poem. It's the truest thing in the world. Don't do no good to fight against it. Remember that and you'll have it easier."

"I won't be a boomer's—b-boomer's wife! I won't drag around to one mill after another all my life, and never have anything, no home, and no—no nothing! I won't!"

"Well, it's his job, if he wants to throw it away."

"It isn't! It's just as much mine as it is his! I don't believe in that old idea that a woman's just a—a slave, to follow a man around at whatever he happens to want to do!"

"Oh, you don't," Mrs. Hackett said. "And just what can you do about it?"

Sylvia bowed her head and scrubbed unhappily at her cheeks with her handkerchief. "I don't know," she sobbed.

"Of course you don't. You're nothing but a child." Mrs. Hackett sniffed. "You'd be twenty years finding out what to do and by that time it's too late to do you any good. Unless there's somebody around to tell you to begin with. Somebody who knows."

Sylvia was not impressed. "What could you tell me, Mrs. Hackett? What could anyone do? I've argued with him until I'm almost crazy but he—he doesn't even listen any more. He's got his mind set on moving on, to something different that won't be any different at all, and then he'll want to go again, and—"

"'A boy's will is the wind's will,'" said Mrs. Hackett. "That's what the poem says. It's just as true of a man or an old man, for that matter. The older they get the truer it gets, I reckon. Only they kind of give up trying to do anything about it after so long a time." She pushed up her lower lip and looked down her nose at Sylvia. "Like Mr. Hackett."

Sylvia looked up, startled. "You mean Mr Hackett used to — want to—"

"He was the hardest man to hold down in this town. He got tired of everything, that was his trouble. It's a sort of laziness, that's all it is. But he stuck here. He stuck, all right."

"Why?" Sylvia wailed. "What did you do?"

"Well," Mrs. Hackett said, "you can take it for what it's worth, Sylvia. It worked with Mr. Hackett, I know that."

"But what was it?"

"Whenever he worked himself up to a pitch about cutting loose and chasing away some place after something he thought was better, I simply gave him his way."

Sylvia looked disappointed and puzzled. "Oh."

"But," Mrs. Hackett said profoundly, "he didn't know it. I took him on a trip. Just a week or so. And I kept him on the jump every minute of it. I always liked little trips around, anyway. Well, by the time that man would get home again he'd be so tired of jumping around that he wouldn't have left for a pension. That," Mrs. Hackett said, "is something you find out about men, Sylvia. They like to start but they like getting back a whole lot more."

Sylvia said doubtfully, "It doesn't sound like Chip would—"

"Maybe he wouldn't. I'm the last person in the world to try to give folks advice, Sylvia. Nobody wants it and I guess everyone has to sew his own seam anyway. But Mr. Hackett says they're shutting down for a week for the millwright's gang, and if Chip was to spend that week in a car bouncing along from one place to another, without even a chance to catch his breath . . . Well, 'a boy's will is the wind's will,' and the wind can change in a minute."

"But what if he wouldn't want to go?"

"Mm. You tell him you want a little vacation before you move to Canton. If he thinks you've given in about that he'll take you. You try it and see."

They went up into Michigan, west to Wisconsin, down through Minnesota and Iowa and St. Louis to Memphis, east to Knoxville and up through Louisville to come home. They were gone six days. Each day Sylvia had them up and driving at daylight and she kept on the job, circuiting the sights at the next stop, until late at night. She called upon Chip to stop often at roadside stands where she purchased caryed ornaments and bumpy pottery.

She plied him with hot dogs, soft drinks and bad coffee. She was surprised and delighted at the glazed look that appeared in his eyes on the third day.

Mrs. Hackett came over the day after they returned. She said, "Well!" and paused expectantly, holding the cup of sugar in both hands.

"He went back to work today," Sylvia said. There was a listless note in her voice. "He hasn't said anything about going to Canton for days."

"Mm! And what did he say when he got home?" She pursed her lips. "That he never thought it would look so good to him?"

Sylvia nodded. She sat down on a kitchen chair and swung one foot and watched it pensively. "Just exactly," she said.

"You won't even be able to get him to stir out of the house to a picture show for a month. I told you. Wind's will, that's the poem. They're all alike." She put the cup of sugar on the kitchen cabinet and looked at Sylvia and frowned. "But I wouldn't say you look so happy about it, Sylvie. But you're tired."

Sylvia stopped swinging her foot and rested her chin on her hands. She sighed and said, "Only of this town, I guess. I was just thinking, when we came back yesterday, and it looked so . . . so old and so shabby and dull and tiresome . . . and I thought that we'll spend all our lives here."

Mrs. Hackett drew back and regarded her and then said again defensively, "You're just tired, Sylvie."

Sylvia looked up and her eyes were sparkling. "But I'm not," she said. "I had a wonderful time."

They went up into Michigan, west to Wisconsin, down through Minnesota and Iowa and St. Louis to Memphis.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

© WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Hybrid in Politics, Too

ASIDE from some possible animosity and resentment against President Truman engendered when the President kicked him out of the cabinet for refusing to "play on the team," Henry Wallace is as dead serious and sincere as a man of his mercuric temperament could be in his independent and forlorn bid for the presidency, your Home Town Reporter is convinced.

This column often has lauded some of Wallace's ideas, and you just cannot shrug or laugh off some of the ideals for which he stands. For this reason it is all the more pitiful that his action may defeat the very purposes he wishes to achieve. But his politics is as hybrid as the seed corn he raises, and his announcement speech and platform are confused and contradictory.

WALLACE

His charge that the Marshall plan bypasses the United Nations was debated freely on the floor of the senate along with the emergency relief for western Europe. It was deemed impractical by both Democrats and Republicans with three exceptions, Taylor of Idaho, the cowboy senator who may be Wallace's running mate; Pepper of Florida, and Langer of North Dakota.

With Russia using every effort to defeat the plan and possessed of the veto, it would be impossible to use the United Nations for the purpose at this time.

Wallace would have this country disarm and he denounces military training, yet he would have the United Nations with an "international police force stronger than the military establishment of any nation." He utterly ignores the patient and conscientious efforts of our state department and the United Nations, which for two years have sought to secure international control of atomic energy as the first essential step toward disarmament — all blocked by Russia.

Effect of Candidacy

Republicans are gleeful that the Wallace campaign will hurt the Democratic chances of electing President Truman. Your Hometown Reporter is inclined to take the opposite view. For the past several campaigns the GOP has effectively used the threat of "communism" to keep independent voters away from the Democratic party. With Wallace coralling the entire Commie vote in this country and the enthusiastic huzzah of Communists in Russia, Germany and France, the communistic onus is removed from the Democratic party.

The so-called true liberal anti-Communists in Americans for Democratic Action have denounced Wallace's candidacy. But where Wallace may hurt the Democrats is with the Negro vote.

If he can stir up enough fire in the abuse of civil rights on such issues as segregation, the poll tax and the FEPC, he could take Negro votes away from the Democratic party in Indiana, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania and California.

Otherwise there is just as much chance of him driving more isolationist and independent conservatives into the Democratic column than the liberals and the so-called "lunatic fringe" he may take away.

If, as it looks now, the national income continues on its present level this year, it is almost certain that congress will pass and President Truman will sign a tax reduction measure.

Veteran Solons

Three men in the senate have seen more than 25 years of continuous service. They are Senators McKellar of Tennessee, since 1917; Capper of Kansas, since 1919, and George of Georgia, since 1922. Eleven men in the house have seen a quarter century of continuous service. They are Sabath of Illinois, since 1907; Doughton of North Carolina, since 1911; Rayburn of Texas, since 1913; Vinson of Georgia, since 1914; Bland of Virginia, since 1918; Knutson of Minnesota and Lea of California, since 1917; Drewry of Virginia, since 1920; Reed of New York, since 1919; Gifford of Massachusetts, since 1922, and Rankin of Mississippi, since 1921.

New Parity Formula

Farm economists are looking with interest at a new form of parity. It is a formula developed to control the milk price in the Boston area and is said to be a yardstick which might be applied to other farm produce. It is rather complicated but involves a formula which gears the price to rise and fall with cost of production, general wholesale prices and business volume. It is a new concept of agricultural pricing.

WAS THIS THE MOST CHARMING WOMAN?

You can pick up almost any woman's magazine and read an article about the most charming woman that ever lived. One writer will select a movie actress like Ingrid Bergman. Another writer will point to the fact that the Duchess of Windsor is the most charming, magnetic woman. Imaginative writers go all the way back to Cleopatra in making their nominations.

It seems to me, however, that, everything considered, the most charming woman who ever lived was not a movie actress, an Egyptian queen, or the heroine of a popular novel. She was instead a mild, middle-aged woman who lived in Paris around the middle of the Nineteenth century.

Her name was Madame Recamier, and although she left behind nothing but an exquisite legend "as of a rose that had bloomed for a while in a garden and vanished," men and women still praise her.

The secret of Madame Recamier's charm was that she put herself always in the other person's place. "She was an enchanting listener," one of her admirers said. She was. She rarely spoke herself. But she did something far more important—she contrived to make you say bright and witty things.

She had tremendous tact. When you called at her home, she smiled graciously, made you feel more welcome than you'd ever felt anywhere before. She wasn't flowery or extravagant about it. It was the way she said what she said rather than the words she used.

One of her friends, the great French author Sainte-Beuve, wrote on the day after her death, "She would have liked to stop everything at April — her heart remained at early Spring."

What did she offer these persons that they loved her so? Not wealth. Hers was lost. Not position. She lived in a four-room flat. Then what? The sheer charm and power of a perfect personality.

Jeanne Francoise Recamier was her full name. She lived in Paris from 1777 to 1849. To this day when writers want to set up a standard of charm and personality, they choose her as their model.

IT'S MIDNIGHT. It's an emergency. How to "flag down" a passing motorist? Your flashlight is your best bet. Swing your flashlight across the road . . . with the beam down! Be sure it's powered with "Eveready" batteries . . . powerful, dependable, they outlast all other brands!*

KEEP YOUR LIGHT MOVING, says the AAA. Standing about 50 feet to the rear of your car, wave the flashlight across the road . . . with the beam down! DON'T throw the beam into the eyes of the oncoming motorist! A light in a driver's eyes can cause a serious accident!

KEEP A "DANGER SIGNAL" HANDY! Red means "danger." So here's what you can do to turn a flashlight into a danger signal. Roll a sheet of red cellophane around the head of the light. Hold it in place with a rubber band. Twist the ends of cellophane to resemble a flare. Keep an "Eveready" flashlight handy.

Proof! . . . in the laboratory, in your own flashlight . . .

"EVEREADY" BATTERIES OUTLAST ALL OTHER BRANDS!*

● Brighter light, longer life! That's what you want in a flashlight battery—and that's what you get with "Eveready" brand batteries. Laboratory tests prove it. And the best "laboratory" of all—your own flashlight—proves it! That's why "Eveready" batteries outsell all other brands—because they outlast all other brands!*

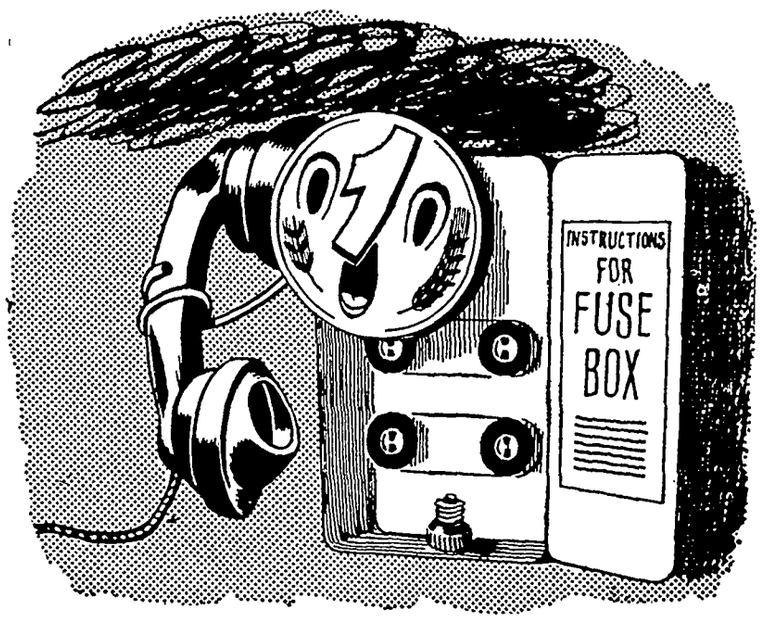
The Penny that Called the Fire Department



Electric wires are like water pipes. To get more electricity, you must have bigger wires. Overloaded wires heat up — and that's where fuses come into the picture.

Fuses are like safety valves. Fuses blow out BEFORE lines become overloaded enough to heat up. When you put a penny behind a fuse, as a stop-gap measure, you're asking for a fire by throwing out the only warning you have. Make sure that your fuses are NEVER larger than the capacity of your wiring (15 Amp. Fuses for No. 14 wire, 20 Amp. for No. 12 wire, etc.). Keep an ample supply of fuses handy. When fuses blow, check the entire circuit. You may be overloading it . . . or have a shorted wire somewhere. Remove obviously defective equipment. Then, if the replacement fuse blows, heed the warning. A call for your electrician is a better investment than the penny that calls the fire department.

BLISS OUTLINES 1948 FARM PLAN

Save the soil, raise more hogs and pay debts is the advice R. K. Bliss of the Iowa Agricultural Extension Service has given Iowa farmers for 1948. It comes following one of the most hectic yet successful years for agriculture.

He points out that our soils are now short of humus, the necessary welding material that keeps them from washing. At the same time it is evident that this coming year's acreage of corn, oats and beans may be the largest on record. Bliss believes another year of heavy cropping may result in a serious loss in soil fertility through erosion, especially if the heavy rains come at planting time.

Save Soil and Water

Contouring of the cultivated crops should be widely practiced this year, Bliss strongly believes He points out that this, along with terracing where it is needed, is one way to save soil and water and at the same time get larger yields.

However, more needs to be done to begin rebuilding soils, he says. Humus and plant food must be addel by growing more clover and other legumes. "We cannot, even with hybrid corn, produce more and more forever on less and less," Bliss explains.

In calling for more pigs to be raised, Bliss points out that Iowa has rarely, if ever had two very bad crops in succession. "If we raise a large crop of corn, which is entirely possible, the farmer with pigs will not only provide additional meat for the public but it is a better than even guess that he will also make more money."

1948 Pig Crop

He lists three things that point toward it being good business to raise an average number of pigs in 1948. If the corn crop is large and the hog crop prices can drop just as fast as they have risen. Pork will remain high as long as people have money to pay for it. Intentions for breeding sows for the 1948 spring pig crop are reported to be 9 percent below the government request for the country and 18 percent below the Iowa goal.

The former director of extension asks each person to make a special effort to pay debts and put a nest egg away to protect himself against a sharp drop in prices. Doing that with the present cheap dollars would do much to prevent a serious depression. "Each person can do more for himself now than anyone else—even the government—can do later," Bliss says, recalling the early 1930's.

Many Political Thrills Seen in 1948

Democrats, GOP Unafraid Of Wallace Party Threat

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—From the way things look to the newsmen whose beat stretches along that historic mile-and-an-eighth from Capitol Hill to the White House, politics in 1948 is going to be a rodeo—plenty of excitement for the audience, a lot of hard riding and tough spills for the performers.

At this writing, nobody's down-hearted.

At the last rodeo I attended, there was a very funny funny-man who fell off horses and rode brahmas backwards and made wisecracks over the loudspeaker system (it was a very up-to-date rodeo not more than 2,000 miles from where the deer and the antelope play).

There were also a number of very good, very earnest contestants who had learned their bucking and breaking a long ways from a drugstore or a Hollywood set. The funny-man himself was no tenderfoot when it came to forking a bronc, but once in a while he got in the way of the real performers. Since they weren't riding for glory alone (the purses were fairly heavy), he incurred some displeasure from the regulars, if not from the spectators.

Baukhage

This year the political field will take on a similar appearance. The owner of one of the sombreros tossed into the arena in December is going to cause considerable concern to the rest.

I refer, of course, to hard-riding Hank, the Iowa Whirlwind, who is no more afraid to ride bare-back than he is to ride bear-back. He isn't so bad either with the vocal lariat when it comes to throwing as well as roping the bull. As the contenders size up the situation with the aid of a lot of wishful thinking, Mr. Wallace is going to get in everybody's way but theirs.

Certainly there is no gloom exuding from the White House. Sure, said the President to us at a recent press-radio conference, the Democrats were going to have a happy New Year, he already was. And stretching back for a long time, the presidential news conferences have almost bubbled. Once in a while, Mr Truman would jerk a little when the reportorial needle hit a political nerve, but for the most part, these meetings, where the questions become sharper and sharper as the Ides of November '48 approach, have been a feast of wit and a flow of soul.

And there is no moaning at the bars where other Democrats gather; Wallace will drive all the liberals to active support of the Democrats, they'll tell you; he will shear away the lunatic fringe of Democratic support; drain the party of the last tint of that which might incarnadine its record; will garner the middle-of-the-roaders who will feel less danger of contaminating their ballots with a New-Dealish radicalism; it may mean Mr. Taft may be Mr. Truman's opponent, and an easier battle can be fought and won against Taft, say the Democrats, than against other presidential hopefuls who might be better Republican vote-getters.

And so on—you've heard the story before from many optimistic lips.

Likewise, each hopeful favorite son finds something to cheer him.

But the canny observers are placing no bets yet, and those who had their money down have had to do very little hedging. There is only one thing certain and that is: It's going to be a grand show.

Lo, the Noble Horse

The year 1947 ended with a new sea serpent story which you undoubtedly read about. I mention it, because I myself saw a strange and terrifying beast as I walked to work one late December morning, and I believe the two tales worthy of repetition.

As to the sea serpent: The Associated Press carried a signed story by the master of the steamship Santa Clara, J. Fordan, in which he described the monster sighted in the Atlantic 118 miles due east of Cape Lookout. He named the first and third mates and the navigation officer as witnesses.

According to their testimony, the monster's snake-like head was about two and one-half feet long, there was about 35 feet of cylindrical body some three feet in diameter visible. The water about the beast was stained red and the animal was thrashing around in apparent agony, causing the skipper to believe that the ship had cut it in two. The beast's skin was "brown, slick and smooth, there were no protuberances, fins or hair on the head, neck or visible parts of the body."

That's the skipper's story.

Mine is equally terrifying. I actually saw in the early morning, moving down New Hampshire avenue, a huge creature, whose body, like the skipper's sea serpent, was without fins or protuberances, but unlike it, was covered with hair. The head was more than two feet long, the barrel-shaped body was supported on four long legs which made the creature higher when it threw up its head, much higher than a man.

Its feet were not large compared to the great, powerful body, and they terminated in a great claw, or nail-like substance, which would give the creature terrible weapons of offense or defense the teeth were large and blunt, and the mouth, though not large, plainly could inflict damaging wounds.

Human beings looked puny beside this creature which appeared as out of place on a Washington city street as a hippopotamus or an elephant.

Strangely enough, it did not cause any great commotion except among the younger people who stared in wonder, obviously never having seen anything like it, except in picture books. It did pose considerable problems for motorized traffic. Horns honked, drivers jittered, back-seat orders thundered.

Finally the monster turned off the street and went up an alley. That was a great relief to me. I knew what it was. I had even ridden one when I was in the artillery, and later, but it was a shock to see a real live EQUUS CABALLUS in a city str

I submit the following as an IQ test to my readers. The answers will not be found on the following page:

Can you tell a cormorant from a water turkey when they are so far away they look no bigger than a fly in custard pie?

Did you ever see a loon trying to walk?

Did you know that between Christmas and New Year's Day, roosters crow, cows moo, horses whinny in the night, when otherwise they would be asleep?

Do you know they DON'T?

Can you tell by the feel on the line whether you have a catfish or a lazy trout on your hook?

Do you know where to scrape the deepest hole in the ground when you have to roll up in your blanket and sleep al fresco?

Would you rather spend a night in a rain-storm in a pup tent if you were camped in a pine forest, or crawl under the lowest branches, mattressed on a hundred years of pine needles, rolled up in a shelter-half?

Could you plow the corners better with an old-fashioned plow or a new-fashioned tractor?

If a man talks "low-German," does that mean he is talking a dialect?

Do the educated people in England speak a language which would be more understandable to Shakespeare than our "hill-billies" lingo?

NEWS REVIEW

Truman Asks Tax Cut; Brazil Ousts All Reds

Whether President Harry Truman's state of the union message to congress was "socialistic," as Republican partisans dubbed it, or "forthright and courageous," as in the eyes of loyal Democrats, remained a matter of opinion, but it was fairly obvious that in making it the President had cast a loving glance toward next November's election day.

He proposed a combination tax-cutting-and-raising device that manifestly has no chance of passage in the Republican dominated congress but one that sounds good to a lot of voters.

His plan, embodying tax-relief to the "little man," would give each individual taxpayer an immediate $40 tax cut for himself and for each dependent. To offset that reduction in federal income he proposed that corporation taxes be raised by 3.2 billion dollars.

Mr. Truman presented the scheme as a "cost of living" credit designed primarily to relieve the small taxpayer.

In a phrase certain to be quoted with relish by Democratic orators during the coming campaign, the President said he wants to keep revenue collections where they are and still help those who need relief to "buy the necessities of life."

Supplementing the tax proposals he called for a 75-cent-per-hour minimum wage, representing a 35-cent increase over the present 40-cent minimum. Although in the past he has favored raising the national minimum wage, the 75-cent figure was the highest flat demand he has made.

General tone of the President's message to the joint session led most observers to believe that he was swinging his administration back to "a little left of center," a point which generally is identified with New Deal philosophies.

Some saw in the speech a perceptible bid for the left-wing and liberal vote that Henry Wallace's third party is threatening to take away from the Democrats.

Republican reaction to Mr. Truman's speech was bitter and intense and the G.O.P. went ahead more determinedly with its own tax-reduction bill.

AND FURTHERMORE . . .

Taxes were not the only controversial issue touched upon by Mr. Truman in his message to congress. He also asked for:

1. The once-rejected 10-point anti-inflation program with power to impose wage and price controls and rationing.

2. Universal military training.

3. Authorization of the four-year Marshall plan.

4. Stronger and extended rent controls.

5. Public housing for low-income families and government action to cut building costs.

6. Modernization of farm price supports and broader crop insurance.

7. Extension of unemployment compensation, old age and survivors' benefits, a national health plan and federal financial aid for education.

8. Admission of European refugees into the U. S.

9. Statehood for Alaska and Hawaii.

KNOCKOUT: Brazil

Brazil, which severed diplomatic relations with Russia in a huff last October, now has administered what looks like the coup de grace to Red activity within its own borders.

It came in the form of a law, signed amid great furor by President Enrico Dutra, virtually abolishing every vestige of Communist action in Brazil by removing all Communists from elective posts throughout the nation, including congressmen.

The process of outlawing the Reds was far from a calm one, marked at times by dramatic displays of Latin-American verve and temper.

Fist fights broke out frequently on the floor of the chamber of deputies, and at one point during the debate the session was suspended temporarily when three deputies pulled guns from their pockets and waved them at three Communist members. No shots were fired.

Outside the building private citizens argued vociferously and exchanged blows. Leftist crowds shouted vengeance on the deputies and police sirens screamed through downtown Rio de Janeiro.

It was, by and large, the most turbulent legislative session ever held in Brazil.

Other nations could take an object lesson from Brazil's achievement. Communists can be frozen out of government activity even though the process may be noisy and painful.

THIRD FORCE: Socialism?

Latest voice from among the less potent nations of the globe to rise in protest of the cold battle between Russia and the U. S. was that of Leon Blum, French Socialist leader and short-time premier of France.

He called for a "third force of the world" to stand between the Big Two, even as such a middle group has stood between the Communists and DeGaullists in France.

Blum said the international third force would oppose American capitalism and expansion as well as Russian imperialism and extinction of human rights. That force, he proposed, ought to be headed by France and Great Britain.

Blum was espousing on a world-wide basis an old and eminently workable theory — the balance of power. While Russia and America are battling it out on fairly even terms, Blum would have the two lesser nations step in to take control of the slight power balance that is left over and thus possibly be able to steer a course more to their liking.

Between Russia and the U. S., said Blum, "there is room for nations which want at the same time personal liberty and collective economy, democracy and social justice." It was another plea for a middle course, and to Blum a middle course meant Socialism.

WET AND DRY

Factions Fight Over Statistics

Those irreconcilable enemies, the wet and dry forces in the U. S., fought out the legal liquor question in 769 local option elections in 21 states last year, then went at each other hammer and tongs in a battle of statistics.

Distilling industry spokesmen claimed that 1947 brought "the first wet gains since repeal."

Prohibition groups countered that the past 12 months produced new victories for their campaign to dry up the country by taking one community at a time.

Outcome of the statistical fight may never be clearly defined because the wets used population figures to back up their claims while the drys counted geographical areas.

A net gain of about 150,000 persons in the "wet population"—those living in the areas where sale of hard liquor is legal—was reported by the Distilled Spirits institute. It said it has official figures from state governments showing that the steady dry progress of the past 14 years was halted and even reversed in 1947.

"In 1945," said a spokesman, "local option elections dried up areas in which 311,293 Americans lived. In 1946 there was a gain in the total dry population of 285,309. But this year, the tables were turned and the wet population showed an increase for the first time since 1933."

However, Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, and Laura Lindley, research secretary of the Anti-Saloon league, were no less vehement in reporting dry successes during 1947.

Mrs. Colvin estimated that the number of legally dry areas "jumped about 500" during the year as a result of local option elections.

Miss Lindley said the Anti-Saloon league had not yet completed its survey of liquor election results, but added that a preliminary report on 15 states showed a net gain of 259 dry communities.

The opposing factions were agreed on only one point—that the current year would bring more hard-fought battles in states, counties, townships and wards on the question of local prohibition.

Keyhole Congressman Reports

WASHINGTON. — Congress will enact another tax-reduction bill this session and the inside betting is that President Truman, this time, will sign it. In fact, it appears that Democrats may be outdoing Republicans in the clamor for income tax relief.

However, White House advisers insist that the measure finally adopted must provide genuine relief for lower-bracket taxpayers—chiefly through increased exemptions — to get the President's approval.

The treasury department meantime is rounding out a confidential study on the budget outlook for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1948, and June 30, 1949, which dovetails nicely with plans of house ways and means committee Democrats to come out flatly for tax cuts this session.

House Democratic leaders have kept it quiet, but there was some secret huddling during the holidays on proposed drafts of a Democratic tax revision bill. One reason for the mystery surrounding these strategy sessions is that ways and means Democrats don't want to anticipate the White House.

Highlights of Tax Picture

Here are the highlights of the treasury's confidential study on the tax budget outlook for the next two fiscal years:

On the basis of current national income, the treasury estimates that tax revenues for the present fiscal year, ending next June 30, may run as high as 44 billion dollars. This is $2,300,000,000 greater than the last estimate, made in September.

Against this revenue, the treasury estimates that our (budget) expenditures will total around 37 billion dollars for the same period, including $1,240,000,000 for foreign aid and a $1,700,000,000 credit on our loan to Great Britain.

Unless foreign aid spending runs greater than the anticipated $1,240,000,000, and if the Marshall plan (or a Republican substitute) doesn't become effective before March 31, 1948, combined additional expenditures for the 1948 fiscal year will be no greater than three billion dollars, the secret treasury study reveals.

On the basis of these figures, treasury experts estimate conservatively that our net surplus for the current fiscal year will be somewhere between four and five billion dollars, which would leave the door ajar for a substantial reduction in income taxes.

Livestock Slaughter Halted

Despite strenuous protests from U. S. cattlemen against abandonment of the livestock-slaughter campaign in Mexico, which was aimed at stamping out foot-and-mouth disease there, there is no chance whatever of its being revived.

The department of agriculture has announced that the program, carried on for almost a year under joint sponsorship of the U. S. and Mexican governments, would be halted immediately.

"Tremendous economic and social impact on Mexico" was given as the reason. This was just a diplomatic way of not saying that the campaign had brought Mexico close to a full-dress revolution.

Since the dread malady was discovered among northern Mexico's vast herds of beef cattle in December, 1946, more than 600,000 infected or exposed animals — cows, bulls, oxen, sheep, hogs and goats—have been killed off. From the beginning, there were reports of fierce resistance among owners in the more remote regions, who protested that they needed their livestock and not the cash they received for surrendering them to slaughter.

However, this was only a secondary factor in the situation which caused hasty suspension of the program. Mexican government officials played politics with the compensation payments, so brazenly and on such a huge scale that the rural populations of four states were about to join forces in open revolt.

Battle for Margarine

The margarine industry, long a stepchild of congress, which kowtows to the potent lobby of the competing dairy products industry, will make another appeal for relief from the maze of red tape restrictions under which it operates.

Besides heavy license fees and nuisance excise taxes on colored and uncolored oleo, margarine salesmen are saddled with trade practices that are vastly unfair.

Unlike a butter salesman, an oleo salesman must have an advance order for every pound sold from his delivery truck. If he is stopped by a government inspector and cannot show orders for all merchandise on his truck, he is subject to a stiff fine.

Many merchants who run short of oleo have complained that they cannot refill their stock without this rigamarole, but the dairy lobby sees to it that congress takes no remedial action.

By GRANTLAND RICE

AMONG the arguments that broke out a few days ago between managers, scouts and ballplayers, there was a rather heated debate over right and left-handed values. Who, among the hitters and the pitchers, make the better ballplayers? This turned out to be an interesting subject.

T. Williams

It began with the hitters and here was the line-up:

Left-handed hitters — Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Ted Williams, Tris Speaker, George Sisler, Mel Ott, Joe Jackson, Lou Gehrig —these were the tops.

Right-handed hitters — Rogers Hornsby, Joe DiMaggio, Harry Heilmann, Hans Wagner, Ed Delehanty, Nap Lajoie, Hank Greenberg and Jimmy Foxx.

From these two lists, the left-handed hitters have the majority and the power, although Hornsby, Wagner, Delehanty and Lajoie were among the greatest. And Harry Heilmann could hit his share. But you can't do much about Cobb, Ruth, Speaker and Jackson, not overlooking Williams. They knew what the old ash furniture was for.

Right-Handed Hurlers

Then they got around to the pitchers. It was a trifle different here:

Right-handers — Walter Johnson, Cy Young, Grover Alexander, Christy Mathewson, Ed Walsh, Dizzy Dean, Smokey Joe Wood, Chief Bender and Bob Feller.

Here the right-handers had the call. Young, Johnson, Alexander and Mathewson are far in front of any four left-handers you can name, when it comes to a matter of total victories gathered through the years.

In hitting, the left-hander is at least a stride and a half closer to first base. You know how many base runners are thrown out by a stride. But despite Ruth, Jackson, Ott and Williams, I doubt the left-handers had any greater power than Delehanty, Hornsby, Foxx, Greenberg, Lajoie and Hack Wilson in one year.

Few still living remember Delehanty. He and Hornsby were about on a par. Lajoie was up with both. They were terrific.

Most 'Graceful' Players

It is all part of an old story, a "Twice Told Tale," but a few of us who can dip a number of years back into the past were talking again about the most graceful ballplayers, the ones you loved to see.

More than a few old-timers cut in with suggestions such as Billy Evans, Wish Egan, Bucky Harris, Jack Onslow and several others.

Here was our all-grace line-up:

Catcher—Johnny Kling.

Pitchers — Walter Johnson, Bugs Raymond, Addie Joss, Dizzy Dean and Kid Nichols.

First base — Hal Chase, George Sisler.

Second base — Napoleon Lajoie, Eddie Collins.

Shortstop — Herman Long, Dave Bancroft.

Third base—Jimmy Collins, Buck Weaver, Pie Traynor.

Outfield — Tris Speaker, Joe DiMaggio and Terry Moore.

These men, in the main, made all plays look easy. I can't recall ever seeing Lajoie make a play look tough. The same goes for DiMaggio, who always seems to be drifting, not running.

John McGraw once said that Raymond had the greatest motion he ever saw. My vote along this line goes to Johnson, a pitcher McGraw rarely saw until his later years.

Eddie Collins was next to Lajoie at second, while Bradley and Weaver were close to Jimmy Collins at third. Traynor also belongs in this list. Traynor was about on a par with Weaver.

Awkward but Great

Grace doesn't always mean greatness. Hans Wagner, the greatest shortstop that ever lived, one of the greatest of all players, reminded you of a giant crab. Hans was awkward-looking. Christy Mathewson was no picture of grace in the box. Neither is Bob Feller, who uses almost every muscle in his body.

On the other hand, Dizzy Dean had an almost flawless pitching motion. Dizzy finished on the toes of his left foot, as far forward as one could get without toppling over on his face. For the few short years he had before his right shoulder went lame, he was as good as any pitcher I ever saw.

Ty Cobb always has rated Ed Walsh as the best five-year pitcher in baseball history. "Any pitcher who can win 40 games and save 12 others in one year is good enough for me," Ty said some time back. "Especially pitching for a light-hitting club."

Babe Ruth also belongs in this "all-graceful" list. There was nothing awkward about the Babe, either at bat or playing the outfield. He was a smooth swinger at the plate and a smooth-looking workman on his outfield job.

SMALL TOWNS, U.S.A.

Rural Planning Must Emphasize Restored Soil, New Employment

By EARL HITCH
Released by WNU Features.

Restoration of the soil and introduction of new types of employment are major factors in revitalizing rural economy to meet the challenge of the changing times. The growing necessity for sound rural economic planning is apparent in small town and agricultural America, faced as they are by revolutionary changes in the pattern of living. The times brings evidence that most rural living problems can be solved. Happily this evidence, which has been accumulating for several years, shows the solutions can be accomplished by simple, home-devised plans.

Rural economic problems ordinarily come from limitations on earning opportunities. The earnings get lean when the land is allowed to wear out and other employment in the neighborhood is limited. Therefore, the solution lies in restoring productivity of the soil and in providing new kinds of employment. Both these things can be done with good leadership and good planning.

Rural America At Stake
No. 3
In a Series

Extension of rural electric lines, the trend toward decentralizing industry, new methods of farm production and land use, all are making easier the task of reviving the country communities and small towns.

Much valuable community work has been done. Some of the pioneering dates back 20 years and longer. The successes of some communities provide examples for others to follow. One of the earliest and most highly regarded small community developments is in the southern mountains at Brasstown, N. C. There the soil has been saved and returned to fertility, and some small industries have been introduced to provide the needed opportunities to earn.

Model Rural Community.

Brasstown is a model in the rural life movement. It has shown that the home and the home surroundings are the most important things in happy living. High wages are not essential if there are better compensations. Happiness cannot be bought with wages. All is well when there are jobs for all, if the work is pleasant and the home is secure.

Brasstown is a folk center. It is the home of a school of rural living, which has become the influence that shapes and guides the life of the entire community. This is the John C. Campbell Folk school, established to be a permanent and useful memorial to a devoted worker who spent his life as a teacher of mountain people. The school is the life work of Mrs. Olive D. Campbell, widow of the man for whom it was named.

This school is like nothing else in the U. S. Its pattern was the folk schools of Denmark, and Danish rural school ideas have been adapted to the needs of the Brasstown community.

The school has more than classes and teachers. It is the voice and spirit of the community. Since it was founded the living standards and the outlook of the whole people have been uplifted and given a solid rooting. It has succeeded in making the present bright and the future hopeful.

The school is a place for demonstration, practise, study and recreation. It is the stimulus not only of the culture, but of the commerce of the whole countryside. All ages may go to its classes. Everything having to do with local living is part of its program — farming and forestry, folk dancing and games, health and nursing, home industries and housekeeping, and the marketing of the things the people make and grow. The school has a demonstration farm, a forge for iron work, looms for weavers and benches for wood carvers.

Develop New Skills.

Brasstown wood carvings are known wherever there is a market for southern mountain wares. Five of the best carvers taught in the school have earned as much as $1,300 in one year by their spare-time skills. But the land is first and the people are taught to protect and preserve it. "Do not neglect your farm. Carving is for spare time, and for pleasure." That is advice that the school people give often, and with emphasis.

It should be made clear that the John C. Campbell program is more than the teaching of skills and methods. It is a program of ideas and attitudes. The school has made Brasstown (and that means the coves and the ridges for miles around) proud of its culture and its homes, and proud of the land. It has given the people an "appreciation" of what they have and are.

Moreover, it has made them community conscious, with some very practical results. Through study and leadership the school has developed a keen response to cooperative ideas. This has grown into a thriving producers-consumers' cooperative store, operating a retail business and a producing milk plant.

Work of Individual.

For this example of how to organize and guide a community living program, not only Brasstown, but the entire rural life movement is under a lasting obligation to Mrs. Campbell. She did her work largely unaided and with only the experience of the Danes to go by. The results achieved have been the product of her vision, personality and determination. A part of the school's support comes from the home missions of the Presbyterian church (North) and the American Missionary association, but the greatest share of the going expenses is raised by Mrs. Campbell's own efforts.

The next article will tell of community projects managed by rural pastors.

Speeding With Mules Legalized as Ancient Blue Laws Revoked

MT. CARMEL, ILL.—For the first time in the history of this town of 10,000, it now is legal to drive a mule "or other animal" 10 miles an hour on the streets and alleys or "five miles an hour around corners."

This and other ancient blue laws passed into oblivion when a new and streamlined city code went into effect.

Now the peace and quiet of Sunday afternoons may be shattered legally by youngsters playing baseball or even flying kites in the business district.

Other formerly illegal activities which now are tolerated are the unhitching and feeding of horses in front of any property without permission of the property owner; the playing of a game of cards for amusement within confines of the city park, and youngsters playing on the street after the curfew hour, which was 7 p. m. on short winter days and 9 p. m. on long summer days.

Here's One Barber Who Never Talks

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. — Contrary to the prevailing trend among tonsorial artists, one Springfield barber throughout his 12 years in the trade never has bored his customers with lengthy recitals on politics or weather or wonder oils for rundown scalps.

This novel barber, Bob Belford, who stands behind chair No. 5 in Jim Drew's barber shop here, has been a deaf mute since birth. But some of his customers never are aware of his infirmity.

Barbers on either side of Belford act as interpreters for the customers, pointing out the tonic desired or gesturing for the various types of scalp treatments or a facial.

George Smith, who works the chair adjacent to Belford's, rates Belford among the best barbers he has seen wield a razor in his 47 years in the trade.

Old and New Cookie Favorites Rank High For Snack Purposes

Do you like to have people dropping in just to be neighborly? Do you have youngsters who bring their friends home often? Then you'll want to have the cookie jar well stocked at all times with old favorites and new.

A cup of hot chocolate and a cookie mean something to every youngster, especially when the weather is bitingly cold; and it also means something very special to your own friends who may just happen to drop in. Spread your friendliness and cheer in this way with others and you'll be a happier person.

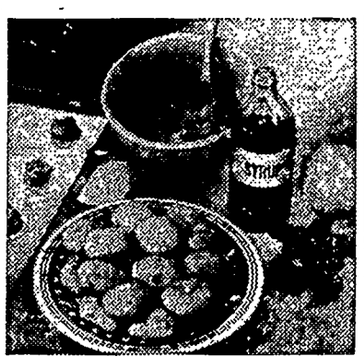
It's easy to have cookies on hand if you select those that are quick to fix and easy to keep. You'll feel a lot easier about inviting people in if there's always a snack or two ready.

In view of the prevailing high cost of butter and shortenings, the cookie baker must be careful to select recipes that spare these precious products.

Nut Macaroons.
(Makes 3½ dozen)

- 4 egg whites
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon almond extract
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¾ cup sugar
- 3 cups cornflakes, slightly crushed
- 1 cup pecans, coarsely chopped
- 1 cup coconut

Add salt to whites and beat to a coarse foam. Add flavorings. Add sugar by one tablespoon proportions, continuing beating until liquid is stiff and glossy. Fold in cornflakes, nuts and coconut. Drop from teaspoon onto well-greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderate (350 degree) oven until delicately browned, about 15 minutes. Remove promptly from baking sheet.



Dates and syrup keep the sugar content low on these Date Drops. They stay fresh and moist for a long time, if they last, in a cookie jar or covered cookie tin. Use for snacks and lunch boxes.

If you like crunchy, fruity cookies, make these Date Drops. You'll find they keep nicely in a cookie jar.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Holding onions under water while peeling makes it a tearless process, and keeps the onion odor from penetrating. . . . To flour chicken evenly for frying, place the flour in a paper sack, then the pieces of chicken, and shake vigorously. . . . Adding a teaspoon of lemon juice to the water in which rice is boiled will help separate the grains of rice.

LYNN SAYS:
Solve That Leftover Problem Easily

Meat juices and gravy are excellent to use with meat or even vegetables for flavor.

Cooked cereals may be chilled and sliced, fried and served with jelly or syrup.

Canned fruit juices are easy to use in fruit salad dressing, such as thinning mayonnaise, pudding sauces, flavoring milk or basting meat. Use also for liquid or any part thereof in gelatin salads or desserts.

Leftover breads, rolls and crackers may be toasted and served with spread. If they are very hard and old, have them thoroughly dry or toasted and then put through the food chopper for bread crumbs.

The best way to keep lettuce is to wrap it in waxed paper and place it in the refrigerator unwashed. It is likely to turn brown if it is washed.

Soured milk and cream may be used to make gravy for meats, such as veal. Also use them for baking breads, cakes or cookies.

Britons Panicky as Mob Razes London—on Radio

The panic created in this country in 1938 by the broadcasting of a play in which men from Mars landed in New Jersey to destroy the earth was comparable to the panic created in England in 1926 by the radio dramatization of a play in which a mob of unemployed leveled London to the ground, says Collier's.

Despite several announcements that the piece was a burlesque, thousands of Britons frantically telephoned newspapers and government offices for more facts, convinced that it was an on-the-spot newscast by the realistic sound effects of exploding bombs, falling buildings, and the shouting of the mob.

3 Unions Block Labor Peace—Refuse Wage Boost
Already Accepted by 19 Other Railroad Unions!

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Switchmen's Union of North America, representing 125,000 railroad employes, have refused to accept the offer of the Railroads of a wage increase of 15½ cents an hour.

This is the same increase awarded 1,000,000 non-operating employes by an arbitration board in September, 1947.

This is the same increase accepted by 175,000 conductors, trainmen and switchmen by agreement on November 14, 1947.

Agreements have been made with 1,175,000 employes, represented by nineteen unions. But these three unions, representing only 125,000 men, are trying to get more. They are demanding also many new working rules not embraced in the settlement with the conductors and trainmen.

Incidentally, the Switchmen's Union of North America represents only about 7% or all railroad switchmen, the other 93% being represented by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and covered by the settlement with that union.

Strike Threat

The leaders of these three unions spread a strike ballot while negotiations were still in progress. This is not a secret vote but is taken by union leaders and votes are signed by the employes in the presence of union representatives.

When direct negotiations failed, the leaders of these three unions refused to join the railroads in asking the National Mediation Board to attempt to settle the dispute, but the Board took jurisdiction at the request of the carriers and has been earnestly attempting since November 24, 1947, to bring about a settlement. The Board on January 15, 1948, announced its inability to reach a mediation settlement. The leaders of the unions rejected the request of the Mediation Board to arbitrate. The railroads accepted.

What Now?

The Unions having refused to arbitrate, the Railway Labor Act provides for the appointment of a fact-finding board by the President.

The railroads feel it is due shippers, passengers, employes, stockholders, and the general public to know that throughout these negotiations and in mediation, they have not only exerted every effort to reach a fair and reasonable settlement, but they have also met every requirement of the Railway Labor Act respecting the negotiation, mediation, and arbitration of labor disputes

It seems unthinkable that these three unions, representing less than 10 per cent of railroad employes, and those among the highest paid, can successfully maintain the threat of a paralyzing strike against the interest of the entire country—and against 90 per cent of their fellow employes.

The threat of a strike cannot justify granting more favorable conditions to 125,000 employes than have already been put in effect for 1,175,000, nor will it alter the opposition of the railroads to unwarranted wage increases or to changes in working rules which are not justified.

A glance at the box shows what employes represented by the Engineers and Firemen make. They are among the highest paid in the ranks of labor in the United States, if not the highest.

Compare these wages with what you make!

Here is a comparison of average annual earnings of engineers and firemen for 1939 (prewar) and 1947. Also shown is what 1947 earnings would have been if the 15½ cents per hour increase, offered by the railroads and rejected by the union leaders, had been in effect throughout the entire year 1947.

Klemme Shamrocks Win 2nd Place In County Tournament

KLEMME WINS CHAMPIONSHIP WHILE CRYSTAL LAKE WINS CONSOLATION

Kanawha Winds Up In Fourth Place After Over-time Period

The Britt Eagles won the County Championship in the annual basket ball tournament at Garner Saturday night by decisively beating the Klemme Shamrocks 40-19, before a packed house. Klemme was in the ball game until the third quarter when they bogged down. Britt was ahead only 3 points at the half, 16-13. Baack scored 6 points for Klemme while Jim Harvey racked up 11 for Britt. The Eagles have won 11 of 13 games and 8 in a row.

In the consolation game Crystal Lake took out Kanawha 29-28 in an overtime. It was 26 all at the end of the regulation time and Harlan Helm hit the winning basket with 1 second left in the ball game. He collected 11 points for his team while Bob Goodnow hit 12 for Kanawha.

Klemme climbed to the final game by taking Garner out in the first round 45-21. Goodell fell to the Shamrocks in the next round 46-20 and then Klemme eliminated Crystal Lake in the semi-finals to earn the right to meet Britt for the Championship.

Britt, Klemme, and Crystal Lake were awarded trophies while Kanawha won the tournament basket ball.

4-H ENROLLMENTS REACH GOAL

Enrollment cards for 300 4-H members have been filed at the county extension office, Paul Henderson, County Extension Director said this week in announcing preliminary figures on the county's 1948 membership.

This number is 100 percent of the goal announced last fall. It includes 148 enrollments in girls' home economics clubs and 152 in boys' agricultural projects.

Cards now on file will be increased by additions from members now attending club meetings and starting project work, but which have not been turned in by local leaders Henderson said.

He was joined by Elsie Mae VanWert, Co. Extension Home Economist, in pointing out that enrollments are not closed. Any boy or girl desiring to become a 4-H member may do so at any time, they said. Even though this enrollment activities were carried on in October, the gate is still open for new members, the county workers emphasized. To become a member, a girl or boy needs only contact the county office or a local club leader or member. They will be given information about 4-H work, provided with an enrollment card, and given instructions on starting a project and taking part in other 4-H activities.

The office announced plans for the organization of new clubs in the following communities: A boys club in Erin Township with Doyce Friedow as leader. New clubs already organized for 1948 are the Orchel "Eagles" with Forrest Eckles leader, and Jack Smith assistant leader; the Britt "Britts" with Lloyd Rasmuson as leader; the "Concord Nimble Fingers" with Mrs. Herbert Nichols as leader; the Boone "Buzzers" with Mrs. Joe Geibel as leader, and Mrs. Elmer Dougan as assistant leader; the Orchel "Jolly Workers" with Mrs. Don Schleuger as leader and Mrs. Orville Nelson assistant leader.

LARGE CROWD ATTEND THE ANNUAL FAMILY PARTY AT COMMUNITY HALL

The Northern Implement Co.'s annual Family Party held at the Community Hall Monday night was a huge success. The auditorium was packed and standing room was at a premium. It was the largest crowd that had ever attended the annual party.

The entertainment was top-notch with high class vaudeville acts and moving pictures and was without a doubt, the best entertainment that has come to Klemme for some time. Everything was free, but the show was at least a dollar value.

L. A. Jennings, manager of the Implement Co. has already made arrangements for a free show again next year. He was very well pleased with the fine response this year.

What a headache this is going to be for the postmaster: Ray A. Jorgenson, Jr., R. A. Jorgenson, Sr. and R. A. Jorgenson, III!

PRELIMINARY SURVEY MADE FOR BLACK TOPPING THE STREETS HERE

The Klemme Town Council has started the "ball rolling" on a black top program for Klemme streets. An engineer has been hired to draw up the plat and the legal publication will be in order for publication at an early date.

Following the publication a hearing will be held at which time objectors to the project will be heard.

This is a project that every property owner in Klemme should get back of at this time. Klemme streets are all in bad shape and graveling them is just a waste of money. Black top seems to be the solution for an economical street surfacing project and in the long run should prove the cheapest in upkeep.

Rev. and Mrs. Harvey Receive Word From Son At Washington, D. C.

H. Elwood Harvey, Jr. writes from Washington, D. C. that he has charge of the overseas Radio Teletype machines in the message center at the National Airport. These machines connect us with Germany, Newfoundland, Bermuda and the Azors. In his spare time he does some bowling, making a score up to 218. He says that is not bad for him. Probably would be pretty good for some of the rest of us too.

JUNIOR NEWS

—Reported by Norma Early

It surely seems hard to concentrate on our studies this week. Reason—we are thinking of the County Tournament. So come on boys, and bring home the trophy!

We have been learning about the early writings in America in our study of Literature. Once in a while something interesting comes along and we are all ears, and we all want to talk at once. Then Mrs. Harvey has to remind us that we should talk one at a time.

Government isn't as easy as it sounds. We had a test the other day and the results have not yet come through, so we must wait patiently.

Mr. Patterson assures some of the girls that they will make 60 words per minute by the end of the year in typing. Good for you girls! Now boys, let's see if you can't do as well!

SENIOR NEWS

In History we have finished unit seven and now are starting on "The Industrialization of the United States."

Shorthand, as Mr. Patterson says is getting difficult. The only thing is we can't remember those phrases and brief forms.

This week in English we have had the Chapter on "Thinking" which some of us find rather hard. Next we have "Investigating, Planning and Writing.

Bookkeeping is the same cycle over and over. We have been working on Depreciation of Fixed Assets, Bad Debts, and Accounts Receivable. We all hope that when we get to running a business we will have no bad debts.

TIME IN THE LOCKER

If frozen pork is to be fine in flavor, it should be used within five or six months of the date stored, advises Kenneth F. Warner, Extension Meat Specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. When stored too long the fat in the pork gradually becomes rancid and the meat loses its best flavor. Longer storage than six months is practical only if all conditions are just right. Salt speeds up rancidity so storage time of frozen and cured meat should be shorter than that of unsalted meat.

As a reminder, Mr. Warner suggests labeling the packages with the date of storage so that none of the pork will be left in the freezer too long.

Beef, lamb and poultry hold their flavor longer than pork in zero storage. If necessary, well-wrapped beef and poultry can be kept satisfactorily as long as a year.

Storm Facts Set Right

Col. Jason Z. Pemmican, a survivor of the famous eastern blizzard of '88, who has been too indignant over comparisons of recent snowstorms with it to speak calmly, has succeeded in regaining his composure sufficiently to get a few things off his chest. "Mere flurries our modern snowfalls!" declared the colonel. "Nothing beyond a thin covering of light flakes! Any survivor of the blizzard of '88 would have been glad to have brushed away the highest drifts on Manhattan Island with his hat.

"The blizzard of '88 was a blizzard. It had zero weather, terrific gales and more snow, no matter what our incompetent and uninformed weather bureaus say. I don't care what the weather man says about more snow on the level in this peewee storm. None of it was on the level in '88, and four dozen stalwart men who went out to measure it were never heard of again. Their instruments were later found in a snowslide 75 miles north.

"In New York a bronze eagle, weighing 28 pounds, atop the Grand Union Hotel, was blown clear across Brooklyn and later found buried under six feet of snow on the roof of a bath house at Coney Island. A cigar store Indian near Niblo's Gardens got caught in an ice floe and was later found in the lobby of Barnum's Museum miles away. A marble statue of Daniel Webster that was away uptown for that era got turned completely around in a sudden gust and ice cracked the base.

"A farmer milking a cow in a shed on a farm where the Commodore Hotel now stands got brick ice cream. He started for his cottage 100 yards away but was buried in snow before he made it. The cow was in a perfect state of preservation that July, but it took time to get the ice off. Why I felt so cold for years after that blizzard that ten years later I went to the Klondike which seemed to me like a summer resort.

Special Delivery Letters

Ex-King Michael of Romania,
Dear Mike:

What a break you got in getting kicked out! Not to have to go on being a king anywhere on earth these days, especially in the Balkans, oh boy! I bet it was like getting a last minute pardon after what looked like a life stretch.

It seems only yesterday that your picture was a rotogravure special. You were just a scared looking kid who seemed always to be asking "Where's popper this time?" Most of the time you couldn't figure whether the old gent was a king or a traveling man and you must have had a tough time as a child understanding whether you were to succeed to a throne or a sleeping car. The old gent abdicated so often that the Romanian throne was the only one in the world that had to be fitted with metal slots with the words "Occupied" and "Unoccupied."

It looked for a while as if Moscow would be brutal enough to let you go on being king, but just when no escape seemed at hand you fell in love and went in for a capitalistic thing like engagement and marriage without the necessary Kremlin passports to a private life, and presto you were let out without even two weeks' notice and only small severence pay.

Congratulations, however, as it was a close call. Now you can love a fine young woman, marry her and sit around in a bathrobe, while the wife cooks some scrambled eggs, without bringing on international complications, threatening world peace providing Vishinsky nuts. What is more you can come home at night, kiss the wife and say "What's new, toots?" without being accused of warmongering.

You deserved it, Michael, my boy.

Elmer.

SILVER LINING

On winter I am keeping score—
The sky is dark
At half-past four,
But here's a thought
To warm the heart—
The season barely gets a start
Before the days
Start lengthening,
And later sunsets
Hint that spring,
Though distant,
Can't be far behind.
'Tis thus to gooseflesh
I'm resigned.

Women Squelch Gripers; Put 'Em on Committees

Griping doesn't go in Noel, Mo., and it's a women's organization—of all things—that's putting a stop to it.

"Every time someone growls about a situation," its leader says, "we put them on a committee to straighten it out." "Straightening it out" so far has meant turning the city dump into a public park, providing equipment for city tennis courts, instituting a sanitation and clean-up program, and installing several public drinking fountains.

FOUR FLIGHTS UP TO HEAVEN

By FREDERICK LAING

The landlady was smiling at them like the wolf in Red Ridinghood. "You look kinda young to be a married couple."

"Oh, we aren't married yet," Peggy heard Bill say out. She felt Bill's fingers tighten on her arm.

"So you'd better show us that apartment before she changes her mind," he added.

She glanced up at him with a nervous little smile, feeling ashamed, wishing she hadn't let him read her thoughts.

The landlady laughed and Peggy laughed louder than she'd wanted to.

"We want two rooms," Bill said, "two rooms and a decent kitchen. And not facing on the street, please. Too many trucks in Greenwich Village to suit me."

"I adore the Village," Peggy said quickly. The trouble was, the words seemed to jump out before she knew what she was going to say.

Bill stared up at a long crack in the ceiling. "Sure, we adore the Village."

She pinched him when the landlady wasn't looking and he gave her hair a tug, and everything was all right again. They followed the landlady up the stairs. She had just the thing for them, she said. "A couple of kids like you won't mind walking up four flights."

"Oh, no," Peggy answered. Then she glanced at Bill. "Well, would we?"

Bill looked up at the ceiling again. "Oh, no."

She knew what he was thinking. And it was true. She didn't want to live in a place that had elevators. Bad enough to have him come home talking about them every night. Bad enough to have to answer the neighbors' questions with, "My husband? Oh he's in—er, sells elevators." She could see them lifting their eyebrows. Elevators? Pardon me for smiling, Mrs. Bill, but I never knew anyone had to sell elevators. I always thought they . . . just happened.

No, definitely not a place with elevators. She didn't want to be reminded of her husband's business every time she went in and out of the house.

The landlady's short, bowed legs were leading them up the stairs briskly, showing them how easy it was to climb four flights. "You'll find it nice and quiet here, I'm sure. The gentleman who has it now has been there three years. And he's a writer."

"A writer?" Peggy had kind of a funny feeling all of a sudden. Like she'd gone up in an elevator too fast. A writer. That was what she'd always thought she'd marry some day. Or maybe an artist. Somebody like that.

Peggy Is Intrigued

They were walking up the last flight now and some one upstairs opened a door. Don't let him be any better looking than Bill, she begged. As it happened, he wasn't. He was just a pale young man with glasses. He stood there in his slacks and blue shirt and he looked . . . well, on second glance he looked . . . different. Nobody would ever take him for a life guard. That's what she'd thought Bill was that first time, when they'd met on the beach.

"Come right in." The young man waved something at them. It turned out to be a monkey wrench, of all things. "Don't mind me, I'm just the plumber."

Peggy laughed. It was so unexpected, it made her feel good. "The plumber," she said, as their eyes met. "Imagine."

"Some plumber," the landlady said. "That's gratitude," he said, looking at Peggy, "I do her a favor and she makes fun of my plumbing."

"I think it's nice if a man knows how to fix the plumbing," Peggy said. She glanced from the thin hands to the thin, pale face. "I really do."

He looked pleased. "I'm a painter, too," he told her. "Look, I painted this china closet. What do you think of the shade?"

It made her feel so flattered to have a writer showing off for her benefit. "It's a lovely color," she told him. And then she could feel Bill's eyes on her. "Isn't it, Bill?"

"Yeah," Bill said dryly, "blue."

Peggy winced. Well, that proved he wasn't color blind.

"It's the same shade as your hat," this writer was saying.

She blushed. "Think of a man's noticing that."

"Yeah," Bill said. The way he said it, it wasn't exactly a compliment.

"I think it's nice if a man knows how to fix the plumbing," Peggy said. She glanced from the thin hands to the thin, pale face. "I really do."

"If you want to see the apartment," the landlady began sharply. Then she pulled a smile over her false teeth. "This here's the kitchen.

Bill said, "You mean the apartment opens into the kitchen?"

Behind his glasses, the young man's light blue eyes were looking amused. "Oh you'll get used to it. And it'll give your friends something to talk about."

"He's some little talker himself, isn't he?" the landlady said.

"I think he's wonderful," Peggy said, laughing. He certainly knew how to make a person feel perfectly at ease.

Then she got a look at Bill's face. She began to feel miserable. If only he wouldn't look like that. Like a . . . She tried to push the thought out of her mind but it came right back again. . . . Like a disappointed salesman. I'm sure you'll make a mistake if you don't buy our elevators, Mr. Kotch.

The landlady led them into the living room, and when Peggy saw it, her heart sat up and begged.

Her eyes drank in the bookcase that covered a whole wall, the original paintings on unframed canvas, the oversized fireplace with three painted masks above it. And there was a table with a typewriter and a lots of papers piled-up in careless stacks.

What darling taste you have. She almost said it, but she thought about Bill just in the nick of time.

"The bedroom's in there," the landlady said. She let Peggy and Bill go into the bedroom by themselves. Bill's head almost bumped the top of the doorway as they went in together.

"This is a dog house," he said.

Peggy was in such a daze she thought he said, "Doll's house," at first.

"Isn't it," she said excitedly. And then, seeing his expression, "What?"

"A dog house," he said. "Look, I can almost touch the ceiling. Listen Peggy. I've learned something about buildings in the elevator business. Do you know how old this house is? Why, it was a dump when they built the Brooklyn bridge."

Peggy gasped. "He heard you!"

Suddenly all the thrill was gone and her heart felt like lead. Her eyes were blinking as she turned and went back into the living room. Bill followed behind her, stooping with an exaggerated wariness as he went through the doorway.

Her fingers were twisting the engagement ring nervously around and around. One thing sure, she wasn't going to marry an elevator salesman. Or any other kind of a salesman, for that matter.

"Listen, honey," Bill said gloomily. "If you really like the place."

It didn't matter. Nothing mattered now, really. Just to get out. To get away. To get out of everything as painlessly as possible.

"I guess you have to be a writer or something to appreciate it," she told him, forcing out the words. She glanced at the pale young man and managed to smile. "A writer or an artist."

"OH I don't know," the young man protested with a shrug. "What kind of stuff do you write?" Bill asked grudgingly.

"Huh?" the young man said.

The landlady laughed. "Him? He's no writer. He's my son." And she added proudly, "he sells vacuum cleaners."

Run out of the room. Run down the stairs, she told herself. But Bill's arm went around her shoulders, steadying her, and his arm felt strong and tender.

"My man is a salesman, too," she said. And she held her head up. "He sells elevators."

New Chemical Weapons To Combat Weed Pests

Farmers and householders waging war on crab grass and other troublesome weeds and grasses can look for help from two new weapons.

The weed-killing chemicals bear the jaw-breaking names of sodium isopropyl xanthate and allyl mixed chlorophenyl carbonate. They have been tested by federal and state agricultural experiment stations "with excellent results against many weeds and grasses not economically or satisfactorily controlled by other chemicals or practices," the announcement said. They are being used in active experimental programs but are not yet available commercially.

The second-named herbicide is the one that combats crab grass, as well as barnyard, orchard and blue grass, cattails and similar plants. It has a hormone-like action which attacks the root structure of the weed and arrests growth immediately by preventing seed development, even though no effect is apparent on the surface for the first week or longer. It also is used effectively in combination with 2-4-D against some broad-leaved weeds not affected by 2-4-D used alone.

The sodium isopropyl xanthate is described as a "complete killer" which should not be applied directly to crop plants. It shows promise for pre-emergence treatment, in spray or dust form, and has been used with success in the chemical weeding of growing crops.

THE GOLDEN HILLS

Grace Noll Crowell

ONCE in a dark and troubled time
When I saw no road ahead,
A wise and kindly counselor
Sat by my side and said:
"Each morning I drive down a valley road
To get to my work, and I
Can often see nothing at all for the fog
That blots out the earth and sky;
But I say to myself, 'I shall drive ahead,
Carefully, without sight.
For I know I shall come onto higher ground,
Where the hills are gold with light.'
And I just keep on . . ."
Oh, wise kind words
That fell on my heart that day,
Nothing can blot them from my mind,
Nothing can take them away,
And now when a thick fog shuts me in
To choke me and blind my eyes,
I am so glad for the hills ahead,
For the friend who was kind and wise!

ALTHOUGH a good bit on the belated side, it seems about time to rearrange a few national football rankings, and also see what might be done about the plight of the Far West in Rose Bowl matters.

In the first place, we can see no argument for putting Notre Dame over Michigan. The two teams played three common opponents, Pittsburgh, Northwestern and Southern California. In the total count Michigan was something like 74 points in front.

G. Rice

Few thought Michigan had a chance to equal Notre Dame's margin of 31 points over Southern California. Michigan added 18 points to this score.

The worst that Michigan should get is to be ranked on a par with Notre Dame. I believe Notre Dame has the stronger line. I know Michigan has the faster, more elusive backs. Michigan has the better pass attack with several good passers and three or four fine pass receivers. Also Michigan has more and better deception.

In the new, rearranged slot, here is how the teams should be placed:

No. 1 slot — Michigan, Notre Dame, co-champions.

No. 2 slot — Texas and S.M.U., on a par.

No. 3 slot — Penn State.

The State of Texas came through brilliantly, aided largely by Doak Walker and Bobby Layne. Layne outclassed Harry Gilmer in the Texas-Alabama test. On the full season's count, Walker and Layne move up with Bob Chappuis and Johnny Lujack as four of the star backs of the year.

S.M.U. has Walker back for two more years and this means two more years of S.M.U. success, although Blair Cherry at Texas will have a lot to say about it.

Same Leaders Next Year

You also can add that Notre Dame and Michigan will be almost as strong next season as they were this last year. Both lose good men, but they have plenty left and others coming in.

It would be no surprise to see Michigan, Notre Dame, S.M.U. and Texas rated among the top four for 1948. Minnesota also can crowd into this picture with a break or two.

The west coast is still in a bad way when it comes to Rose Bowl competition.

In the last three years, Alabama, Illinois and Michigan have run up 128 points in three bowl games—83 points were scored against Southern California and 45 points against U.C.L.A. And I know Frank Thomas in 1946 after scoring 34 points worked hard to keep the score down. "We could have made it 70 or 80," he said.

Just why good football material should be so scarce on the west coast, while extremely good everywhere else, is a mystery. But that's the way it is. In the last three Rose Bowl games, Far Western opposition has been so futile and feeble that no semblance of a contest remained.

I doubt that Southern California had a man who could have made either the Notre Dame or Michigan team—not a man. The team was big enough but slow in movement—sluggish, both mentally and physically, as far as football was concerned.

The West Coast Mystery

In the bowl game their reflexes and reactions were creaking. Michigan made it look even worse by being just the opposite—fast, quick and smart to an outstanding degree.

It isn't going to help matters next fall if Michigan wins the Big Nine title again. This means that a second or possibly a third-place team will make the trip—and probably win again without any great trouble. But what a squawk will rise up along the Pacific's rim if Michigan wins and either Minnesota or some other team is sent out.

U.C.L.A. last season was supposed to have the best material on the coast. Yet U.C.L.A. lost four games, without meeting Michigan or Notre Dame. Stanford's material was only fair. U.S.C. and U.C.L.A. lose a flock of veterans in 1948.

It may be that Pop Waldorf can start something at California. He lost only one game last season and, right now, Pop and his Bears seem to be the main west coast hope.

The west coast is packed with star athletes in every other field. There are fine ballplayers all over the landscape. Just why the football material should suddenly run dry when you recall the stars of other years is a mystery. You could understand this happening for a year or two. But the west coast hasn't had a good football team in the last six or seven years. It has had no team to be rated close with the best in the other sections.

It is about time the picture was changing, but at the moment there is no such evidence in sight from the material at hand. The great years of Howard Jones, Pop Warner, Buck Shaw and Babe Hollingberry seem to have faded into the mists.

BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D.D.

SCRIPTURE: John 6:35-40; 13:3-17; Colossians 1:9-20.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Philippians 2:5-11.

The Nature of Jesus

Lesson for February 8, 1948

ONE of the most discerning comments on the nature of Jesus I have ever heard came from an aged Indian in one of the western states a few years ago when I chanced to be waiting for a friend at the entrance of the reservation. This old gentleman was sitting on a large rock. I tried to speak with him, but he did not seem to understand what I said. Then my friend drove up, and introduced me to the Indian. "This man knows our Jesus," my friend said to the Indian. His face brightened, and he held out his hand to me. "Jesus help Indian love white man," he said. Just so, Jesus helps white man love white man, too.

Dr. Newton

The lesson for Sunday is found in John 6:35-40; 13:3-17; and Colossians 1:9-20, with Philippians 2:5-11 as the devotional reading.

TEACHER AND LORD

TAKE the opening passage, John 13:3-17, where Jesus is pictured as taking a basin of water and towel, kneeling at the disciples' feet, washing their feet, and drying them. Do you not feel the blessed Saviour's very nature flooding the scene?

It requires true love, true humility, to serve in that role. Suppose someone came to render this service to you? And suppose that One was the Son of God?

Why did Jesus wash the disciples' feet? Because he loved them, and he wanted them to love other people enough to do for them anything that would convince them of the love which they had in their hearts for them. Here we see him as the great teacher.

"AS I HAVE LOVED YOU"

BUT Peter draws back. He cannot conceive of Jesus washing his feet. Why? Because Peter did not yet understand the nature of Jesus. The memory verse for Sunday is helpful just here. Jesus said, "Love one another; even as I have loved you," John 13:34.

Peter acted very naturally, even if we may be tempted to say that he acted foolishly. In fact, he acted just about like any of us would have acted under similar circumstances.

But when Jesus explained to Peter what he was about, Peter then asked that Jesus wash not only his feet, but also his hands and head.

THIS IS JESUS

INTERMEDIATES, young people and adults, having carefully read the passage in the 13th chapter of John, where Jesus washes the disciples' feet, will now turn to John 6:35-40, and Colossians 1:9-20, and see the expansion of this great truth over into the expressed will of God for his followers.

A true understanding of this section will lead us to ponder prayerfully the nature of Jesus in the various titles accorded him in the Scriptures — Son of Man, Son of God, Master, Rabbi, Teacher, Physician, Vine, Light, Good Shepherd, Bread of Life, Comforter, Friend and Saviour.

All of these titles he bore, and yet we see him kneeling to wash the feet of everyday people. "Thy gentleness hath made me great." Intermediates and young people will wisely set themselves to the task of identifying the nature of Jesus in the people of their community. Such study will lead you to earnestly seek to walk in his blessed example, loving as he loved.

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?"

AND now we are ready for the climax of the lesson, when Peter declares, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God," Matthew 16:16.

We cannot long stand in the presence of the story of this lesson and fail to conclude with Peter that none save the Son of God can do such wondrous things—can love as he loved.

Beginning with the Incarnation, we follow through the sweeping claims of Jesus, and we know of a truth that he was very God. Convinced, then, that we are in the presence of God when we contemplate the nature of Jesus, what are we to say? Does not Isaac Watts suggest the answer?

When I survey the wondrous cross,
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

See, from his head, his hands, his feet,
Sorrow and love flow mingled down,
Did e'er such love and sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?

Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all!

Buy your clothes to fit the largest part of your figure. It is much easier to take in a dress than it is to let out the seams.

If there's no room in the hem of your skirt for lengthening, try adding a width of ribbon around the waistline. Use a contrasting ribbon. Some of the newer dresses have contrasting waist interest, so you'll be right in style.

Aluminum paint makes an excellent sealer. It will seal in most of the stains and chemicals. Finish later with two coats of good oil paint.

That murky appearance that comes overnight on mirrors during warm weather can be wiped off with a cloth dampened with ammonia. Then rub dry with a clean cloth.

Use unbleached muslin of heavy quality for pressing cloths. Edges may be left unfinished if desired. To be sure the cloth is lint free, boil the muslin cloth and rinse thoroughly.

Mix whiting and a little lemon juice into a clear paste. Use this as a cleaner for ivory or bone cutlery and you'll be amazed with the results. Leave the mixture on a few moments, then rinse, and polish.

When wash cloths become old and faded, fold them over and cover with a casing of cretonne. Now you have a serviceable potholder.

Do You Have Noisy Neighbors?

A few of the neighbors were suddenly annoyed by Jeb Crowell's hammering at night. Jeb was building himself a new front porch—and every time that he could give to it was after sundown.

Finally we decided the best thing to do was all pitch in and help—and get the carpentry over with as soon as possible. We did. Finished the porch next evening—and Jeb gratefully treated us to ice cold beer and cider.

From where I sit, that's what being a good neighbor means. Instead of complaining about the other fellow's habits, try to understand and share his interests.

So if my practising on the flute annoys you, come on over, neighbor, with your fiddle or guitar and join me! Maybe it will end up in our knowing and appreciating one another better ... in an evening of good fellowship. And I'll promise to provide the beer that goes with evenings of good fellowship!

In English this semester we are studying grammer on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and Literature on Thursday and Friday.

In Home Economics we girls are making aprons this week. We have three new Singer sewing machines. We have already learned several different things about the machine including the proper way to run it and thread it.

In Algebra we are having problems similiar to those of last semester. However, they seem to get more difficult each day.

We are studying "The Use of Electricity in Communication" in Science. We learned about the development of the telegraph and how it works. We have studied about other inventions also.

In Manual Training the boys are working on different projects.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

As reported by Dorance Baack

Wednesday night we got our report cards. Some were fairly good and others were not so good. I guess we could all work a little bit harder in the next six weeks.

In manual training we are making different things such as lamps, hallirees, shelves, end tables and many other useful things.

The girls in Home Economics are learning how to sew.

In Biology we wrote down what we had eaten for one day and then we figured out how many colories were in each different food. We found out that a few of us ate an awfully lot in one day.

JUNIOR NEWS

—By Bill and Bob

School is settling back to normal with the semester tests out of the way. The Juniors have changed two of their studies to new subjects. In typing, we are now starting the unit on letterwriting, which seems to be more interesting. Six of the class are taking shorthand, while the rest are taking geography.

We have received our report cards for the end of the semester. Most were pleased with the results, but their were a few who did not welcome them.

We are very happy for we are ordering our rings this week.

FROM FARM TO FOREST . . . Churches are playing an important role in the concerted effort to improve rural living. Typical are these scenes, taken at the Alpine, Tenn., mission of the Presbyterian church, which operates a forest of 1,500 acres and a farm of 100 acres. The dairy herd (left) in front of the modern barn show the strides made in better agriculture while the sawmill (right) helps make the forest a paying proposition.

SMALL TOWNS, U.S.A.

Revitalized Country Church Plays Social, Economic Role

By EARLE HITCH

WNU Features.

Long on the road to decline, the country church is being revived as an integral force for re-energizing small rural communities. Acting on the principle that where the community thrives, the church also thrives, all denominations are backing a widespread campaign to revitalize the country church.

Without in any sense departing from the Christian aims of saving souls and preaching redemption, the churches simply are adding an awareness of social and economic responsibility to their mission of salvation. The concerns of the entire community — home, family, farming, health — become the concerns of the community church.

Particularly valuable and instructive as models or demonstrations for study are the community plans being carried out by missions of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches in the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee. The Presbyterian projects are at Morris Fork and Wooton, Ky., and at Alpine and Big Lick, Tenn. The Methodists have community missions at Frakes, Ky., and Sevierville, Tenn. A larger community project at Blue Springs, Tenn., represents the combined parishes of the Methodists, Disciples of Christ and Presbyterians.

Rural America At Stake — No. 4 In a Series

Diverse Projects.

All have much in common, but in some things each in unique. Blue Springs is the oldest mission, and its area is the largest—some 400 miles square. It has seven churches and four preaching points at neighborhood centers, a cooperative store, an energetic training program in public health and a continuing series of adult education classes in current problems, such as farm machinery repair, soil conservation and home decorations.

COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE . . . One of the leading churches in promoting community development is Calvary Presbyterian church (above) at Big Lick, Tenn. The church was built by people of the community, which consists of only about 50 families. Landscaping was done by the pastor and farmers.

All this represents the life work of a great country preacher. He was Paul A. Doran, who went to Blue Springs in 1917 as a divinity school graduate, and died there three years ago after 28 years spent entirely in that community's service.

One of his many lasting services was his homestead plan. He made home buying his personal concern. Through small loans from a nominal sum held in trust by him, the minister made it possible for 20 families in his community to become owners of their own farms.

The pastor at Big Lick is both ardent and articulate in behalf of better rural living. He has known country life from childhood and he knows how to farm. He can run a tractor, plow a contour furrow and help in the saw mill. He has organized a Big Lick homestead project to aid young men get established on the land, and 27 families have been assisted in buying farms since 1940. This pastor is Eugene Smathers, who has written and preached ably about rural economic problems, and who has supplied the leadership which has made Big Lick a better place to live and work.

Promote Health.

One of Big Lick's finest public services is its community health clinic. There is a building specially constructed for it, in a grove adjoining the church yard. A graduate nurse is stationed there to aid in guarding the health of the people and to assist in emergencies.

Big Lick also has a soil conservation program, and is carrying on adult education and demonstrations in fertilizing, crop rotation, better livestock breeding, introduction of new fruits and plants, and good forestry management. Homemaking and home decoration, health and child care are studied by the women. There is also a study of the cooperative movement, and committees are developing plans for future cooperative undertakings, possibly in marketing of home crops, processing and a credit union. Big Lick has its own machinery pool, including a tractor, a hammer mill and a saw mill.

Build Own Church.

Wooton community, under the ministry of Benton Deaton, has a fine community church and playground, built by the people themselves. In the recreation center the children of the neighborhood have a place to enjoy their games and the whole community has its picnics and outdoor religious gatherings.

Wooton owns a cooperative truck, which provides transportation for the farmers who want to send things to market, and have things bought for them in town. Very few of the people have cars, and their usual means of travel is by mule back.

Wooton also has a circulating library, the beginnings of a demonstration farm, and a training course in handicrafts and cottage industries, for both men and women.

Similar work, especially in health, soil saving and better farming, is going on at Alpine, Morris Fork, Frakes and Sevierville. The programs vary according to local needs and the resources that can be put to use.

Productive Enterprises.

For example, the parish at Alpine is the owner of a forest of 1,500 acres and a farm of 100 acres. A trained forester and an expert farmer make those enterprises produce earnings, and furnish examples for other farm and woodlot owners. The Alpine program is in charge of the head of the mission, the Rev. Bernard M. Taylor, and Mr. Taylor has made the mission responsible for developing the community's full resources through the activities of the citizens themselves, and their labors are being reflected more and more in better health and living.

The same can be said of the communities at Frakes, Morris Fork and Sevierville, all of which have vastly improved their ways of living because practical economic plans for conserving the land and finding more useful employments for surplus labor have been made principal aims in the community plan. The pastors, of course, have not neglected their religious duties. They simply have added economic concerns to their other responsibilities.

The next article will tell of the important community development plan now being carried on in five counties centering around Tupelo, Miss. The Tupelo plan is one of the most ambitious that has been undertaken anywhere in the unfolding rural life movement.

Blind Girl Becomes Expert Knitter

LE SUEUR, MINN.—Despite the handicap of being nearly blind, 21-year-old Elaine Heintz can knit as fine a sweater, scarf or mitten set as any seen in exclusive shops. Her needles click with the speed of a professional craftsman.

Miss Heintz, whose vision failed when she was stricken with spinal meningitis at the age of 5, has made a modest start at setting herself up in business.

With the help of her sister, Katherine, she began looking for markets for her work at Christmas time. The search was unexpectedly successful, and she sold 200 of her knitted pieces to Le Sueur residents. Her specialty is colorful potholders.

Miss Heintz acquired her knitting skill at the Minnesota Braille and Sight-Saving school in Faribault, attending her first classes when she was only seven years old.

'Year of Decision' Arrives for U.S.

America Alone in Struggle To Save Western Ideologies

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—Cartoonists and others have titled 1948 "the year of decision." It is a pretty good title. The only trouble is that America's most important decision has already been made, and nobody seems to realize it. We know that the British empire has broken up, but, aside from the fact that there is some grumbling about loaning money to the British, it doesn't seem to concern us very much.

In the current issue of the United Nations World magazine, the British historian and author, D. W. Brogan, has an article entitled "The British Shed No Tears for Their Lost Empire." In it, he says:

". . . in the nineteenth century the progress of English prosperity was in close association with the spread of a general political and economic religion of all sensible men. The Bank of England, free trade, parliamentary government all increased their range of influence together. And the English looked on what was largely their work — and their profit—and found it good. They were satisfied with what they had accomplished.

Baukhage

"It is natural enough, today, when this world situation has changed to take pretty calmly the decline in the favored historical position of England. If the spread of English ideas, practices and profits has ceased, why worry— unless you are English."

"Unless you are English."

And yet the people who ought to be doing the worrying are the Americans.

We are taking over where Britain left off, and the job is a bigger one than England faced. But, the average person in this country will say in horror: "You talk like a Communist! America's whole tradition is non-intervention. Of course we had a wild period in South America, and in our salad days as a nation, we somehow acquired what we called Texas although the Mexicans, at the time, thought it was a part of Mexico, and then, there's Hawaii. But those days are over. See how promptly and politely we returned the Philippines to themselves, and took our marines out of the banana plantations where they didn't belong, and the other day even abandoned our bases in Panama. Don't tell me we're going to establish a second British empire!

We aren't. The spirit of live and let live is just as strong as it ever was in this country. Unfortunately, however, what Brogan calls "the spread of a general political and economic religion of all sensible men" suddenly encountered a force that threatened to destroy it when the Germans marched into Poland and the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor.

It took all America could afford, and more than Britain could afford, to stop that force. And today, another and stronger force is gaining power, and there is nobody to stop it but the United States.

When a British official in London said "every means short of war" would be used "by the British and American governments to keep Greece within their own strategic and ideological orbit," it didn't make much of a ripple outside of Washington. But it was a statement of tremendous import, for it means that the Truman doctrine was not just a phrase, that its implementation is now certain. It means that the people responsible for the destiny of the United States know that the year of decision is here, the decision having been made not in Washington, but in the Kremlin, just as the decision to fight Japan was made, not in Washington, but in the office of one squat little man now awaiting a death sentence in Tokyo, one Hideki Tojo, former premier of Japan.

Partisans Succeeded In Soviet Sphere

Today it is fashionable to make funny cartoons about the "third party" announced in December by Henry Wallace. Yet that third party fits neatly into a plan to wreck our way of life, the plan, another part of which was the careful coaching by the Kremlin of the "partisan" fighters in World War II. The partisans were formed, first to help beat down one of the Soviet's enemies, but they also were groomed to destroy representative government in their respective countries.

The partisans were most successful in the countries nearest Russia, in territory where the Red army, in the guise of allies fighting a common enemy, gained a foothold which they kept when peace came, and which was used to put their trained stooges into power.

In Italy and France, they were unable to capture completely the partisan or resistance movements. But they did get a grip on both countries which neither France nor Italy dared throw off until the United States made a tacit condition of aid. The expulsion of the Communist parties from both governments.

Temporarily, at least that much of the carefully-planned Soviet program failed. But new steps are being planned. A part of the pattern of communization is Communist alliance with the left-wing non-Communists. The Reds cooperate with the non-Reds, help them bring about their objectives, then slowly dominate and absorb them. One method used by Reds to get rid of non-Communist left-wing resistance is to help a reactionary government into power. Such a reactionary government suppresses the non-Communist left-wingers, and pushes those surviving deeper into Communist toils.

That is where the Wallace third party fits into the Kremlin design. The Reds hope it will split and weaken the liberals in this country, increase the friction between them and the conservatives as much as possible, aid the conservatives to get into power. Then when the reaction sets in, the conservatives will be thrown out, and the well-organized Communists can take over easily.

Greece is a testing point in the Russian-American struggle. The only way in which the Communist internal aggression there could be checked was for Britain and the United States to step in and actually direct the Greek government. That was done. Much as any country dislikes having a stronger one run its affairs, the United States, as a choice of evils, is the less unwelcome to the Greeks, especially when we come bearing gifts without which the government knows it cannot resist the Communist organization.

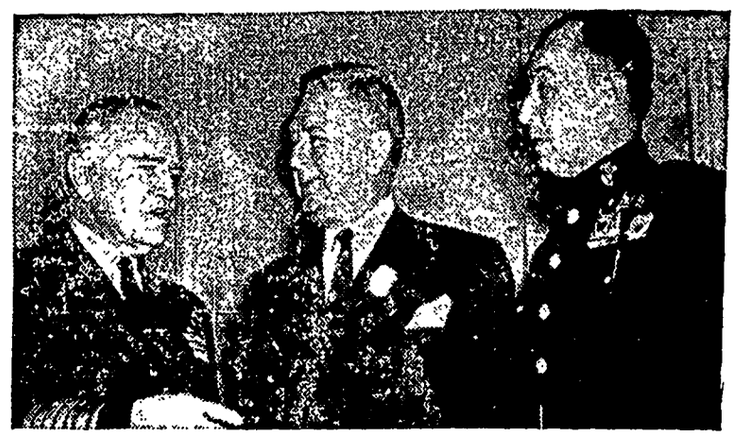
When one talks with the "exiles," the refugees from the Red terror, one is appalled by their attitude. Recently I spoke at length with a former foreign minister of one of the countries now firmly in the jaws of the Soviets. He assured me that today, if there were a free election in his country, not 1 per cent of the people would vote to support a Red regime. He said these "satellites" are not satellites at all, they are as much a part of the Soviet Union as the Ukraine or Outer Mongolia. The secret police paralyzes all independent action.

There is a desperation about the attitude of these men who fought the losing battle against the Kremlin. They say there is absolutely no hope for Europe unless the Russians are driven back to their old borders, and the Balkan states, Poland and Finland are freed of Russian domination. They say there is only one thing that will have effect: A threat by the United States to use force.

When the quotation of the London official which I mentioned, stating that the United States and Britain were committed to "measures short of war" came over the wires, I was reminded of the conversation with the former foreign minister.

He had said to me: "If the United States threatens to use force now, the Russians will pull out of Eastern Europe. They cannot afford war now. They fear the United States. But in a few years, mere threats will not suffice. The Russians then will be ready to fight."

And this force moving against the "political and economic religion of all sensible men" is moving not only in Europe. All along Russia's periphery, the red tide is rising against its frontiers, in the Middle East, in India whose gates Russia has threatened for centuries, in China, Korea, in the islands adjacent to Japan.



THEY WON'T LAND . . . In Philadelphia at a rally of the marine corps reserve, Gen. Clifton B. Cates (right), new commandant of the marine corps, took occasion to announce that no leathernecks are scheduled to land in Palestine. He also dismissed the sending of about 1,000 marines to the Mediterranean as "routine." With General Cates are Fleet Adm. William Halsey and James H. Duff, governor of Pennsylvania.

NEWS REVIEW

Slump Possible: Truman; Cite Air Power Need

In this season of presidential reports to the nation the alarm bells were jangling for everything from the state of the entire world to the frayed condition of John Doe's back pocket.

And through his "Semi-Annual Economic Report of the President," Mr. Truman sounded the gong ominously on a new note: The impending peril of economic disaster in the U. S.

The nation's economy, he said, is operating on borrowed time and inflation-ridden Americans are operating on borrowed money in a situation flirting with depression.

Millions of persons in the lower income groups, his report pointed out, now are keeping the inflation carousel whirling by liquidating their savings, reducing their current savings and by extensive use of consumer credit.

"Such use of savings for current living expenses is an ominous sign for the economy as a whole."

Without stopping to consider any possible political aspects of the President's economic report, Americans could take it as a sober, realistic picture of what lies beneath the relative luxury in which many of them are existing now.

Exhaustive and complete, the economic survey presented figures notable in that they:

1. Showed for the first time that "real purchasing power" of the American masses—basic factor supporting U. S. economy—has declined 8 per cent since the first quarter of 1946, and that

2. Millions of Americans are living on their savings accounts and borrowing money. Almost one-quarter of all families and more than one-half of families earning less than $2,000 yearly "held no liquid assets in 1947."

Then Mr. Truman tied in these facts with his administration's proposed policy to beat the inflation rap. If inflation, he said, is "permitted to run its own course, it will break with destructive force."

And in order not to let it run its own course the President again urged adoption of his anti-inflation program—limited price and ration controls

That way, he indicated, lies a new, greater economic era for the U. S. embodying maximum employment and solid and lasting prosperity.

AIR STRENGTH: 'A-Day' 1953

How important is it that the U. S. have a potent, efficient air force? Virtually a matter of life or death, thinks the President's air policy commission which recently reported on the status of the nation's air strength.

Immediate and substantial enlargement of the air force for "survival in the air age" was urged by the commission; and January 1, 1953, was set as "A-day," or the ultimate date when the U. S. might consider itself relatively secure against atomic attack.

After "A-day," the commission intimated, it will be anybody's ball game as far as airborne atom bombs are concerned. "The air force is hopelessly wanting in respect of the future . . . when a serious danger of atomic attack will exist."

On that premise the group recommended that the government start now to spend on the air force in 1948 1.3 billion dollars more than the 2.85 billion currently scheduled for this calendar year, and that in 1949 the total be raised still another 1.3 billion dollars.

For actual air strength the commission said that by 1942 the U. S. should command a total of 12,000 first-line planes, plus more than 8,000 held in reserve.

Although it was extremely unlikely that the air policy commission's recommendations would be adopted in toto by this or any other peacetime congress, the report put realistic emphasis where emphasis belonged. Everyone has been aware that air power is mandatory if the U. S. is to have any degree of national security in an era of feverish atomic-bomb production, and the commission has succeeded in putting that awareness on as factual a basis as is possible now.

OPEN CITY: Jerusalem

Since apparently nothing can stop the quasi-civil war between Arabs and Jews in Palestine, that country's harrassed government has done the next best thing and requested both factions to spare the holy places of Jerusalem from any depredations they might carry out.

The Palestine government asked the Christian, Moslem and Jewish religious communities to declare Jerusalem's ancient walled area an "open city."

That plea couldn't stop the bloodshed but it could preserve the religious relics sacred to all three of the world's main religions.

Meanwhile, transportation was being made available to evacuate any of the 1,500 Jews still living under Arab siege inside the walls. They are the remnants of 4,000 normal residents of the area.

Which Way Judea?

Moshe Shertok, head of the Palestine Agency's political department, now in the role of liaison official to U. N., ponders one of the many enigmas partition of the Holy Land has thrust upon him. He said the Jewish agency soon would ask U. N. for an international police force, arms and funds to enforce the partition agreement.

FROM SNAIL FEVER TO MALARIA

Plan African 'Disease Safari'

Armed with microscopes instead of 16-inch guns, naval medical scientists are preparing for a new sort of African safari on which they will study some of the diseases native to the dark continent.

The navy medical group will accompany the African expedition being sponsored by University of California, hence will have the duty of providing medical service to the university paleontologists and anthropologists who will cover most of Africa this year seeking traces of primitive man and apes.

For their own purposes the navy doctors will study such native diseases as African sleeping sickness, bilharzia or snail fever, plague, scrub typhus, yellow fever and malaria. They also will scrutinize a number of parasites which inhabit human beings, for instance the particular form of hookworm in Mozambique, Portuguese East Africa.

To pursue their studies the group will have to trap and shoot animals which are the disease carriers. Among these are the rodent-carriers of bubonic plague, the zebra, deer, gazelle, elan and possibly lions, tigers and leopards which are believed to be reservoirs of African sleeping sickness.

Most of these animals have not been used in research by American medical scientists before because animals which are potential disease carriers are not allowed to be imported. If they should escape captivity they might introduce an entirely new series of diseases into the United States.

There are particular regulations, for example, against the fruit bat, a known carrier of malaria, which, if once established here, would destroy citrus fruits.

The fruit bat, however, is highly regarded by medical scientists as a good laboratory animal because it is easily raised in captivity. It is possible that certain phases of the malaria cycle now entirely understood could be worked out through study of it.

FIESTA OF FUN . . . The costumes, traditions and music of Old Mexico add color and pageantry to the annual Charro Days Fiesta at Brownsville, Tex., the 11th annual edition of which is scheduled for February 5 to 8. (1) Boys and girls of any land will "hang over the garden gate." The gate in this case is an antique ironwork affair from Mexico, now in a Brownsville hotel's courtyard. (2) Even the youngsters dress in authentic costumes for the fabulous Charro Days. (3) A giant rubber tree furnishes background and seats for these Brownsville girls, garbed in their fiesta costumes. (4) A feature of every fiesta is the street dancing by colorfully costumed celebrants. (5) A street scene shows three senoritas garbed in different versions of the popular china pablana. The Spanish influence is noted even in the buildings that line the street.

...come and Be Gay'

Texas Fete Perpetuates Color and Pageantry of Old Mexico

WNU Features.

BROWNSVILLE, TEX.—One hundred years ago on the banks of the famed Rio Grande a town was founded that was destined to absorb the cultures and beauties of its neighboring city of Matamoros, Mexico, and blend it with the industry and life of this country.

The gayety of the neighboring country, the color of the celebrations of the country that was divided but never separated by the Rio Grande and the colorful costumes with which these people bedecked themselves appealed to the Texans, who immediately adopted them for their own.

This exchange of friendship, dress and language grew the desire to bring the beauties of the sister country to a wider range of people in the U. S. So, 11 years ago a group of civic-minded citizens of Brownsville formed Charro Days, the purpose of which was to celebrate annually a fiesta that would combine the costumes, the traditions and the music of Mexico before winter visitors to the Lower Rio Grande valley. The venture was successful and so encouraging that thousands of "turistas" came to participate in the fun and color.

There is no parallel to Charro Days anywhere. Nowhere else along the border, and nowhere in Brownsville, will be found the cultures meeting and blending in such camaraderie and color.

The people of the Rio Grande live in a world of their own. Especially in the year when the monsoon and no season bring vast agricultural activity to a standstill. The fiesta comes during the period of Lenten for four days during the week before Lent when the Rio Grande valley throws off its cares and pour into the Mexican valley's metropolitan city for a romantic masquerade.

Fiesta to World.

The Charro Days parallels the growth and development of Brownsville, for the fiesta proportions of the International Gateway." Charro Days Fiesta February 5 to 8 comes during the city's centennial year and finds the community on the threshold of a year of vastly expanded agricultural, transport and industrial progress.

It is fitting that an "International Fiesta" such as Charro Days should hold such a high place in the affections of Brownsville's own citizens and the thousands of visitors who make annual pilgrimages to this area to participate in the colorful pageantry and holiday spirit.

In Brownsville during Charro Days "Every man is a king, every woman a queen" and the invitation to the whole world is "Come and be gay with us." There are no spectators at the Charro Days Fiesta except by choice, the only membership requirement being an "authentic" costume for male and female participant.

There are authentic men's costumes ranging from the cotton trousers and shirt, straw sombrero and rawhide sandals of the Mexican peon to the silvermounted sombrero and richly braided costume of the wealthy padron or charro.

In authentic costumes for women, there are the inexpensive but comfortable and colorful cotton "ranchcrita" costumes and the handembroidered and sequined china pablana styles which are kept for years, assembled and worn only during the fiesta.

Traced to Princess.

The china pablana costume reputedly was introduced into Mexico by a Chinese princess. The princess made her own clothing so beautifully that native women copied her garments, naming them in honor of the Oriental royalty.

Four full days of unending pageantry, costume splendor and gala entertainment for young and old will provide a well-rounded program for guests at the Charro Days Fiesta.

Among the outstanding events will be three grand costume balls where more than 1,800 couples will dance nightly to the strains of music by Desi Arnaz and his orchestra; street dances and entertainment with music by roving bands of strolling troubadors and marimba bands; impromptu session of the Court of the Brush where swift "injustice" is meted out to all who come within the menacing dragnet; three days of gala parades, with colorfully decorated floats and thousands of costumed marchers wearing the costumes of all Latin American nations; sanctioned national championship speedboat races in Brownsville's ship channel; a full day of entertainment in the form of a gigantic carnival in the neighboring community of Matamoros, Mexico, and a Mexican village featuring handicrafts, spicy foods and art exhibits.

Welcome is on every doormat in Brownsville. "Come and be gay with us," the centennial city urges all "turistas."

Prewar Rents Still Prevail In 'Town Inflation Forgot'

TOMBALL, TEX.—"We're happy and we want to see everybody happy." That's the philosophy which prevails in Tomball, heralded as "the town inflation forgot."

With prewar rents and almost prewar prices still prevailing and with its service of free gas and water to all residents, prosperous Tomball boasts the lowest living costs in the United States.

In booming Houston, only 32 miles away, the cost of living has soared 111 per cent in 10 years.

"It makes us sad to read about prices going up so high in Houston and other places," bewildered Tomball boosters declare.

The most expensive rental in Tomball—a lovely brick house on the outskirts with an expansive, well-kept lawn—rents for $50. That, too, includes free gas and water.

Large, modern houses rent for $35, some for $23. Nice apartments, many of them three room duplexes with bath, can be obtained for $10 a month, furnished at that.

A good lunch at a restaurant, complete with three vegetables, costs 40 to 45 cents. School children get the same lunch, minus one vegetable, for 35 cents. Hamburgers and chili cost 15 cents.

Adults must part with 35 cents to see the latest movies at the Tomball theater. Children are admitted for 12 cents.

The free gas and water — along with the general prosperity which contrasts so strangely with unbelievably low prices—are attributed to oil. Twelve years ago the local cemetery was moved to Willow Grove to make way for an oil derrick.

The oil company, which drilled 25 wells within the city limits, contracted to provide gas and water free as long as the oil supply holds out.

Mayor Cecil Faris, "the biggest man in Tomball"—he wasted away from 400 pounds to a mere 280 after a recent illness—admits that "maybe the cost of living has gone up in Tomball, but it's not noticeable." "Of course," he adds, "we did object when the restaurants jacked up lunches from 40 to 45 cents."

William Holderrieth, owner of a furniture store, had been renting the same apartments for 10 years for $8 a month. He increased the rent after furnishing them. Now they rent for $10. Most of them are three-room duplexes with bath and, of course, free gas and water.

Meat-Rationing Program

WASHINGTON. — The agriculture department is ready with a detailed meat-rationing program which Secretary Anderson will present privately to Sen. Ralph Flanders (Rep., Vt.), who is preparing a bill to revive meat controls.

Department experts have worked out a tentative program, based upon the old OPA point system but designed to create a greater demand for cheaper meat cuts. It would be administered and enforced by the agriculture department, with the FBI on the prowl for serious violations and black marketing. The planners have taken special pains to weed out irritations which crept into OPA and left a bad taste with the public.

The agriculture plan is to ration meat alone, not fats and oils. Coupon books would be issued by voluntary ration boards, but the central directors would be handpicked by Secretary Anderson for their ability to get along with the public.

The decision to use the point system was reached after close study of the British rationing system, which regulates the money that can be spent rather than the amount of meat that can be purchased. The plan finally adopted would cost heavily in coupons for the tenderloin steaks but charge fewer points for the less tender cuts.

Third Party

Like little boys who whistle passing a graveyard, Democratic chiefs still pretend they have nothing to fear from Henry Wallace's third-party movement, though the defection is bound to hurt the party in such key states as New York and California.

Taking their cue from the President, who refused to dignify Wallace's bolt broadcast by listening to it, White House aides affect yawns when interviewed on the subject. Privately, they comfort each other with the hope that the Democrats will pick up enough new middle-of-the-road support as a result of the Wallace break to offset the leftist vote they will lose in the next election.

Three Famous Sons

The sons of three famous men called on President Truman the other day with a plan to do something "on their own" about the housing shortage. The callers were Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., Rep. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, son of the former ambassador to Great Britain, and Robert Wagner Jr., son of New York's veteran senator.

Their plan: A nation-wide campaign to force congress to take a long-delayed vote on low-cost housing. The drive, they said, will be launched at a Washington meeting of war-vet leaders beginning March 1.

They explained that our whole economy is threatened by high housing costs, and that a housing program for the relief of low-income groups goes hand-in-hand with the government's battle against inflation.

The President emphasized that one of the most serious problems of the current housing situation in addition to high prices was the low quality of new housing.

Miami Racket

Fabulous Miami has come up with a brand new racket — planting islands in Biscayne bay. Already 15 man-made islands have been dredged off the bay bottom and pushed above the water line. Green grass and swaying palms are blossoming where fish formerly swam. The result is valuable real estate near the exclusive Miami Beach area and new source of cash for shrewd promoters.

The new racket will be brought under congressional fire this session by Florida's Rep. George Smathers, who is interested in keeping the bay from being clogged with new islands.

Oil Reserves Depleted

The American oil industry now is spending the huge sum of $1,800,000 in a powerful counter-sales campaign to persuade people not to buy oil.

The amazing fact is that it was only just recently that the oil industry was willing to face the facts regarding the oil shortage. Before that it was blandly asserting that oil would flow freely as soon as there was sufficient transportation.

The inescapable truth is that our basic oil reserves are drying up. And the strong likelihood is that many American homes will go without heat for prolonged periods this winter while farmers will run short of motor fuel to harvest their crops next fall — unless a stiff conservation program is adopted at once.

Boiled down to the cold facts furnished the government by oil men, here is the oil outlook today: America's petroleum reserves are estimated at about 22 billion barrels.

Give Meals Company Manners

Company for Dinner

"I just don't feel like I can entertain now that food prices are so high," said a friend of mine to me recently. Actually you can do so, I explained to her, if you serve less expensive food but dress it up, company style.

There's pot roast, for instance, which, done to succulence and tenderness, and garnished with stuffed prunes or spiced crab apples, leaves nothing to be desired.

Or what about a meat loaf? Now there's a good old-fashioned meat dish that can be dressed up beautifully with a fluting of mashed potatoes and served with parsleyed carrots and glazed onions.

Short ribs of beef? Yes, indeed, there are few meat dishes that can come up to it in tastiness.

Desserts can be made that are very inexpensive, but, put in a mold, they have "company manners." Here are menus to fit the smallest of purses, but they all have style and class.

Menu I.
Yorkshire Steak
Seven-Minute Cabbage
Glazed Carrots
Tossed Salad- French Dressing
Cloverleaf Rolls
Cocoa Sponge

You'll enjoy this Yorkshire Steak as much as roast of ribs if you'll make it this way:

Yorkshire Steak.
(Serves 6)

- 1½ pounds chuck steak, cut 1 inch thick
- 1 recipe Yorkshire Pudding

Season steak with salt and pepper; place in a greased baking dish or roasting pan in which meat fits the bottom. Brown in a hot oven for 5 minutes. Make recipe for the pudding; pour over the crowned steak. Reduce heat and bake until the meat is tender.

Yorkshire Pudding.

- 1½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- ¼ cup hot beef drippings

Sift together the dry ingredients. Add beaten egg yolks. Add milk and mix well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a shallow dish containing the beef drippings. Bake in a fairly hot oven for 30 minutes. Cut in squares and serve around the meat.

Cocoa Sponge.
(Serves 4-6)

- 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- ½ cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons cocoa
- ¾ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 3 egg whites
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- Salted almonds

Soften gelatin in cold water. Combine sugar and cocoa. Scald milk; gradually add to sugar mixture, mixing constantly. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add vanilla extract. Chill until syrupy. Beat with rotary beater until fluffy. Beat egg whites stiff; add salt. Fold egg whites into cocoa sponge, and beat until mixture holds its shape. Pour into a mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with almonds.

Almond Sauce.

- 3 egg yolks
- ¼ cup sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups scalded milk
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- ½ cup chopped blanched almonds

Beat egg yolks, sugar and salt; add milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture coats the spoon. Cool. Add almond extract and nuts.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU

Cream of Mushroom Soup
Veal Chops Baked in Sour Cream
Buttered Broccoli Baked Potato
Date-Apple Salad
Rye Bread Toast Beverage
Orange Chiffon Pie

Menu II.
Pork Roast with Spicy Sauce
Sweet Potatoes Cinnamon Apples
Cabbage-Pineapple Slaw
Brussels Sprouts
Whole Wheat Biscuits
Frozen Orange Cream

Pork Roast with Spicy Sauce.
(Serves 6)

- Fresh picnic shoulder
- Salt and pepper
- 2 small onions, minced
- 1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- ½ cup vinegar
- ½ cup water
- 2 tablespoons catsup

Have picnic shoulder boned and rolled. Season with salt and pepper. Place fat side up on roaster pan, and bake in a moderate oven allowing 40 to 45 minutes to the pound for baking. Combine other ingredients and cook together for 5 minutes. Serve with roast.

Menu III.
Tomato Juice
Savory Meat Loaf
Green Peppers Stuffed with Corn
Browned Potatoes Orange Rolls
Grapefruit Salad
Apple Betty with Hard Sauce or Chocolate Souffle

All the items in the above menu are extremely inexpensive, and even if you are busy, they are easy to prepare.

Savory Meat Loaf
(Serves 8)

- 2 pounds ground beef
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- ¼ cup minced onion
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 1¼ cups condensed vegetable soup
- 2 cups bread crumbs
- ½ cup fat

Mix ingredients thoroughly in the order given, with the exception of the fat. Shape into loaf and place in a pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about 1½ hours. Baste meat every 15 minutes with a mixture of the fat and 1 cup boiling water.

If mashed potato topping for meat loaf is desired, swirl on top of loaf when it has finished baking, then run under broiler flame to brown the potatoes.

LYNN SAYS:
Wise Planning
Saves Work

Keep a list in an easily accessible place, preferably where you do your best thinking, such as over the sink while washing dishes, and write on it as things occur.

A wise homemaker is never without staples; she replenishes these periodically and never "runs out of things."

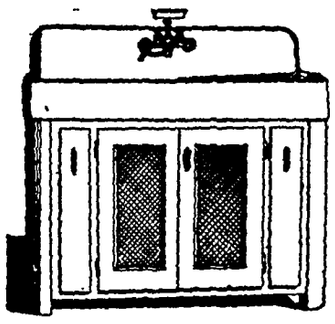
Plan your menus when you are hungry. This adds more zest to your meals.

Season to please your family. It is not economical to prepare foods which do not go over with the family.

When you have to make sustitutions, choose foods that are the same kind such as cabbage or spinach in place of lettuce; another fruit for a fresh fruit.

Shop in person and early in the day for best quality. Learn to read labels so that you'll know what to expect, how many the product or container serves, and its cooking characteristics.

New Method Simplifies Making Sink Enclosure



ANYONE can now build this modern sink enclosure from easy to follow pattern offered below. User merely cuts each piece according to the pattern specifications, then assembles each piece exactly as the pattern and step-by-step instructions indicate.

Complete information for fitting enclosure to all size sinks is included. No special tools or skill required. All materials pattern specifies are readily obtainable at your local lumber yard.

Enclosure has two handy pull-out drawers at either side. One is used for storing cleaning supplies, the other for hanging towels. Send 50 cents for Sink Enclosure Pattern No. 41 to: East-Bild Pattern Co., Box 74, Pleasantville, N. Y.

NOTICE TO

Fuel Oil Users

A survey of the Fuel Oil situation in this territory does not indicate that the supply is critically low—but, if everyone saves a LITTLE there will be ENOUGH for all.

The Federal authorities and the Governor of the State of Iowa has asked everyone to conserve on fuel oil. Conservation of oil can be accomplished by the elimination of needless heating—avoid heating unnecessary space by shutting off radiators and air registers in spare rooms Check storm doors, windows and insulation that they are properly installed to keep cold out Be sure your heating system is operating efficiently Turn down the control at night and don't have it warmer than necessary during the day. Pull shades at night, and close off unused rooms.

We are reasonably sure that the present rate of fuel flow ino this territory will continue for the remainder of the season. BUT - -

If Everyone Saves A Little, There Will Be Enough For All!

Leave plenty of space behind the car ahead when the streets are slippery. Be sure the defroster is working and leave a crack in one window to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Schoenwetter are the proud parents of a 9 pound baby girl born Sunday morning, February 8, 1948 at the Forest City Hospital. The new girl has been named, Audrey Adel. They also have a little boy, Dennis, in their family.

WERNET—CHRISTIANS

Duane Christians, son of John Christians, and Iona Wernet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wernet of Nora Springs, were married at the parsonage of the Evangelical and Reformed Church at Klemme, Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Witnesses were Clarence Christians and Lola Wernet, twin sister of the bride. Rev. C. Grosshuesch performed the double ring ceremoney.

The bride wore a blue suit, the brides maid was dressed in gray. The couple will take a Honey moon trip to Florida.

Upon their return they will be at home on the John Christians farm. Duane intends to take care of his father's farm.

USHER BOYS WIN UNUSUAL SCOUT AWARD

The Misses Marie Blank and Delores Thieman went to Rowan Sunday to attend morning services at the Methodist Church at which time Rev. S. W. Cunningham presented Worthie and Carroll Usher with the Boy Scout award and badge, "God and Country". The boys had worked two years to earn this unusual award.

Worthie is an Eagle Scout and Carroll expects to earn his Eagle this summer or fall. Both are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Worthie Usher and are grand sons of Mr. and Mrs. T. Blank.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR THE BELLAMY FAMILY FEB. 2

Neighbors of the Howard Bellamy family held a farewell party for them at their home 6 miles east of Klemme on the evening of February 2nd at which time 500 was played and late in the evening a nice lunch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy were presented with a nice gift from their neighbors.

The following neighbors and their families were present: Claude and Alvin Miller, Kenneth Curry, Bruce Peck, Adolf Meinders, Wm. Neuberger, LuVerne Johnson, Norman Liesener and Howard Bellamy.

A NOTE FROM THE SENIORS

Reported by La Vonne Beier

The Senior class has finally settled down after the big "fracas" over where we should have our pictures taken. We will probably have them taken the first part of March by the Woltz Studio of Des Moines.

Shorthand is getting more difficult every day. We are busy learning brief forms. We are beginning to discover that there are brief forms for brief forms and this is very confusing.

In English class we are working on 500 word reports. These are taking up a great deal of our time as a lot of research must be done. In our grammar work we are studing clauses.

History is getting more interesting because we are now beginning to study about Franklin Roosevelt and his administration. The chapter we are working on is "Labor and the Machine Age".

"Interest and Bank Discount" is the chapter we are working on in Bookkeeping. It deals with borrowing money and the interest rate.

Air pressure and climate are the subjects of discussion in World Geography. We have not done any work in our work books this week.

The Speech class is working hard on their declamatory speeches to present before a high school assembly. Some are of drama and some are comedy. I am sure they will be very interesting.

Return From Trip South

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Neuberger returned home Monday from a month's trip that covered 5,000 miles through southern States and Mexico.

Much of their time was spent with his brother, John Neuberger at Brownsville, Texas. John has a nice business handling Federal Butane Gas, electrical appliances, plumbing, etc. and employs a plumber, an electrican besides other help.

Williard Fessenden, a cousin of the Neubergers, took care of the farm while they were away.

Marjorie Meinders Bride Of Laurice Lemke, Feb. 1

Miss Marjorie Meinders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Meinders, Klemme, became the bride of Laurice Lemke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lmke, Garner, at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening, February 1 at the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church. Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch officiated at the double ring candlelight ceremony.

The traditional nuptial music was provided by Miss LaNelle Harvey. Rev. H. Harvey sang, "Because" by D'Hardelt, and "I Love You Truly" by Bond. Miss Stella Hollatz, Clear Lake, was in charge of the guest book. Miss Marjorie Hartbeck presided over the gift table.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin bouffant skirted gown, styled with fitted bodice, bateau neckline, long sleeves extending in points over the hands, and a tunic effect flowing into a graceful train. Her veil of illusion net edged with shadow lace was fashioned en-train, and was held in place by a crown of seed pearls and yellow rosebuds. She carried a white Bible with an arrangement of white satin streamers, fernery, and an insert corsage of yellow roses and white carnations.

Miss Mildred Meinders, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her floor length gown of gold brocaded satin was fashioned in similiar style to the brides but with cap sleeves and attached tunic. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white carnations and yellow roses. Elaine Jurgemeyer, the brides niece, was flower girl and wore a gown and veil identical to the brides. She carried a white basket and scattered blue and yellow sweet peas. The ring bearer, Eldon Nuehring, nephew of the bride, wore a white gaberdine suit and carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

The groom was attended by his brother, Byrnes Lemke, who was best man. The ushers were Raymond Schoenwetter and Harlan Nuehring. The groom wore a gray gaberdine suit, the best man wore blue. All wore white carnation boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride was attired in black sheer with a shoulder corsage of red and pink roses. Mrs. Lemke, the grooms mother, wore navy blue sheer and a corsage of red roses.

A reception was held in the church parlors with approximately 250 guests attending. The color scheme of blue and yellow was carried out in the decorations. The table for the bridal party was centered with a 4 tiered wedding cake decorated with yellow rose buds topped with a miniature bride and groom. After a short prayer by the grooms brother, Wm. Lemke, of St. Paul, a delicious lunch was served.

For going away the bride wore a gray gaberdine dressmaker suit with dark brown accessories and the bridal corsage.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lemke attended Klemme High School graduating in the class of '45. The bride attended Iowa State Teachers College and taught school for two years. The groom has been engaged in farming with his father. After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home on the parental farm. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lemke are moving into their home in Garner.

FRESMAN NEWS

—Reported by Harley Barz

While we were taking a breath, another week slipped by so we have to endure the consequence.

Mr. Andrea has had quite a time explaining Algebra to us. This week we have been learning to solve equations by graphs, adding, subtracting and substitution. It seems Algebra must have some grudge against some of us because it just doesn't penitrate.

In English we have been working on a chapter of explaining things. In Literature we have been reading about Paul Bunyan. It is too bad he isn't here today to help us conquer these hardships of school.

—Reported by Beverly Beier

Well another week closer to the end of the school year. Time goes so fast that great day will be here before we know it.

Tonight, February 6, 1948, is a hard time party for the High School, and from the sound of things around here it should go off with a bang.

Two days of Biology period was devoted chiefly to the flow of the blood in the human body. Each person counted his or her pulse to see just how fast our heart did beat. We found that pulses varied considerably. They ranged from 64 beats to 92 beats in a minute.

In geometry we seem to be getting deeper into those circles all the time, and a good share of us just can't figure them out.

Manual training has been running about the same for the boys, with magazine racks, hall trees, shelves, lamps candleholders, and shoeracks. So some pretty good items have been coming out of that room.

In Home Economics the girls are busying themselves with aprons and dresses and running those newly acquired sewing machines. We find there is really more work to dress making than it looks like from the outside.

Now in English we have just finished reading the stories of "Louis Pastuer Life Saver." and "The Alamo." We find these stories interesting as well as educational.

JUNIOR NEWS

—Reporter, Donna Fjetland

The main topic of interest around school these days deals with a High School party. There seems to be, however, a slight disagreement on how the party should be arranged. The party is scheduled for Friday evening, February 5th. I'm sure we will have a fine party as all the class presidents are working very hard to get it arranged.

Studies seem to have gotten more difficult this semester. Here we were all looking forward to easier subjects but we are doomed to disappointment. Oh well, I guess we'll live through the semester.

American Literature is all about the different literary periods and forms. Interesting! Well, we'll leave that up to your imagination.

Shorthand is getting more difficult. We're gradually coming to the point where we are beginning to understand it.

Typing is progressing very nicely. It is a subject that seems to be quite well liked by all students.

Government is a subject that deals with our democracy. We're supposed to know all about it, but do we? Well, we're trying.

Geography is made quite interesting by a teacher who has had personal experience by an amount of traveling. At least that's what I've been told.

Here's hoping we have fun Friday night! If we don't we can just blame ourselves, can't we?

The Postmaster-General,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

For the luvvamike will you do something about curbing the issue of postage stamps or at least getting them, down to a size so a customer will know when he is buying a three-cent stamp and when he is buying a roll of wall paper, a plastic storm-shutter or a blow-out patch?

I see where a new one is coming out in a few days called the Sutter Gold Discovery stamp, which will be another one a little too big to lift. This on the heels of something called the "Everglades National Park Three" which was about as weird a looking thing to put on a letter that I ever saw. It was too big for any letter I would c er write and rich stomach-ache green. This Sutter stamp, I see, will be deep purple and certainly no smaller. From the pictures of it in the papers I would think it about the size of an old Currier and Ives print, only it has more stuff on it than Currier and Ives would have attempted.

It looks like a summer resort souvenir postal of the type the boosters club would get up and more words than you would find, on anything but a billposter for a cigarette or liver pill. In big letters like you would find on yellow newspaper extra proclaiming a Third World War it says:

CALIFORNIA GOLD
CENTENNIAL
Sutter's Mill, Coloma
Where James W. Marshall
Discovery Started the Rush of Argonauts
1848 U. S. POSTAGE 1948

What is happening among the fellows who design, authorize and print postage stamps in this country today? Is it being done by a lot of refugees from advertisement agencies, experimental lithograph shops and some organization dedicated to ignoring the paper shortage? Has anybody who is a designer of whiskey labels got a hand in this business?

How does Washington reconcile this unnecessary use of paper, mucilage, dyes and inks with its nonstop economy drives and "Don't Waste" campaigns? Huh?

I had a letter the other day that required three three-centers, an airmail and a special, and I had to splice two envelopes together in order to find room for them. Is that right?

Maybe you are concentrating on making life exciting for stamp collectors or just having good clean fun, I wouldn't know. But you are making life miserable for the people who mail letters and just want a simple stamp, not a curio, a kidney plaster or a synthetic Indian blanket.

Have a heart, Elmer.

IT'S THE LAW

By CLARISSA LORENZ

MY HEAD was in the clouds that warm day in April driving up Broadway. The radio in my jalopy was tuned in on Tom O'Neill, my favorite voice of the year. I was listening to The Songshop Hour when the sharp blast of a whistle brought me down to this too, too solid earth. I'd driven straight through a red light.

As a big, burly traffic cop swaggered over to my battered coupe, my knees shook. I had a deep respect for law and order.

"What's the big idea, sister?" he bellowed.

"I'm sorry, officer, I said meekly. "I was late for school."

"Better be late than sorry," he said in an altogether different voice as he caught O'Neill's lush rendition of "Irresistible You." He jerked his head and smiled at the radio. "You know, that guy's not bad."

"He's simply super," I gurgled. "He makes me all goose-pimply."

The blue eyes of the law flickered, then fell on the volume of Popular Melodies on the seat beside me. "Music! What do you do for a living?"

"Piano teacher," I replied, "at Miss Follens Day School." I gave him a wan smile.

He pushed back his cap and wiped the moist, blond ringlets plastered to his brow. "Ever do any radio work?"

That made me wince. "I just wish I had a dollar for every audition I've had."

"Pull over," he ordered.

I obeyed with alacrity. At the curb I became voluble. Anything to stave off a ticket. I told him that radio was a snare and delusion for any ambitious young girl. I'd got nowhere, "Sorry, we have our own staff accompanist. . . . Sorry, nothing right now, but if you'll leave your name—"

He grinned, and it was like a burst of sunshine. He leaned against my car, looking at me as if I were a crossword puzzle. "Say, how about dinner tonight?"

You could have knocked me over with a feather. "Why, I don't believe--" I began primly. "You see--" If he thought I was a girl who could be picked up, even by a policeman . . ."

"Okay, sister," he grunted. "I get it." Then his voice became official again. "Well, I'll let you off this time."

"Thank you, officer," I said.

"But don't let it happen again. Remember, I'm keeping my eye on you."

I looked at my watch: 8:45. I'd never make it by nine. Not when I had to pick up that daily cargo of seven squirming kids and convoy them to the red brick building that was my prison five days a week. I sighed. Art is long and life is short, and didn't I know it. I'd probably go on teaching sassy brats five-finger exercises until the grave yawned. Especially now that Charlie had gone international on me. Corporal Charles Brent, No. 1 heel! When I got his bombshell of a letter two months ago, telling me cooly he'd fallen for one of those Aussies, I kissed all hope goodbye of every marrying an artist. Charlie played the bassoon before the Army made him play the bazooka.

Until today I thought he'd broken my heart. But that night in bed, when I tried to picture him, all I could see were a pair of sky-blue eyes, strong white teeth, and moist, blond ringlets under a policeman's cap. I felt a twinge of remorse at having snubbed him. What if he was just a traffic cop? Maybe something could still be done about it.

"But don't let it happen again. Remember, I'm keeping my eye on you."

Next morning I wore my new Easter bonnet, a pink, flyaway confection. On my radio O'Neill was giving deliriously with "Time Waits for No One." My heart went boomp as I approached the crossing on Broadway. There stood my nice giant in a shaft of sunlight. I drove straight through the red light. At the blast of that tin whistle I jammed on the brake. He sauntered over, twirling his shiny toy.

"Well, sister," he said sternly, "if you're gonna make it a habit, I have to take steps. Let's see your license."

I looked at him in sheer dismay. O'Neill went crooning on, but my traffic cop seemed deaf this morning. "Make it snappy." So I fumbled in my imitation alligator bag and fished out the license folder. "Beryl Thompson," he read, and took down the number, name and address, handed it to me. "Here you are."

"You conceited goon," I told myself hotly, watching his broad back. "Serves you right."

The low ceiling depression that hung over me all that day was lifted at 5:35 when I got back to my room and found a message to call Mr. Burnham at the radio station. I flew to the hall phone.

"Be at the studio tomorrow night at 6:30 sharp," he said over the phone.

The next day I was on hand long before six. "It's a transcription program," Mr. Burnham explained. "Miss Miles, the studio accompanist, is out sick, and her substitute's having a baby."

"What's the program, Mr. Burnham?"

"The Songshop Hour. Studio B. Here's the music. You'll have plenty of time to run through it before O'Neill gets here."

"O'Neill? But he broadcasts mornings, doesn't he?"

"He records at 6 the night before."

AS THE green baize door of Studio B closed soundlessly behind me, I felt like turning cartwheels. A little before 6 30 a familiar voice broke up my practicing. "Hello, sister"

I looked up, and my fingers began to prickle. There was my traffic cop, bareheaded and in shirtsleeves. "Pardon the attire," he said with mock politeness. "I'm not supposed to wear my coat off duty."

"Are you Tom O'Neill?"

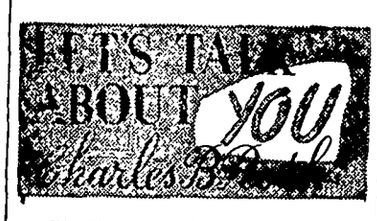
"Professionally speaking, yes." He came over and began polishing with his hand the badge on his blue shirt, which read, "The Singing Cop." "Nobody knows about it except the gang here. I told 'em it had to be that way, or else. If the boys down at the station knew I was a crooning canary, life wouldn't be worth livin'."

I sat still, looking slightly ga-ga. "Say," he said, his eyes twinkling, "that's a fine reception, considering that I finagled you a radio job."

"You did?" I gasped. "But Mr. Burnham said—"

He waved his big hand at me. "I know. When I heard about Miss Miles, I asked him to give you a try-out." He looked up at the clock. "Okay, beautiful. Let's try that old number, 'Why Don't You Fall in Love With Me?' "

I obeyed mechanically. As I said before, I have a deep respect for law and order.



WHEN YOU ADMIRE YOU ARE HAPPY.

A man who was my friend is gone. He was a man everyone loved. He could go into any company and inside of five minutes win every person in that company as his friend. His genius was the genius for expressing his warm and friendly personality.

Last night when I was thinking over our friendship for each other and trying to analyze to see if I could discover the true secret of his gift, I hit upon something that hadn't ever occurred to me before.

His genius was the genius of knowing how to admire.

I've never known anyone who was so filled with admiration and enthusiasm for everything in the wide world as he was. About things that you and I take for granted, he went into raptures.

In the lowliest and meanest of lives he saw qualities to praise. Yes, I'm sure his genius was the genius for admiration and that that was what made him liked and popular and happy, for you know what I am telling you, that he was a happy man. How could he be otherwise when he found all the world and its contents infinitely beautiful and exciting?

As I was thinking about him last night I couldn't help comparing him—contrasting him rather—with another friend. In his friends this other friend of mine finds nothing to admire, absolutely nothing. He attacks everything: The institutions which men have founded are grounded on stupidity. The heads of our government are crooks. Is he happy? You know he is not.

I think it probably is easier to be like the second man I have told you about than the first, for it seems to be one of the traits of human nature to like to find fault rather than to find things that are good.

Yet I am convinced that anyone, with a little practice and attention to the job, can acquire part of the genius of the man I started telling you about in this little article—the man who had the genius for admiration.

Just as an experiment suppose for one day only you do not criticize anything or anybody. Look for something to admire and praise. If you look hard enough for something to praise, you can find it, but if you don't find it right off, don't say a word of criticism—just keep still if you can't praise.

It's amazing the effect this has on your life and on your outlook on the world.

One man to whom I gave this advice a short time ago said it was like going out into the sunlight after leaving a darkened room when he began to see the world as an admirer rather than as a fault-finder.

Consider that an experiment of this kind will take just one day of your time and not cost one cent. Don't you think it's worthwhile?

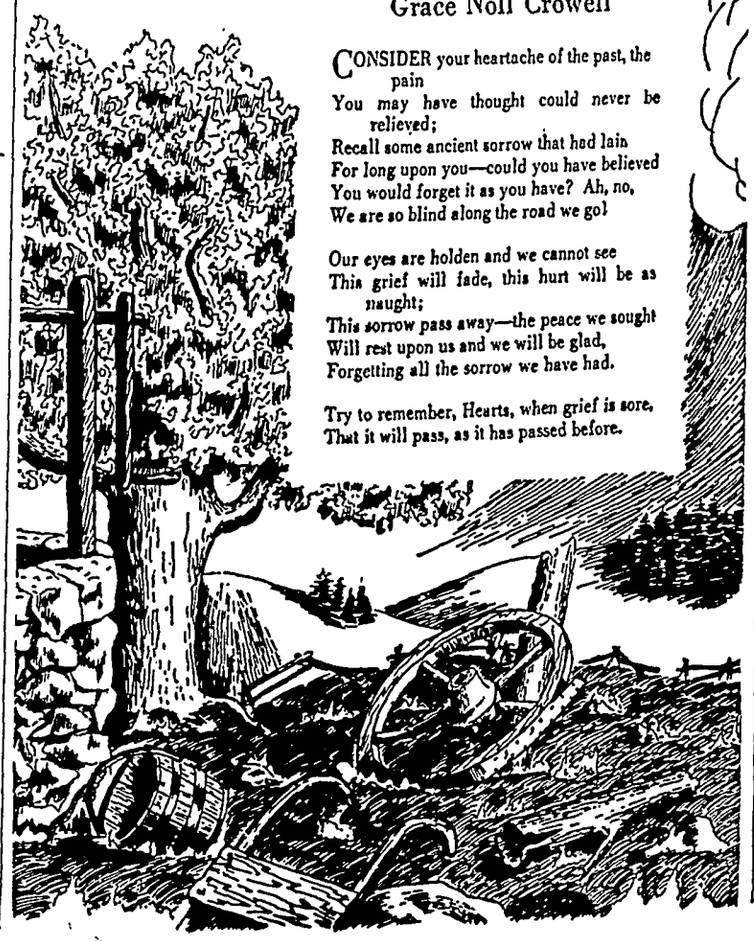
Try to Remember

Grace Noll Crowell

CONSIDER your heartache of the past, the pain
You may have thought could never be relieved;
Recall some ancient sorrow that had lain
For long upon you—could you have believed
You would forget it as you have? Ah, no,
We are so blind along the road we go!

Our eyes are holden and we cannot see
This grief will fade, this hurt will be as naught;
This sorrow pass away—the peace we sought
Will rest upon us and we will be glad,
Forgetting all the sorrow we have had.

Try to remember, Hearts, when grief is sore,
That it will pass, as it has passed before.



THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

SCRIPTURE: John 14:25, 26; Acts 2: 1-4, 3:1 to 4:31; Galatians 5.22-26.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 6:10-20.

Power of Holy Spirit

Lesson for February 15, 1948

TWO decades ago, the famous preacher, Rev. Reginald J. Campbell, declared, "The 18th Century may be characterized as the Century of God the Father; the 19th Century as the Century of God the Son; and we are praying that the 20th Century may be experienced as the Century of the Holy Spirit." That was a brave and hopeful prayer. May we claim the same hope.

Dr. Newton

"These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you," John 14:25, 26. Go on to read Acts 2:1-4; 3:1 to 4:31; Galatians 5: 22-26 and you will have the Scripture passages for Sunday's lesson, with Ephesians 6:10-20 as the devotional reading.

PETER ACTS BRAVELY

IN THE passage in Acts we have the picture of Peter and John about to enter the temple on the Sabbath, when suddenly they find themselves confronted by a sick beggar. What could they do with him and for him? He was asking for money.

Peter said, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee, in the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk!"

The lame man stood up, leaping and walking and rejoicing, and went into the temple with Peter and John. Only the power of God can do such mighty works. Peter was not afraid to tackle the man's needs, since he relied upon God's wisdom and strength.

WHY PETER WAS BRAVE

PETER is often pictured as a very quick-tempered person. He was usually the first to speak in every situation. He was the leader of the group—a natural leader of men. But Peter did not assume to meet the poor man's need in his strength. Only "in the Name of Jesus."

When we forget self and rely upon the Holy Spirit for direction, we are enabled to meet and master any situation. Juniors will do well to remember these words, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts," Zechariah 4:6.

Junior boys and girls can meet life's tasks in the same assurance in which Peter dealt with the lame man, if we rely upon the Holy Spirit.

SECRET OF CHRISTIAN POWER

"YOU shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you." Acts 1:8. That is the secret of the Christian's power. It does not originate elsewhere. It is God's gift to those who implicitly trust in him.

This great truth is particularly appealing to intermediates and seniors. Young people are keenly sensitive to the times in which they live. We live today in an hour of unprecedented power—atomic energy! But all of the marvels of modern science have not been able to give young people the sense of mastery. Rather, we are afraid. The scientists themselves tell us that this is history's most precarious age.

Only when the Holy Spirit is regnant in our hearts can we possess the power of which Paul is writing in Galatians, when he says, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

WHEN WE HAVE THAT POWER

WHY, then, should we ever be weak, when we may always possess that power? This is the most searching question for any Christian. The answer will lead us to certain inevitable admissions. We become weak spiritually when we forget to pray, when we forget to read God's word, when we allow the interests of this world to blind our eyes and deafen our ears to the reality of God's presence.

The Holy Spirit will dwell within us, if only we will welcome him. He will not come unbidden; he will not remain unwanted. He cannot be made secondary. Either he guides or surrenders the reins to us.

Our lives are spiritually strong and healthy when the Holy Spirit governs. Our work is effective, our words are compelling. We speak not our wisdom, but the wisdom of God. We go not in our strength, but in his strength.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Will's Proud of His Big Ears

Will Dudley's mighty proud of his big ears! Best crop of corn he's grown since '38. And Will, like so many other farmers, has plenty of reason to be proud of what he raises.

The farmer has always been a keystone in our economic life, and the key to our national well-being. But from where I sit, he's more important now than ever. He's not only feeding America—but friends of America overseas—building good will for this country at a time when friendship for democracy is most important.

And farmers have willingly shouldered that responsibility. Will spends extra hours in his cornfield ... comes home tired to a temperate glass of beer and early bed, to be ready for the next day's work.

From where I sit, America can be mighty grateful for her five million farmers ... for their productivity, hard work, and temperate living—of which Will's moderate glass of beer is proof!

RABBIT SEASON CLOSES ON FEBRUARY 29

The current rabbit season closes February 29 after what conservation officials describe as a "good season but spotty". All of Iowa's 99 counties, except seven in the eastern part of the state, were described prior to the opening of the season Sept. 1 as having from excellent to good populations. Actual hunting revealed pre-season estimates correct except with local shortages in some of the inland areas. Conservation officers report more rabbit hunters in the field than for many seasons and attribute the fact to the high prices of domestic meat. In some areas hunters have cropped rabbits rather closely, but, according to conservation officers' reports, many areas containing large populations of cotton-tails went through the hunting season virtually untouched. Rabbits are the number one game animal in Iowa as well as in the United States as a whole, more hunters seeking the illusive cotton-tail each year than any other kind of game.

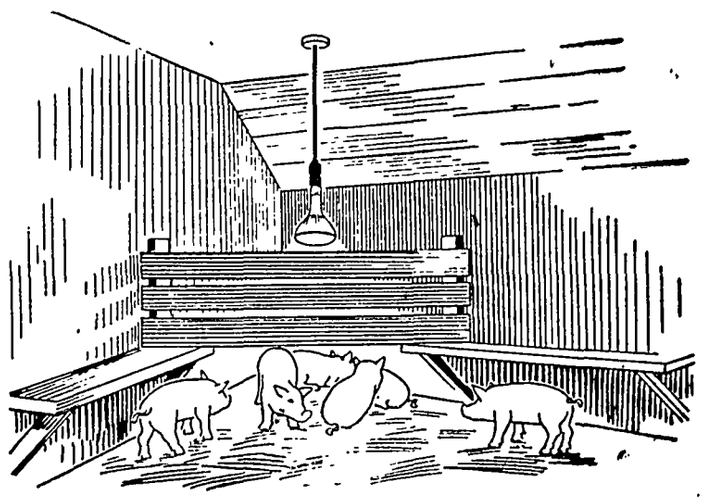
THE NEW R-40
HEAT LAMP
Price $1.10



Ideal For Pig Brooding

• Baby pigs have a better chance for survival when protected in electrically heated brooders. The glowing warmth from an R-40 Mazda heat lamp is a natural safeguard to their well being—dries them off quickly after they are born, and keeps them comfortable so they do not have to snuggle up against the sow . . . thus, reducing the possibility of death from crushing. Purdue University proved that "An average of 1½ more pigs were saved per litter when electric heat was used. This amounted to 3.5 per cent more pork on the way of weaning time."

You Can Make A Brooder Yourself---It's Easy

First, build the pig brooder solid enough so the sow won't knock it down. Next, place the R-40 Mazda heat lamp where it will do the most good. Bear in mind that these lamps do not necessarily heat the air of the house. They warm the pigs by radiant energy. Protection for the pigs may consist of a simple rail along the side of the pen, some boards nailed across the corner high enough so the pigs can get under easily; or a hover with a top on it built in the corner. The hover gives protection from drafts and helps save some of the body heat. Operating cost of lamp—¾ of-a-cent per hour on 3-cent rate.

Splendid Cough Relief Is Easily Mixed at Home

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.

Put the Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. Never spoils. Tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you sleep. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Pinex Is Swift Acting!

Older folks say it's common sense . .

It's Easy to Serve Eggs Daily!

Eggs A-Plenty!

"My family simply refuses to eat eggs, and I don't know how to work them into my menus," says many a housewife who is trying desperately to give each member of her family "the egg a day" that nutritionists recommend.

Today, we're devoting the column to recipes which are rich in eggs. For the families who refuse to eat eggs as such, there are many ways of disguising them. Instead of poached eggs for breakfast, serve a Dutch pancake, for example, and see how well received it is; use batter bread for lunch, and serve a vegetable custard for dinner. Isn't it easy?

Dutch Pancake.
(Serves 4)

- 4 eggs
- ½ cup sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons soft butter
- Confectioners' sugar
- Jam

Beat the eggs. Sift flour and salt together and add to eggs alternately with milk to make a smooth batter. Spread butter over the bottom and sides of a cold frying pan. Pour in batter and place in a hot (400 degrees) oven. Bake 20 to 25 minutes, reducing heat gradually to moderate (350 degrees) during the baking. Pancake should puff at the sides and be crisp and brown. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and spread with jam. Roll like an omelet. Serve on hot platter at once.

Batter Bread.
(Serves 6)

- 3 eggs
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1 cup sweet milk
- ⅓ cup fine white cornmeal
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons melted butter or shortening

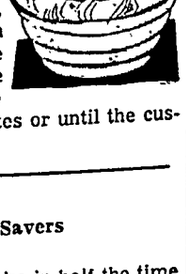
Set baking pan in oven to heat. Beat eggs, add buttermilk and sweet milk, beat well and add dry ingredients sifted together, then the butter. Grease heated pan, pour in batter and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) until set in center, about one hour. Serve at once.

There was a number of vegetables which are enhanced if they are made with an egg mixture and baked. Why not try one of these when adding eggs to the diet as well as your vegetable?

Corn Custard.
(Serves 6)

- 3 eggs
- 2 cups canned corn, kernel style
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- 2 cups milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- Cracker crumbs
- Butter

Beat eggs well. Combine with corn, melted butter and milk. Stir well. Add seasoning and sugar. Pour into a buttered casserole and sprinkle with cracker crumbs, then dot with butter and bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven for 40 minutes or until the custard is firm.



LYNN SAYS:

You Need Time Savers In the Kitchen

Potatoes will bake in half the time if you parboil them first for 15 minutes.

Rhubarb, celery, asparagus and green onions should be cut by the bunch rather than by the stalk. Use a board and a very sharp knife.

Paper towels or napkins kept in the bottom of a hydrator will prevent rust from forming on lettuce and other greens.

Ham-Cheese Souffle.
(Serves 4)

- 1½ cups milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup grated Swiss cheese
- 4 eggs
- 4 slices ham
- 4 slices tomato

Add milk, seasoning and cheese to slightly beaten eggs. Turn the mixture into a baking dish which has been greased and line with ham and tomato and set into a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 25 to 30 minutes or until the custard is firm. Let stand for three minutes and unmold onto a platter. Serve with tomato sauce, which may be heated canned tomato soup.

The above mixture also may be baked in individual ramekins. Place ham and tomato slice on bottom of each before pouring in the mixture.

There are lots of fine variations for omelet that make it ideal for serving as a main luncheon or supper dish.

Omelet Supreme.
(Serves 6)

- 6 eggs, separated
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons flour
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ⅓ cup green pepper or parsley, finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons onion, finely chopped
- 2 cups creamed tuna, chicken, lobster or vegetables

Add salt to whites and beat stiff. Beat yolks then add pepper and flour and beat to blend thoroughly. Add green pepper and onion. Fold yolk mixture into beaten whites. Pour mixture into two well greased hot eight-inch layer pans (place pans in oven to heat while mixing omelet). Spread mixture lightly in the pans having mixture higher around the edge. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 15 minutes or until knife inserted comes out clean. To serve, invert one layer on warm serving platter. Pour about ½ cup creamed mixture over layer. Invert second layer atop sauce. To serve, cut in pie-shaped pieces. Pass remaining creamed mixture in a bowl.

Other fillings for omelet: Chopped crisp bacon and fried potatoes; creamed tongue; chopped, cooked chicken livers with sauteed onions; creamed oysters or shrimp; corned beef hash; highly seasoned, stewed kidneys, chopped and spread over top; cooked sausage meat; broiled or creamed sweetbreads; thin slices of tomato sprinkled with soft, grated American cheese — place under broiler until cheese melts, then serve omelet immediately.

Released by WNU Features.

After you have grated cheese, rub fresh bread over the grater to clean it. Save the crumbs and use for crumbing.

When you make cake or other things, measure everything on a tray, then check it. In this way you will be able to follow recipes more accurately.

Use paper when you peel fruits or vegetables. This is easy to gather up and dump into the garbage can, and saves cleaning the working space.

Misspell Mississippi On Purpose On Stamp

Washington, —The bureau of printing and engraving admitted Thursday it is purposely going to misspell Mississippi on its forthcoming stamp commemorating the states's anniversary.

But it doesn't want the nation's school children to take offense. There's a reason for the mistake.

The bureau spotted the misspelling in setting up sample designs of the state's official seal. It asked state authorities to take another look at the official seal, and, sure enough, there it was: MISSISIPPI. Only 3 "s's".

So that' how it will be on the new stamp too.

Third World War Brews

IT TAKES no expert to see that President Truman is weakly leading the United States into a fighting-war with Soviet Russia. Our first engagements may involve us with Russia's unofficial Communist guerrillas in Greece. We may lose a naval ship in the Aegean or Adriatic, through more or less covert action by disguised Soviet forces employing a mine for the purpose.

We turned the other cheek in the case of the Japanese attack on a little vessel of ours called the Panay; when Tito of Jugoslavia shot down one of our army transports which was unarmed and murdered five of our young men, we kept our indignation under control.

In the light of later information, it is not certain, as most of us believed at the time of the Panay attack, that we were entirely innocent there. We were pro-Chinese and we were not trying to avoid trouble. There was contributory negligence on our part. But in the murder of the American fliers by Tito we were entirely innocent, and the attack was inexcusable and an ac' of war.

President Truman is hopelessly committed to a political tradition and a course toward war with Soviet Russia.

If Mr. Truman continues to monkey around in Europe, we will be back in another world war, our third, simply for lack of the courage and integrity to be the American people in the American nation and to mind our own business.

War Still Boosts Budget

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has submitted his budget totalling 39.7 billion dollars, the largest peacetime budget in history. Had the President been playing politics, as charged, it would seem the simplest thing to do would have been to slash it to the bone — down to where even Congressman John Taber couldn't cut it. But 79 per cent of this budget, or 31 billion dollars in round figures, is, in the President's words, "the cost of war, the effects of war and our efforts to prevent a future war." Only 21 per cent, or about eight billion, represents the expense of running the government.

Where to cut? Taber says the budget must be slashed by three billion dollars. Will it be off national defense, foreign aid, public debt reduction — or will it be at the expense of governmental services here at home?

The President painted a rosy picture of the state of the union: Corporate profits the highest in history; 58 million persons working, which is 10.5 per cent more than in 1940; production 7 per cent over 1946 and 76 per cent over the 1935-39 average; consumer income the greatest ever at $1,264 per capita compared to $1,074 in 1946; business investment in plant equipment and inventories more than 25 billion dollars, four billion over 1946.

The President says the figures are misleading — that prices are outstripping wages, high income families are losing purchasing power, savings accounts are shrinking, credit is expanding dangerously.

The President has set up a program to get the fly out of the ointment. No one else has. Yet nothing is done about it.

Small Investors Predominate

THE plants and tools of American industry and transportation have been supplied by nearly 60 million stockholders. The money provided by those stockholders has created jobs for almost 60 million workers. It built and equipped our mills, factories, transportation systems, mines and utilities, and provides the working capital that makes our present tremendous production possible. By far the larger portion of those 60 million stockholders are small investors who have saved frugally and invested as insurance for declining years. During 1947 the average return they received on each dollar invested was 2.7 cents.

SHORTY OUTMATCHES A KILLER

By JOE STEEL

"WELL," I says to Shorty No-Legs, "this is it. You bust it or it busts you."

It was undoubtedly a very tough one. Sheriff Shorty No-Legs would have to prove it accident or murder. If murder, then he'd have to catch the murderer. And if he failed anywhere along the line he'd have to resign.

But that was the way Shorty—World War I veteran—had asked it. There had been so many unsolved murders in Dry Creek county that Shorty ran on his word that he would resign whenever he failed to solve a case.

The name Shorty had given when he first came to Scenic City came from the fact that he actually had short legs. There were barely enough inches below Shorty's powerful chest to enable him to do what he dolefully called walking.

"I'm blowing like a winded horse," Shorty said, glancing back down the boulder-strewn way down which he had slipped and slid to the battered sports roadster where the man's body lay.

Several hundred feet above looped the narrow concrete ribbon of Blue Grass highway. The roadster had been moving on the steep down grade toward Scenic City when it failed to make a hairpin turn and catapulted its dance of death down the almost sheer mountainside.

Shorty mopped his face with a red bandana and began a painful search of the wreckage. There wasn't much. The dead man wore a rather flashy suit. He had on yellow shoes, so new that match scratches in the instep of the left shoe could plainly be seen. Cigarette stubs and ends, and a picture of the dead man and a little geezer tentatively named "Chick," rounded out the inventory.

"Somebody," said No-Legs, "must have got this guy drunk or doped, driven him to this curve, pushed the roadster for the railing, and then dropped out. The pavement doesn't show any tracks," he added thoughtfully.

"Hey," I says, "maybe I could give you pick-a-back back up this mountain." I could see he was anxious to leave.

"Nuts!" he snorted, giving me a well-aimed slap in the midriff with one of his ham-hands. "Me weighing without legs, and you weighing legs and all. You should have stayed with medicine or law. Barbers are always skinny."

I'd hunted with him many times, and seen him climb around in the mountain lots, but now he amazed even me. He was driving hard on this case. We clambered up to the highway just as the ambulance arrived.

"Take him to Doc's," No-Legs said. But we found out, after a long-delayed breakfast, that the Doc didn't find any trace of drugs or liquor on the body.

"Maybe he went to sleep," I said.

"Maybe," agreed Shorty. "Now just prove it and I can resume my disturbed slumbers."

I couldn't, of course. "Who found him?" I asked.

"Doc. Comin' back from a night call over in the hills somewhere and noticed the broken guard rail."

"What do you think?"

"I don't," he said. "I ain't got nothing to think on. There's got to be some other angles."

"What do we do now?"

"Nothing. When you're hunting geese the first thing to do is stay in the blind. Then if they don't fly in to you after so long, you try to crawl up on them. We ain't stayed in the blind long enough yet."

He was right. Soon after dinner a smallish fellow showed up at Shorty's office. He was in hunting togs and would have looked like Little Lord Fauntleroy if it hadn't been for beetling black eyebrows and the vicious looking cigar he was smoking.

"I'm 'Chick' Rhodes," he said, "and I wanted to talk with you about the wreck out on Blue River pass. Heard about it at the cafe."

No-Legs kept Rhodes talking, then finally tossed the picture he had taken from the dead man on to the desk. Three words were under it "Lefty and Chick."

"That's Lefty all right," Rhodes said. "And that's me," pointing to the other figure. "Taken in Chicago just before me and Lefty sold our pool hall and headed for California. Lefty was going to be drafted, and I couldn't run the place myself. Figured maybe I could handle a sandwich stand in California for the duration."

You could never tell from looking at No-Legs what he was thinking. He'd spread his stumps apart, roll his eyes up at your face and stare as unblinking as an owl. He was doing that now. He never seemed to have to ask questions. He'd just wait the other guy out—squeeze him dry with the weight of dead silence.

I could see the pressure on Rhodes. Like everybody else—he'd a lot rather No-Legs would fire questions than just stare.

Forced on the defensive and obviously angry at having to explain further to the legless owl before him, Rhodes started again. "You see, I came out on the train for a deer hunt while Lefty wound up our business. He was to meet me here today and we'd go on together." He ground his conversation to a stop.

No-Legs sure surprised both "Chick" and me with his next move. He twisted his wrist and the big gun in his hip holster moved into Rhodes' stomach. "You're under arrest for murder," he said.

Rhodes soon recovered from his surprise and grinned wickedly. "I can prove I was back up in the hills for a week until an hour ago. I couldn't have done it."

"That's right," said No-Legs. "But you probably helped engineer it!" Over Rhodes' threats of suit and vengeance, No-Legs had him locked up.

"Let's go to Rhodes' hotel," he said, without giving me a chance to ask questions. Arrived in "Chick's" room, he began digging in suitcases "Here they are." He said it just like he knew they'd be there. They were insurance policies on the life of George (Lefty) Ellitto. Twenty-five thousand dollars in all.

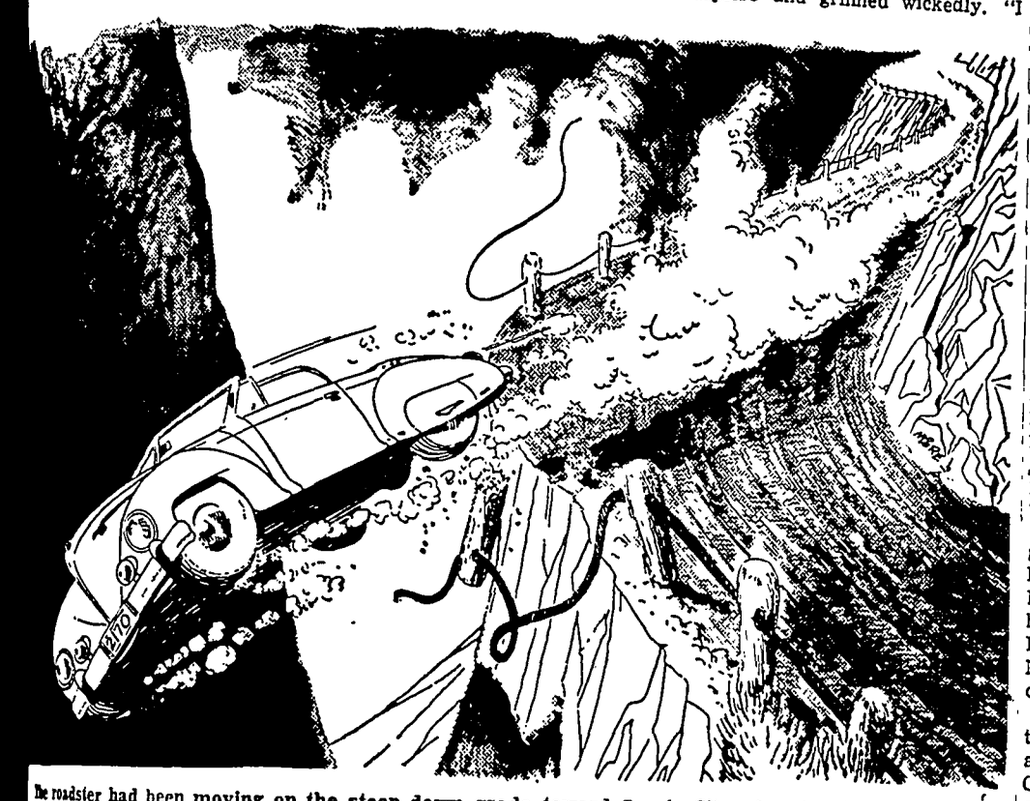
"That dead man ain't Ellitto," No-Legs said. "I think Ellitto must have done the actual murder."

I still couldn't get it. But that evening No-Legs met me in the cafe and gave me the dope. Rhodes had confessed. "It was like I said. Ellitto killed him. You see Ellitto and Rhodes found a guy in Chicago that looked just like Ellitto. They offered him a good proposition to go West with them. Up on the pass Ellitto stops the car on a pretense of getting the other fellow to drive.

"Then, he knocks him in the head, stows him behind the wheel and maneuvers the car over the cliff. We couldn't tell whether the fellow had been hit in the head or got the bump in the wreck."

I began to see. "Rhodes was to collect the insurance, meet Ellitto in Old Mexico or some place and live happily ever after." Then I got out the question that had tormented me all afternoon. "How did you know the dead man wasn't Ellitto?"

"That was easy," No-Legs said. "Left-handed guys don't scratch matches on the bottom of their left shoes. Right-handed guys do that."



The roadster had been moving on the steep down grade toward Scenic City when it failed to make a hairpin turn and jitterbugged its dance of death down the almost sheer mountainside.

Metallic Flesh and Bone Used for Artificial Ears

Metallic flesh and bone made from tantalum are providing new ears and rehabilitating torn nerves and other tissues for thousands of persons, Dr. Clarence W. Balke reported to American Chemical society.

Artificial ears have been grown on frameworks of tantalum wire, and more than 5,000 skull injuries have been repaired with tantalum plates.

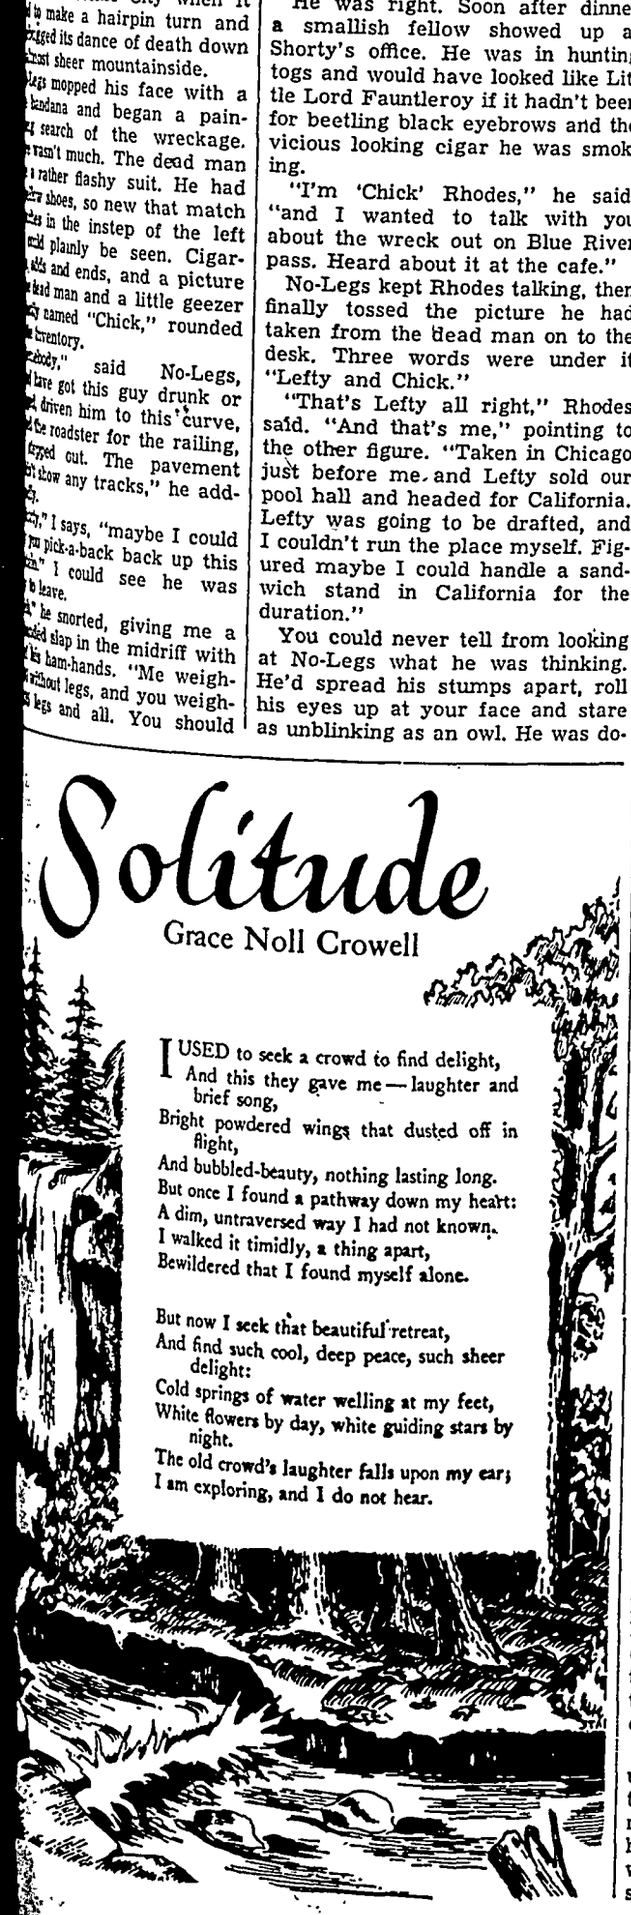
Thousands of severed or injured nerves have been made sound again with tantalum foil, and literally miles of wire have been used for surgical sutures, Dr. Balke reported.

Tantalum is called "biologically acceptable" since body tissues adhere to and grow over the metal. Both tantalum and columbium are completely non-irritating to living tissue, and they are not made irritating by pathological or disease conditions within the tissues.

Implants of tantalum gauze are used where muscular or other soft tissue is either milling or has been removed. Final repair of recurrent hernia and closure of abdominal walls after cancer removal are outstanding illustrations.

Solitude

Grace Noll Crowell



I USED to seek a crowd to find delight,
And this they gave me—laughter and brief song,
Bright powdered wings that dusted off in flight,
And bubbled-beauty, nothing lasting long.
But once I found a pathway down my heart:
A dim, untraversed way I had not known.
I walked it timidly, a thing apart,
Bewildered that I found myself alone.

But now I seek that beautiful retreat,
And find such cool, deep peace, such sheer delight:
Cold springs of water welling at my feet,
White flowers by day, white guiding stars by night.
The old crowd's laughter falls upon my ear;
I am exploring, and I do not hear.

By GRANTLAND RICE

PROBABLY the main reason that Rear Adm. James M. Holloway Jr., head of the U. S. naval academy, hasn't called us in to help select Navy's next coach is that Admiral Holloway is an extremely smart person — one of the finest types West Point or Annapolis have drawn to date—and a better educator than he is a football selector.

Another reason is that the admiral figured we would cast our vote for Capt. Tom Hamilton, who is now Navy's director of athletics.

Captain Hamilton, a brilliant navy officer, only needed a bit more modern experience and a slightly less rigorous schedule to be a match for anyone. He was far behind such coaches as Fritz Crisler, Lou Little, Frank Leahy and many others in experience. And experience is the most vital requisite of any football coach.

Grantland Rice

Suppose Navy had its pick of the field? Who would be the one to select? Among the best coaches in college football — in no selected order—we could name the following:

Leahy, Notre Dame; Crisler, Michigan; Little, Columbia; Red Blaik, Army; Matty Bell, S.M.U.; Jimmy Phelan, St. Mary's; Blair Cherry, Texas; Jim Tatum, Maryland; Wallace Wade, Duke; Paul Bryant, Kentucky; Red Sanders, Vanderbilt; Bobby Dodd, Georgia Tech; Wally Butts, Georgia, and Bernie Bierman, Minnesota.

But how many of these can Navy get? I don't think Navy could get Leahy, Crisler or Little. I doubt that Navy would reach for Blaik. I've heard two names mentioned lately—Phelan of St. Mary's and Tatum of Maryland. Either would be an excellent choice.

Phelan's 1945 or 1946 St. Mary's team was certainly as well coached as Leahy's Notre Dame teams or Crisler's Michigan teams. Leahy and Crisler currently are rated on top. Both are brilliant coaches. But no one knows how large a part the best material plays in football.

Coaching and Material

In my book, material is far more important than coaching. Leahy and Crisler have had far the best material lately. They have had material that completely outclassed rival players through the last year, and both know it.

They have been meeting teams that never had a man who could make their first squad—line or backfield. Notre Dame and Michigan steadily get the best material in the Midwest, a strong football sector.

There is no such monopoly in other sections. Since the war Army and Navy took a drop—a terrific drop on Navy's side.

Material is important, but a smart, keen, alert coach also is a big help. Modern football moves at a killing pace. There are so many new offenses and defenses that a coach slightly behind the times is completely bewildered.

A football coach is the hardest working instructor in the realm of sport. No other coach in any other game faces such consistent pressure. No other coach faces so many problems, has so many worries, so many shocks.

The pro game is full of fine coaches: Paul Brown, Steve Owen, Sutherland, Greasy Neale, Buck Shaw—on and on. But the answer here is still largely material.

I have no record of Navy's material for 1948. But it should match Army's, and with a pro coach such as Phelan or Tatum or one of that class, Navy isn't going through a season again winning one game a year.

Navy has won only two games in the last two years. This won't happen through 1948.

A Possible Tangle

The Big Nine either is gambling on Minnesota to win her conference crown next fall or figuring the West Coast is too dazed to care what happens. At least nothing so far has been done about sending her second or third-place team to the Rose Bowl game in case Michigan and Illinois run 1-2.

Our information on Illinois is slight. But our information on Michigan is complete, and it indicates that the Wolverines will be just about as tough next fall as they were last season.

Michigan loses a flock of stars, including Chappuis, Weisenburger, Yerges, Mann, Ford and Pritula. But there will be more than enough stars left to plug the gap and make the Wolverines again as formidable as any squad in the land.

Bernie Bierman at Minnesota will have a fast, powerful line, one of the best in football. But he could use one or two of Michigan's backs.

The point is this—suppose Michigan wins again and the Big Nine sends out Minnesota or Purdue to play against the Pacific Coast conference champions? I have an idea you will hear one of the loudest squawks that ever churned up the coastal waters of the purling Pacific.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 2:37-47; Ephesians 4:1-6.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 4:1-6, 11-13.

Christian Fellowship

Lesson for February 22, 1948

GEORGE WASHINGTON was a splendid example of Christian fellowship. If you will travel through the older portion of the United States, particularly in Virginia, you will come upon numerous instances of church pews marked as follows, "George Washington worshipped in this pew on blank date." Evidently, it was his custom to attend public worship in whatever community he spent the Lord's day. Thus he entered into Christian fellowship, gaining a blessing and rendering a blessing.

Dr. Newton

The lesson passage for Sunday is found in Acts 2:37-47 and Ephesians 4:1-6, with several other passages which will be quoted before we finish the column for this week.

A HAPPY TIME IN CHURCH

READ Acts 2:41-47, and you will find a picture of a group of very happy people. Think of it, three thousand people professing faith in Jesus and receiving baptism in one day! But read on—they were not only happy at church, but they were happy because they were in the church. They continued steadfastly in the apostles' teachings and fellowship and breaking of bread and prayer.

They praised God and had favor with all the people. By their daily living they were convincing the world that fellowship in Christ is not only good on Sunday while we are at the meeting house, but good every day.

The happy homes are the homes where Christian fellowship abounds, and it is equally true in every area of life.

AT CHURCH WITH FRIENDS

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of the Lord," Psalm 122:1.

THAT is poetry, you will agree, but it is also actual testimony not only of the Psalmist, but of countless junior boys and girls throughout our land who eagerly await the sound of the church bells. Boys and girls delight to go to Sunday school and worship when the life of the church is pervaded with Christian fellowship. There they meet the finest boys and girls in the community.

BELONGING TO THE CHURCH

THE passage in Acts 2:37-47 tells us how certain people, after hearing the great sermon by Peter, asked how they might be saved. He told them:

"Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

When we invite intermediate friends to attend Sunday school and worship services with us, and they come to know of the love of God, they, too, will want to be saved. It is then the high privilege of Christian boys and girls to lead their friends to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour, and come into the church.

In Ephesians 4:4-6, we read these words: "There is one body and one Spirit, just as you were called to the one hope that belongs to your call, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all, who is above all and through all and in all."

ALL ONE IN CHRIST

THE above passage from Ephesians teaches clearly that there is a brotherhood of man, real and abiding, when we accept the Fatherhood of God, through Jesus Christ. This is the meaning of the church. No amount of man-made creeds can save us. No amount of ritual and ceremony can save us. We are saved by grace through faith, and that is the gift of God. When we repent of our sins and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, we are saved, and not until then.

The one adequate solvent for the crying needs of this frightened world is the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. Just as thousands were saved on Pentecost and again on the Lord's Day when Peter preached in Solomon's porch, so today many may be saved where the Gospel is proclaimed in its simplicity and power.

We are one in Christ, of every race and every tongue. The fellowship of Christian faith transcends every barrier — racial, economic, geographic, political, religious. We have but to proclaim the universality of this good news—proclaim it in our words and proclaim it in our daily lives.

Settling a Quarrel

An unusual custom prevails among the Apa Tanis, a tribe of 20,000 living in an isolated section of the Himalayas. When two men are engaged in a personal quarrel, such as over a debt or a woman, they are allowed to kidnap members of each other's family and imprison them in a private stockade until a settlement is reached.

JUNIOR NEWS

Last Friday nite we had a Hard-Times party at which we all enjoyed ourselves. The best dressed lady present was Miss Charolette Lewis. Charolette wore a gunny sack dress with old shoes, dark socks, and of course a corn cob pipe. The best dressed gentleman was Melvin Howard, who wore mostly rags. They both received a half of a candy bar. Now we'll have to get to what we are learning.

In Geography we are learning about the hot spots on the earth. We had to hand in our workbooks, too.

We've been having speed tests in typing on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and some of us don't come out so good.

We are now waiting for Mrs. Harvey to return our Literature tests. We finished studying about the Coloniol writers and Mrs. Harvey just thought we needed a test.

We're now studying about the election of the president in our Government.

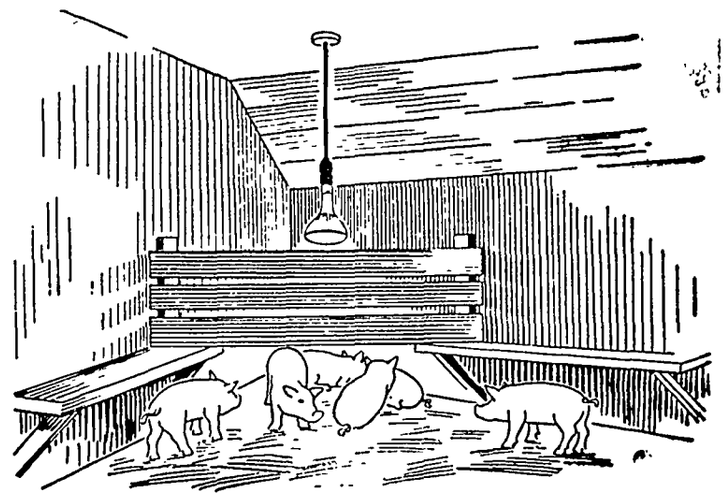
THE NEW R-40 HEAT LAMP

Price $1.10



Ideal For Pig Brooding

• Baby pigs have a better chance for survival when protected in electrically heated brooders. The glowing warmth from an R-40 Mazda heat lamp is a natural safeguard to their well being—dries them off quickly after they are born, and keeps them comfortable so they do not have to snuggle up against the sow . . . thus, reducing the possibility of death from crushing. Purdue University proved that "An average of 1½ more pigs were saved per litter when electric heat was used. This amounted to 3.5 per cent more pork on the way of weaning time."

You Can Make A Brooder Yourself----It's Easy

First, build the pig brooder solid enough so the sow won't knock it down. Next, place the R-40 Mazda heat lamp where it will do the most good. Bear in mind that these lamps do not necessarily heat the air of the house. They warm the pigs by radiant energy. Protection for the pigs may consist of a simple rail along the side of the pen, some boards nailed across the corner high enough so the pigs can get under easily; or a hover with a top on it built in the corner. The hover gives protection from drafts and helps save some of the body heat. Operating cost of lamp—¾ of-a-cent per hour on 3-cent rate.

BETTER DAIRY HERDS . . . Dairying is one of the five major points emphasized in the community development plan at Tupelo, Miss. Twenty Jersey heifers, imported from the Isle of Jersey for Lee county breeders, are shown here in the hands of 4-H and F. F. A. club members before being distributed to their owners. Each heifer costs $1,000.

SMALL TOWNS, U.S.A.

Improved System of Agriculture, Social Reforms Are Major Needs

By EARLE HITCH
Released by WNU Features.

"The small community must be regarded as a cross-section of our common life, with economic and cultural resources which will satisfy all the major needs and cravings of most men."

That thesis, expressed by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, one of the leading U. S. authorities on the values of small community life, formed the basis of the community development plan instituted at Tupelo, Miss.

The plan, now in its second year of operation and hailed as a model in revitalizing rural communities, has resulted in development of the resources in the area surrounding Tupelo on a wide scale. The region embraces five populous counties, with a total population of approximately 175,000.

Rural America At Stake — No. 6 In a Series

Diversify Farming.

Most of the agricultural production comes from small family-type farms on which cotton has been the main source of income. But cotton has been hard on the land. Also it has its ups and downs as a money crop. So the small farmers around Tupelo are being introduced to an improved system of agriculture. The land is suited to intensive cultivation, and a general program to build up the land is proceeding. What is being done at Tupelo is worth the notice of small farm communities everywhere.

The best thing about the Tupelo plan is this: It is practical. The difficulties as well as the needs have been taken into consideration, and the goals have been fixed accordingly. The plan does not expect to accomplish everything in a day. It is based on a reconversion policy that is doing two highly desirable things at the same time. It is achieving some immediate results and laying foundations for more important results in the future.

Interest in the farmers' problems is not new in Tupelo. The banks, the businessmen and the Daily Journal, Tupelo's forward-looking newspaper, for years have recognized the importance of making farming pay a good return. Thirty years ago, when the boll weevil did heavy damage in the cotton patches, the banks began promoting dairying. For years the Daily Journal has been campaigning for better agriculture. The farmers have been urged to look after their soils, and to consider growing things beside cotton.

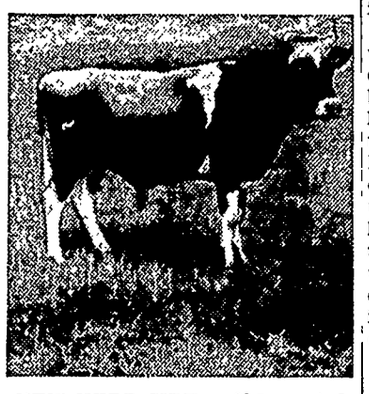
Recalls Pitfalls of Past.

This campaign has had the personal interest and a great deal of the time of the Daily Journal's energetic publisher, George McLean. Two years ago, when McLean returned from war service with the navy, he remembered the troubled times on the farms after World War I and during the depression. He was aware that cotton again might bump up against a declining market. He knew too that mechanization was not far away, and that the small farmers would be at a disadvantage when machine production is fully established. McLean determined to make a careful study of the whole farm outlook as it affected the Tupelo region.

He employed, at the expense of his newspaper, a professional farm management organization to make a study of all the problems and what could be done about them. This was undertaken by the Doane Agricultural service of St. Louis, the outstanding agency in the farm management field. The survey was completed and the report filed about a year ago.

Get Trained Leader.

The report was laid before a meeting of farm and business leaders, and a sponsoring organization was formed to back a program for building up resources of the five counties which had been surveyed. This organization became the Rural Development council. The Daily Journal furnished the money and a trained agriculturalist was employed to direct the program, with headquarters in the Tupelo chamber of commerce.



NEW HERD SIRE . . . Imported from the Isle of Jersey with the 20 heifers was Clemence's Boy, a new addition to bulls of the Tupelo area artificial insemination association.

It was realized that the first big job was to get the people fully informed of the project and what it aimed to do. To get out good attendance at meetings, an entertainment program offering popular Hollywood films was presented once a week for eight consecutive weeks in five main communities. The results exceeded expectations, as the weekly attendance at the five meetings averaged 1,000.

By the time the eight meetings had been concluded, the council had the groundwork well established for the first year's program. This covered three types of farming, which offered several different ways to increase farm income. To furnish adequate markets for new farm industry, home processing was undertaken in poultry and certain fruits and vegetables having a known customer demand.

In addition to these objectives, the council also adopted several planks in the platform of a community social program. These included good health, including a good diet; recreation, education, the church and the home.

Students Build Home for Instructor

BOONE, IOWA. — Boys in the Boone high school carpentry class are getting practical experience while their instructor, Ed Lancaster, is getting a new house.

Construction of the four-room house, which will cost an estimated $6,000, was started in mid-November. Completion date is set tentatively for April 15. Work was suspended for several weeks because of bad weather.

Boys in the class are devoting after school hours to the job. Several of those working on the house say that they hope to continue in the building trades after their graduation.

Lancaster, who also teaches an architectural drawing class, drew up plans for the house. Aside from a bricklayer, who built the foundation, and a plasterer, who will do the smooth work in finishing, the entire project will be non-professional.

DPs Have Many Skills U.S. Needs

Useful Citizens Stay Idle In Displaced Person Camps

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—It's a strange thing about us Americans who grew up under a Declaration of Independence which states that we're all born free and equal, and a Constitution which is so scornful of blue blood that it specifically declares that "no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of congress, accept any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince or foreign state."

In other words, we're supposed to believe "a man's a man for a' that."

Nevertheless, come election eve, somebody always gets very excited about the ancestors of any prospective candidate for the office of president (or the office of dogcatcher, for that matter).

So I wasn't surprised to see a dispatch come over the wires saying that somebody, who says his grandfather was the brother of the grandfather of General Eisenhower, is in a displaced persons' camp in Denmark. Eisenhower, when questioned, says his ancestors came to America before the revolution and he has little or no information about the family in Europe. A good American answer, I'd say.

Baukhage

And it serves to bring up the question of displaced persons in Europe, a matter with which the congress of the United States is mildly concerned at present. Not as much concerned, however, as Rep. William G. Stratton (Rep., Ill.) would like, since he has introduced a bill "to authorize the United States . . . to take its fair share in the resettlement of displaced persons in Germany, Austria and Italy, including relatives of citizens or members of the armed forces, by permitting their admission to the United States in a number equivalent to a part of the total quota numbers unused during the war years."

There are some 11 million persons who were enslaved, captured in war or thrown into concentration camps by the Nazis, who have been sent home, and 850,000 others who, like the alleged relative of General Eisenhower and many who have escaped from under the iron curtain since the war, can never go home for fear of political persecution in Soviet-controlled countries where they would face slavery or death. Fifty per cent of these still in the camps are women and children. One-fifth are Jews.

Many DPs have skills and are only too anxious to use them. And there is room for them — or somebody — to take the place of the manpower which has been drained from the farms in the Middle West into factories.

There are 95,000 DPs who are trained farm workers. Now, instead of producing food for others and easing the terrific strain on the American farms due to the shift in population, these DPs are eating at America's expense. I doubt if any American is hardhearted enough to say: "I am not my brother's keeper. Send 'em all back where they came from . . . to strengthen the sinews of the Communist dictatorship and live out their lives in slavery . . . if they are allowed to live at all."

Breaking down the DP census under the "agriculture" classification made by American officials, we have:

Farmers (all types)	77,270
Agronomists	5,440
Lumbermen	704
Hunters, fishermen	723
Millers	1,191
Other agric. workers	10,099

Many other skills are represented. Need any carpenters? More than 5,000 are in the camps; nearly 2,000 painters; altogether more than 21,000 trained in construction and maintenance. And so on.

No comment is necessary on the items: "Hospital attendants, 1,135; nurses, 4,057; physicians and surgeons, 1,763"; or, from the housewives' point of view . . . "Domestics, 22,066."

It isn't as if we had thousands of unemployed in this country, or that we weren't trying to increase production to feed and house our people.

It costs our army (that means you) $400,000 per day to keep these people semi-prisoners, growing up to be useless citizens by denying them freedom and hope. What does it cost our consciences?

Creed of Destruction

What is Communism, as exemplified by members of the Communist party in the United States? Some say it is a religion. Well, if the whirling dervishes are religious, so are the Communists. They are certainly as fanatically devoted to their creed. If the American people were a little more familiar with that creed, they would understand the Communists better, and it is to be remembered that that creed is more than an "I believe." It is a set of rules, and if you don't obey those rules, your life is in danger. Communists don't believe in punishment in a future life. Their motto is "do it now," and they do it.

My attention has been directed recently to one paragraph in the Communist bible, a resolution passed and accepted and integrated into the internationale. It explains just what you can expect of Communists when they join a club, a union or any international body. Expect no more of them; no less. This is the paragraph:

"There can be no question of the utilization of bourgeois governmental institutions except for the purpose of their destruction."

Many explanations have been offered as to why a normal, natural-born American should embrace communism. The reasons range all the way up and down the scale, and include everything from a broken heart to some hidden neurosis that makes other people nag their husbands, maltreat their wives, drink, kick the dog or jump into the river. But whatever the urge is, it has some strange effects on the patient.

Take, for instance, that one-time firebrand member of the "Wobblies," Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. Many of you recall the picturesque IWWs, "International Workers of the World," who flourished in the early 1900s. Miss Flynn played a spectacular part in the famous Mesabi range strikes of 1919 — her father was a miner.

She helped organize the Communist party in America in 1920. Now she conducts a column "Life of the Party" in the party organ, the Daily Worker, published in New York, which follows the party line as a fox follows the aniseed bag or a rat follows the smell of cheese.

In a recent column, Miss Flynn described a luncheon in honor of the "First Daytime Women's School" of the Communist party's Kings Highway section. Says she (note how Marxism flavors even the simple arts of the housewife): "The luncheon which the women prepared themselves was so delicious it is evidence they are equally good Marxists and good cooks. How can I reduce under such temptation?"

Perhaps sensing that someone might reach for a grain or two of salt before perusing her observations further, she sounds a somewhat different note in another breath:

"The Communist party of New York affords us not only this wonderful opportunity (attending a big meeting) to meet together to memorialize the noble life of Lenin, but give us inspiration to be guided by his teachings."

THEY'RE ROARIN' FOR WARREN . . . California's Republican assembly, meeting in Del Monte, heartily approved a resolution to "go out and sell Gov. Earl Warren as the best man for president of the United States." The campaign to get the GOP nomination for Warren has been gaining momentum.

NEWS REVIEW

House Debates Tax Bill; Gandhi Is Assassinated

All signs pointed to an income tax cut of one kind or another this year as the house of representatives clanged the bell for the opening round of crucial, election-year debate on that much-belabored issue.

Joseph Martin (Rep., Mass.), speaker of the house, started things off with the assertion that an income tax slash is in the bag. He conceded, however, that it might not run as high as the 6.5 billion dollars provided in the Knutson bill, now up for debate.

But in the end, he said, the Republican congress would override a presidential veto "of the tax bill we send to the White House."

In order to beat the veto that Mr. Truman might slap on the tax bill, however, the Republicans would have to line up a few Democrats to vote on their side to make the necessary two-thirds majority. And to bring enough Democrats around, it was thought, the senate Republicans would tone down the bill.

Rep. Robert Doughton (Dem., N. C.), ranking Democrat on the tax-fixing ways and means committee, pointed out the obvious fact that Republicans would have to trim the size of the cut to get anywhere. Otherwise, he said, congress will uphold the veto "and we will have no tax reduction at all."

As far as Knutson's 6.5-billion-dollar measure is concerned, GOP congressmen were touting it on the grounds that it would spur business, increase production and relieve the price-pressure on taxpayers in addition to leaving the government enough revenue for an 11-billion-dollar payment on the public debt in the next two years.

Democrats, of course, take the diametrically opposed view, holding that a tax slash that big would force the government to borrow money, threaten national security and hinder the European recovery plan upon which so much of the current phase of U. S. foreign policy is founded.

DEATH: Gandhi:

Mohandas K. Gandhi, India's champion, peacemaker, patient saint, was dead at the age of 78—a victim of an assassin's bullets.

He died barely two weeks after Hindus, Sikhs and Moslems alike, overjoyed at the possibility of peace that Gandhi's latest fast had procured for their dominions, were shouting "Gandhiji ki jai" (long live Gandhi) in the streets of Delhi.

It was a violent ending for the mahatma who all his life had preached and practised a philosophy based on an abhorrence of violence. A Hindu from Poona approached him during a prayer meeting and fired three shots into his body from close range.

To India and to India's Hindus to whom Gandhi had devoted his life, his death was a bitter experience and a shock that left the already turbulent sub-continent in an even more complete state of turmoil.

After the partition of the country into the dominions of India and Pakistan Gandhi had been the man of strong spirit to whom all three opposing factions, Hindus, Moslems and Sikhs, had looked for guidance.

And in his last fast, of five-day duration, he had given it to them. He had provided the three clashing religious groups with a foundation for peace. His action had tended to narrow the schism between Moslems and Hindus, had lessened the talk of war.

Whether his death would undo the good that the last days of his life had accomplished remained, for the time being, an open question.

LITTLE MAN

And What Now?

To the senate banking and currency committee came a representative of America's beloved "little man" to talk of inflation and ask the question "What now?"

Economists may define an inflationary condition as an excess of demand over supply or a disproportionate amount of money and credit in relation to exchange, but to Cyrus J. Waud of Camden, N. J., inflation simply means that his $50-a-week salary can't take care of his wife and six children.

WAUD AND FAMILY
'We're not living . . .'

Waud, a cannery worker, told a story familiar to millions of his cohorts across the nation: The endless, insufferable rise in prices; the hand-to-mouth struggle to keep even with the implacable economic circumstances which gradually were beating him down.

With the dispassionate bitterness of a good U. S. citizen who knows that it is within his rights but not within his power to have economic freedom and comfort for his family and himself, Waud summed it all up in the 1948 "little man's" tragic cliche:

"We're not living, we're only existing."

Germ 'Flypaper'

One of the latest developments in this century of scientific whing dings is a bacterial flypaper to keep rooms freer of disease germs.

It is a chemical that can be put on floors, blankets or curtains to catch and hold tiny organisms, including those which cause colds, when they settle out of the air. Unlike flypaper, it doesn't kill, but it does keep germs from circulating around the room.

BUMPER BABY CROP

Boom in Births Means Changes

Biggest boom of all right now is that which is expanding the U. S. baby crop to historic proportions.

More than 26 million new babies have arrived on the scene in this nation since 1940, when the baby boom began. That is nearly 11 million more than had been expected on the basis of what has been considered the average yearly birth rate of the past, about two million.

And this bumper crop has increased the total national family to more than 144 million souls—considerably more than even any government bureau had counted on.

Last year more bundles from heaven arrived in the U. S. than ever before in its history, a whopping 3.37 million; and this year probably will measure up to approximately the same standard.

Big families mean big changes, as every parent knows. Although the future is seldom less than obscure, it is possible to predict in general terms what this expanded birth rate will mean to the U. S. during the next 10 or 15 years.

There will be more growing children to provide for. That means bigger markets than ever for industry, business and manufacturers. It will mean the building of more schools, the production of more food, the manufacture of more clothing, the building of more homes.

The infants' wear and toy industries, of course, have already rocketed to new levels of endeavor and production.

As the children start to school and outgrow their little quarters at home the construction industry will begin to feel the impact in the form of a stepped-up demand for more single-family houses, builders believe.

This, in turn, will give impetus to the home furnishing and home equipment business. Further, it will mean the building of more banks and stores and the extension of bus and street car lines. In short, it will stimulate and sustain a higher level of employment.

Another implication lies in the fact that the present babies will have reached the peak of their youthful strength between 1960 and 1970. Military and other authorities are quick to figure that if universal military training were to be adopted now America's potential military strength would be extremely impressive in the eyes of the world at that time.

Hawaii Awaits Final Approval In Long Fight for Statehood

Island Territory Sees Culmination Of 50-Year Bid

By WALTER SHEAD
WNU Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — With its 50-year-old bid for statehood safely past the halfway mark, the Territory of Hawaii will make a concerted effort to become the 49th state during the second session of the 80th congress. The house of representatives approved Hawaii's statehood plea before the first session adjourned. Senate approval will be sought during the present session.

The machinery for making Hawaii the 49th state of the Union was organized in House Resolution 49, which was introduced by Joseph Farrington, territorial delegate, exactly 49 years after the territory was annexed to the United States as a territorial possession. In addition, 10 other statehood bills were introduced during the first session of the 80th congress.

This is not the island's first campaign for statehood. The territory has been seeking recognition as a state ever since it was annexed to the United States. However, this is unquestionably the most ambitious campaign.

With "statehood now" as the rallying cry, Hawaii has carried on an active campaign in the islands as well as in Washington. To facilitate contacts with the national capital, a statehood committee, formed under chairmanship of Gov. Ingram M. Stainback, has operated Washington headquarters. In charge of this branch is George H. McLane, a tall, scholarly Californian who went to the territory six years ago for a temporary job and decided to remain.

All Interests Represented.

The statehood committee, financed by funds appropriated by the territorial legislature, represents people of all phases of insular life, large employers, labor leaders, professional men and women.

Like most transplanted mainlanders, McLane is an ardent advocate of everything Hawaiian. He arrived in Washington with four packing cases filled with documents and a crusader's zeal for the cause of statehood.

Long known as "the crossroads of the Pacific," Hawaii is composed of 20 islands, of which nine are inhabited. The group extends for 390 miles from northwest to southeast and comprises 6,454 square miles.

Mountainous and volcanic in origin, the islands are the site of numerous extinct craters. Kilauea, noted for its "pit of eternal fire," which is located on the Island of Hawaii, is the largest active volcano in the world.

METROPOLIS OF ISLANDS . . . Honolulu, the political and economic heart of the Hawaiian islands, is a thoroughly modern American metropolis in an exotic tropical setting. This is a section of Bishop street in the city's financial district. Some of the large sugar factors or agencies, transportation companies and insurance firms have their headquarters in these office buildings.

Discovered in 1778.

The Hawaiian islands were discovered by Captain Cook in 1778, and it was during his second visit in 1779 that he met his death there. King Kamahameha brought the islands under one rule in 1791, and Hawaii became a constitutional monarchy in 1840. A revolution drove Queen Lilluokalani from the throne in 1893. At that time an attempt to secure annexation to the United States failed and a republic was proclaimed on July 4, 1894. By voluntary agreement, Hawaii was annexed to the United States as a territorial possession in 1898 through adoption by congress of the organic act which provides a government for the territory.

Most important industries on the islands are sugar, pineapple, shipping and tourists. Agriculture is making some strides, particularly in production of hogs, poultry and beef cattle. Fishing also is an important industry.

Hawaii bears all the federal taxes borne by other states and pays more taxes than do 14 of the states, proponents of the statehood plea maintain.

Both Will Benefit.

Granting of statehood to Hawaii, McLane says, will result in numerous benefits to the United States. Statehood, he says, will confirm American hegemony in the Pacific; move our self-governing frontiers 2,200 miles westward; bind the strategic Pacific defense area more closely to the Union; send to congress men who have an immediate knowledge of the Pacific and her people; relieve the federal government of certain financial responsibilities, and discharge a moral obligation owed the islanders.

Hawaii, in turn, will get two senators and two representatives in congress in place of her lone non-voting delegate; elect her own governor instead of having an appointed governor; vote in a presidential election, a right now denied; automatically share in all federal grants for education, health, highways and other public improvements; administer her own affairs without the constant threat of a presidential veto or overriding by congress of local legislation.

The statehood bill, already approved by the house and now awaiting senate action, provides for holding a constitutional convention in the territory, at which a state constitution would be adopted and a government formed.

Hawaiians and other proponents of the statehood plea are pushing for final approval of the bill to culminate the long fight, during which the territorial legislature has asked for statehood 14 times.

'STATEHOOD NOW' . . . Miss Helen Monkusky, member of the Hawaii statehood committee staff in Washington, is shown with some of the literature being distributed in behalf of the territory's "Statehood Now" campaign.

TWIST TIME . . . Hawaii's pineapple industry, the territory's second largest business, is highly mechanized. This is a new type of mechanical harvester.

No Longer Will Cows Graze Heart of Wisconsin City

LANCASTER, WIS.—For the first time in 58 years, no cow is grazing in the heart of this city of some 5,000 population.

The Winskill sisters, Crissie and Mary, have sold the last of a long line of cows that have roamed about the family pasture, only four blocks from the Grant county courthouse, since 1890. Last of the herd was Betty, a Guernsey cow that has been the pet and milk provider for the sisters for the last seven years.

The sale, they admit, was made with reluctance and only because they are growing too old to care for her. Insisting that the cow was "one of the family," the sisters said they couldn't bear to put her in any other farm herd, so they sold her to a packing plant.

Lately they were put in another herd, but Betty would break through a fence and start trotting home, the sisters believed. If not that, then she'd merely pine away and refuse to give milk. Thus, they decided, it was better that she die.

Betty had many friends. They always inquired about her, neighbors brought her vegetables and pupils from the high school adjoining the pasture tossed her the scraps from their lunch boxes.

Although they steadfastly turned down offers to sell their pasture, which is considered one of the best real estate sites in the city, the sisters last year gave away two city blocks for the site of a new grade school to be named for their dead sister, Louisa. The school board had been prepared to buy the property but the sisters refused payment.

Born in England, the sisters have lived most of their lives in the home their father, Thomas, built in 1889. It contains no electric lights, no plumbing and no furnace.

Three Generations Of Teachers Work In Louisiana School

SHREVEPORT, LA.—Representing an accumulated teaching time of 93 years, three "generations" of teachers have been instructing side by side for the past 13 years in the Homer schools in Claiborne parish.

Principals in the unusual teaching setup are Miss Belle Davidson, seventh grade teacher, with more than 48 years' experience; her pupil, Miss Mary Tooke, Spanish teacher, with 32 years, and Miss Tooke's former pupil, Miss Eula Linton, sixth grade teacher, with 13 years.

Before her entry into the Homer school, of which she is a graduate, Miss Belle, as she is familiarly known, taught a year in the Athens school, also in Claiborne parish. Throughout her career she has taught the seventh grade, with exception of one year in which she also taught part of the sixth.

During her tenure in Homer, the school has been housed in two buildings, both at the same location. She commenced teaching at the age of 16 and now holds an A. B. degree from Louisiana Polytechnic institute at Ruston and a master's degree from University of Arkansas.

J. T. Gibson, president of the Claiborne parish school board, is a former pupil of Miss Davidson, as are Miss Marion Dorman, music teacher, and Miss Maggie McCasland, fifth grade teacher.

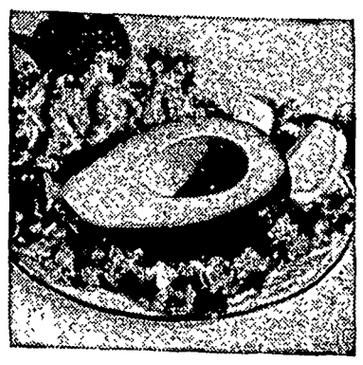
These Budget-Wise Recipes Will Make Meat Go Farther



A calavo served half shell provides a quick and satisfying way of rounding out menus on meat-saving days. The calavo also may be filled with creamed vegetable or fish or a salad and served as the main dish for a meal.

Well, those food costs still are climbing, according to latest reports, and most homemakers are having to tackle the menu problem with undiminished vigor. There's first aid for all of you in these recipes today, for they'll keep the budget trim as well as furnishing savory meals.

There's no limit to how you may extend meats — add a vegetable or two, fortify with rice, noodles or macaroni, or let the meat swim in cream sauce or delicious gravy. Any of these is guaranteed to add satisfied smiles to your diners.

Cabbage Roll-Ups.
(Serves 6)

- 1 head of cabbage
- 1 pound ground lamb or beef
- 2 onions, chopped
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- Salt and pepper
- 2 cups canned tomatoes
- ½ cup water

Cook cabbage until tender; drain and then carefully separate leaves from the stem end. Combine meat, onions, rice, salt and pepper. On each cabbage leaf place several tablespoons of the mixture, then secure with toothpicks.

Place the roll-ups in a greased casserole and add the tomatoes which have been mixed with water. Cook in a moderate (350 degrees) oven for one hour or until rice is tender.

Add cream sauce and pimiento to leftover veal roast as demonstrated in the following recipe, and you will have an excellent meat dish:

Veal a la King.
(Serves 8)

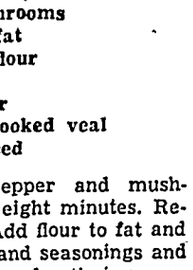
- ½ green pepper, shredded
- ¼ pound mushrooms
- 3 tablespoons fat
- 6 tablespoons flour
- 4 cups milk
- Salt and pepper
- 3 cups diced cooked veal
- 1 pimiento, diced

Cook green pepper and mushrooms in fat for eight minutes. Remove from fat. Add flour to fat and blend. Add milk and seasonings and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add green pepper, mushrooms and remaining ingredients and heat. Serve on toast, in bread croustades or patty shells.

English Hot Pot.
(Serves 4 to 6)

- 6 potatoes, pared and sliced
- 1½ pounds lamb shoulder or breast
- 2 lamb kidneys
- 1 large onion, sliced
- Salt and pepper
- 1 cup water
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted

Place half of the potatoes in a greased casserole, then add meat which has been cut into cubes. Cover with sliced onion and season with salt and pepper. Add water. Place remaining potatoes on top, covering with meat completely. Brush with melted butter. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake for two hours.



Want to have company on a budget? You couldn't serve a prettier dish than a cranberry topped meat loaf!

Cranberry Meat Loaf.
(Serves 12)

- ¼ cup brown sugar
- ½ cup cranberry sauce
- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ pound smoked ham, ground
- ½ pound ground fresh pork
- ¾ cup milk
- ¾ cup cracker crumbs
- 2 eggs
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons diced onion
- 3 bay leaves

Spread sugar over the bottom of a greased loaf pan. Mash cranberry sauce and spread over sugar. Combine remaining ingredients except bay leaves. Shape into loaf and place in pan. Put bay leaves on top of loaf. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) about one hour. Remove bay leaves before serving Pork, prepared Spanish style, is a favorite because of its savory seasonings as well as its color appeal. Vegetables go into the same dish with the meat.

Spanish Pork.
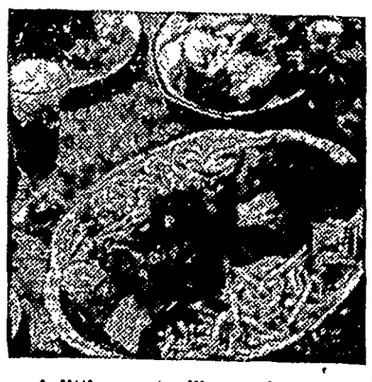
(Serves 6)

- 2 pounds pork shoulder, boned and diced
- Flour
- Lard
- 4 medium sized potatoes
- 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- 2 cups tomatoes
- 2 cups canned peas
- 1 green pepper
- Salt and pepper

Have pork shoulder cut into 1-inch cubes. Dredge in flour and brown in hot lard. Place alternate layers of meat and vegetable in casserole dish. Pour tomatoes over all. Season and cook in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until meat and vegetables are tender, about 1½ to 2 hours.



A little meat will go a long way if you serve attractive cabbage roll-ups in a bed of buttered noodles. Round out the meal with buttered green beans and pickled beets and serve a simple baked fruit for dessert.

You might try these two dishes with specialty meats if you want to serve nutrition-rich meals as well as appetizing ones:

Savory Liver.
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 1 carrot, shredded
- 1 onion, minced
- 1 turnip, diced
- 1 bay leaf
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 2½ pounds liver (1 piece)
- 2 cups water or stock
- Salt and pepper

Brown vegetables with bay leaf in fat. Add flour and blend, then add liver and water. Simmer for 1¼ to 1½ hours.

Broiled Lamb Kidneys.
(Serves 6)

- 6 lamb kidneys
- 1½ cups french dressing
- 12 slices bacon

Clean kidneys and cut into halves. Marinate in french dressing for 12 hours. Drain kidneys and wrap in bacon. Place four inches below moderate heat and broil for 12 to 15 minutes, or until bacon is crisp and kidneys are tender. Serve on toast triangles.

LYNN SAYS:

Food Favorites Improve Your Menus

If you'd like something novel in a frozen persimmon sliced and served with calavo set on a bed of crisp greens. Rinse the persimmon and place in the freezing compartment of the refrigerator until firm.

Fit square of biscuit dough into muffin pans to form cups. Bake until golden brown, then serve as cases for creamed meat, vegetables or fish.

A nice filling for yeast dough is made of honey mixed with butter and flavored with ½ teaspoon of cinnamon or nutmeg.

If you like a meaty flavored biscuit for toppings, use ½ teaspoon curry powder or poultry seasoning mixed in with the dry ingredients.

Cheese biscuits are novel when you want to serve an interesting hot bread. Simply add ½ cup of grated American cheese to biscuit recipe or to ready-mix. Add this before mixing in the milk.

HH HINTS

When making cakes and they call for one cup of milk use three fourths cup and mix your batter accordingly, and last of all, add one fourth cup of cold water (in place of the one fourth cup of milk called for) and you will have a never-fail cake.

If you have guests and want to serve a cake that is just out of the oven, cut it wih a thread in place of a knife, and it won't press together.

You farm women who want to clean house now before you get your little chickens, and want to paint but dislike the smell of it with the windows all shut—just add one ounce of vanilla to one half gallon of paint, and it will not effect the color of even white paint, and it will not sting or burn your eyes, and not even smell—you can go ahead and paint a cafe and serve mels right long. Just has a nice clean smell in the room. Try it out, if you don't believe it.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By Louie D. Newton, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 16:9, 10; Romans 10:8-15; Ephesians 3:8-12.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 10:8-15.

World Mission of Church

Lesson for February 29, 1948

JOHN WESLEY said, "The world is my parish." Many another Christian has entertained this great concept, and that is precisely what Jesus wants us to understand concerning the sweep and scope of his Kingdom.

Dr. Newton

Sunday's lesson brings us to consider three great passages — Acts 16:9, 10; Romans 10:8-15; Ephesians 3:8-12. Read these carefully, and you will feel the winds of God lifting up the flaps of the tent of your small habitation until you will catch glimpses of the far horizon.

CHURCH AROUND THE WORLD

"GO YE into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation," said Jesus, Mark 16:15. There is no backyard definition of the mission of the church in these great words of Jesus. Just as Paul was summoned to cross over into Europe with the Gospel, so are we commanded to make Christ known to all lands. He loves everybody.

"Jesus loves the little children,
All the children of the world;
Yellow, brown, or black, or white,
They are precious in his sight,
Jesus loves the little children of the world."

REACHING THE WORLD

JUST as Paul went from one land to another, so may every Christian boy and girl do. Each church can reach out hands of blessing to all the world.

How? Through our gifts. Our gifts for missions, joined with the gifts of all the other members of our local church, joined with the gifts of many other churches, go out in multiplied blessing through the missionaries to make Christ known around the world.

How? Through our prayers. As we pray for the redemption of the world, we fortify the missionaries — teachers, doctors, preachers — in all the parts of the world.

How? Through our sympathetic understanding of the conditions under which people live in other lands. Just now we are giving clothes and food to help the stricken peoples of the war-ravaged lands, These gifts of material things bear their message of our Christian concern for all who suffer. Thus we are extending the reach of our individual lives and the reach of our churches to the ends of the earth.

PUBLISHING SALVATION

"HOW beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth glad tidings, that publisheth peace . . . that publisheth salvation," Isaiah 52:7.

The world mission of the church is here pictured in the exquisite language of the ancient prophet, with which words we may link the declaration of the great apostle, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved," Romans 8:13.

Publishing salvation is the chief task of the church of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the objects of this universal message are the souls of all men. There is universal need, and here is the adequate and available answer.

See how this conception of the world mission of the church brings into focus the one hope for civilization. The only voice that carries across the barriers of this troubled world is the voice of salvation through Jesus Christ. Let that word be sounded in any spot on this earth, and some waiting heart will be lifted up.

THE UNSEARCHABLE RICHES

AND what are we to say about the message we have to publish? Paul puts it well in Ephesians 3:8-12, when he declares:

"Unto me, who am less than the least of all the saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ. . . ."

In another place we read about the "unspeakable gift of God," II Corinthians 9:15. The message, then, is one of unsearchable riches, and unspeakable gift.

In this message is healing for the peoples of the earth. If the true mission of the church is understood and voiced in all of the ways by which the Gospel may today be given to the world, we shall see the fulfillment of the dreams of the prophets, and the angels about the throne of God will shout for joy.

As Paul changed his course in the long ago, heeding the Macedonian call, so may we today find ourselves turning about in our response to the Holy Spirit's leading; but let us not be afraid so long as we are sincerely seeking to publish glad tidings to all men.

HOW TO OUTWIT WEEK-END BURGLA

...according to Police Chief Abner Glisson, West Chester, Pa.

● When you go visiting for a week end ... there ar steps to take before leaving. Often your departur will be after dark and you will need a flashlight t "check and double check." Better be sure your flash light is powered with "Eveready" batteries ... powe ful, dependable, they *outlast all other brands!

NOTIFY POLICE OF ABSENCE. Many co munities require it; but, in any case, poli want this cooperation in order to give yo best protection.

DON'T LEAVE "TIP-OFFS." Cancel newspaper and milk deliveries. Ju two days' accumulation is a hot "tip-off" prowlers.

LOCK ALL WINDOWS AND DOORS. Take your "Eveready" flashlight to inspect basement windows (a favorite entrance for prowlers), garage doors, the yard. If you're careful before you leave, you can be carefree while you're away.

"EVEREADY" BATTERIES OUTL ALL OTHER BRANDS!*

I KNEW the Farraday family before it happened, I knew them first when I was nine and Ellen Farraday was eight and in my class at school.

There were two other Farraday children: Skippy, the baby, who was five, and Dora, seventeen, just entering business school. Dora was engaged to marry Danny Wright, who ran the service-station in town. Mr. Farraday was branch manager of our local bank. "Such a nice, quiet man," people said. "If only that wife of his were not such a fool."

I didn't think Mrs. Farraday was a fool. I liked her. The sprawling old Farraday house, with its sagging porch, was always in need of repair, the shabby living-room would be cluttered and dishes unwashed, but Mrs. Farraday was never too busy to plan games for rainy afternoons or picnics in summer in their rickety old car. She was little and quick and dark, with rather kittenish ways; always thinking up something new and "exciting"—like the dress she designed for Dora that won the prize in the Easter parade.

There was nothing I loved more than going over to the Farraday house whenever I had the chance. Saturday mornings they always had pancakes; Sundays they had sausages and Boston baked beans and applesauce in a blue glass dish. And they had laughter. A great deal of laughter—except when Aunt Abbey came to call.

Aunt Abbey was Mr. Farraday's aunt, a very rich, very unpleasant old lady who lived in an imposing granite house at the end of town. It was no secret that she disapproved bitterly of the entire Farraday family. Why she visited them nobody knew, unless it was because, of all her relatives, they refused to be impressed by her money or upset by her caustic tongue. They merely accepted her, all but Mrs. Farraday, who seemed to like having Aunt Abbey around. Curiously enough, it was of Mrs. Farraday herself that Aunt Abbey most bitterly disapproved.

"My nephew's wife isn't fooling me," she'd say. "Always pretending to be so gay. What's she got to be happy about, I'd like to know? If my nephew had married a sensible woman, he'd have amounted to something by now."

"I declare," my mother said, "it gives me the creeps, the way that old lady looks at Mrs. Farraday. I believe she really hates her."

"She hates them all," my father said, "because they've got what she never had. The Farradays have contentment. All Aunt Abbey has is money, and when she's gone they'll have that, too."

Only they didn't. Because when Aunt Abbey died the year Ellen Farraday was nine, she left them no money at all. Her entire estate went to charity, with one exception. She left Mrs. Farraday a rug. It was an Oriental rug, exceptionally large and lovely; golden in color, satiny to the touch, starred with dusty pink flowers.

"It's a shame," people said, "when those children need money so. But of course they can sell the rug. It's valuable and Orientals are in vogue." Then a dealer offered Mrs. Farraday $25,000 for her rug.

The town rejoiced for the Farradays. This meant college for the children and money to fix up the old house. But, to the amazement of everyone, Mrs. Farraday stubbornly refused to sell. She had always admired that rug, she said. She'd been as surprised as anyone when Aunt Abbey had left it to her. She but it seemed hardly fair to blame Dora entirely for what happened at the Elks' picnic that year. Everyone Elks' picnic that year. Everyone said, though, that it was Dora's fault. She'd taken Skippy to the picnic, hadn't she? She should not have gone off with that beau of hers, leaving the child alone by the lake. ever moved out of it. If Aunt Abbey knew what she was doing when she made that will, then she must be laughing now in her grave."

My mother spoke suddenly. "That's it!" she exclaimed. "She did know what she was doing. And I'm surprised that I never thought of it before."

"What do you mean?" My father stared at her. Her voice had sounded strange.

"She knew exactly what she was doing!" my mother said. "And wherever she is — she probably is laughing! Aunt Abbey knew that Mrs. Farraday would never be able to resist living up to that rug!"

Spring Freshet

Grace Noll Crowell

I LIKE the look of snow when it is melting
And sending its clear rivulets toward the sea;
I like the sweep of dry grasses bending
Beneath those bright feet, suddenly set free.

I have seen small green leaves under water
That snow had hidden through the winter hours,
Fresher and greener and sweeter than the leafing
That springs to life after the April showers:

A little clover leaf washed clean by waiting,
Eager for life again at the hint of spring!
I reach my fingers into the icy water
To touch that tender, tremulous, wistful thing,

Knowing a kinship with it, deep and abiding,
I, too, have waited until the winter passed,
And I lift my head after a strange chastisement
To the bright air again, the sun at last!

Cities Grant Pay Increases To Help Meet Rising Costs

Scores of cities are granting pay raises to municipal employees to help them meet increased living costs. In Cleveland the mayor agreed to grant pay raises to municipal employees which will cost the city $2,100,000 this year. Fire and police personnel received a $240 a year increase, plus six new holidays to be added to annual furloughs.

White collar employees of Cleveland will get a $180 annual raise if they make less than $3,000 a year. Their increase will be 6.5 per cent if they make more than $3,000 annually.

Pittsburgh councilmen earmarked $1,200,000 for municipal pay raises. Biggest pay boosts went to employees receiving $2,000 a year or less.

Chicago's record city budget for 1948 includes pay increases of 8.5 per cent for municipal employees earning less than $5,000 a year, plus raises averaging $300 a year for higher paid employees.

In Omaha, all city employees have been given a flat $15 per month wage boost. The increase will affect approximately 1,260 workers.

New York City boosted the salaries of 42 top city officials. The action added $86,000 to this year's payroll.

Members of the Olony Ruse family near Sidney heard a very strange noise about the house recently; the noise appeard to be a cross between the soft whistle of a bird or the chirp of a cricket. From where I sit ... by Joe Mars
Where Does Your Money Go?
Read the other day where country folks and farmers spend more money, proportionately, on their homes than city dwellers do.
Doesn't seem hard to believe when you think it over. Take the folks in our town, for instance: They're home-loving people—who'd rather spend an evening by the fire with a mellow glass of beer than go out in search of entertainment or diversion.
So it's only natural they put more into what means most to them and to their children: their homes. They may not have too much to spe but it goes for those perma abiding comforts that make h a nicer place to be.
And from where I sit, that get calls for some of the nicetie home life too—like cider and corn for the kids from time to t and a friendly glass of beer Mom and Dad ... things that long with what we mean whe say "Home."

Twice-Told White House Tale Retold

John Adams Hung Clothes On Limb, Swam in Potomac

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—At a recent press and radio conference, one of the reporters ribbed the President about the balcony he was building on the White House, which the Washington fine arts commission objects to as destroying the architectural beauty of the building.

Someone suggested he might conduct a "back porch" political campaign from it. Mr. Truman came right back with the remark that it was a front porch. That, in a sense, is correct, for the southern facade of the White House originally was intended as the front of the building.

BAUKHAGE

Of late, the President has been given to historical anecdotes—he's a great student of American history — and this time he told us a story which I have heard before from presidential lips anent the White House "front yard" of other days. In the time of President Adams, the story goes, a canal skirted the lowered edge of the grounds, and that gentleman was fond of slipping down to its banks for a swim au naturel in the early morning hours.

There was, in those days, said Mr. Truman, a certain female journalist who had been unable to get an interview with the President. So she slipped down to the canal bank at dawn, waited until he was immersed, then sat on his clothes and stayed there until he answered her questions, decently draped in the waters.

I repeated the story on the air as Mr. Truman told it, and in the next day's mail received a letter from Mr. Daniel J. Kelly Jr., of South Bend, Ind., who is a collector of early historical newspapers.

Wrote Mr. Kelly:

"I enjoyed your reference in a recent broadcast to the newspaper woman who sat on President Adams' clothes until he agreed to give her an interview.

"The President Adams was John Quincy Adams, and the woman newspaper reporter was Anne Royall. However, the story does not conform to the facts, and you might mention this to President Truman the next time the story is brought up.

"John Quincy Adams was an ardent and accomplished swimmer and he enjoyed a daily plunge into the Potomac even while President. He was also an ardent diarist, and his diary contains many a mention of his dips in the river.

"Anne Royall was Adams' Washington contemporary — a vicious writer and a malevolent journalist. In 1829 she was convicted of being a 'common scold.' Her first contact with Adams was in 1824 when she called at the White House to demand a pension as a Revolutionary war widow. Adams mentioned her in a very uncomplimentary manner in his diary.

"According to Adams' diary . . . 'She continues to make herself noxious to many persons; tolerated by some and feared by others, by her deportment and her books; treating all with a familiarity which often passes for impudence, insulting those who treat her with incivility, and then lampooning them in her books. Stripped of all her sex's delicacy, but unable to forfeit its privilege of gentle treatment to others, she goes about like a viragoerrant in enchanted armour, and redeems herself from the cravings of indulgence by the notoriety of her eccentricities and the forced currency they give her publications . . .'

"Although Adams chronicled all unusual incidents while swimming, and had referred to Mrs. Royall in his diary, he makes no mention of the supposed meeting of this woman while swimming.

"While Adams lived in the White House, Mrs. Royall was a resident of Washington, but travelled about most of the time. She was known as an author at that time, but not as a newspaper woman. Her journalistic career began two years after Adams retired as President. In 1831 she established a newspaper aptly named 'Paul Pry,' and later she founded another small newspaper, the 'Huntress.' It does not seem possible that Anne Royall could have interviewed President Adams, at least in her capacity as a journalist.

"Adams was mentioned in 'Paul Pry' just once, on July 28, 1832. There are references to him in the August 1, 1840; August 20, 1842; December 14, 1844; February 6, 1847, and the March 4, 1848, issues of the 'Huntress.' Mrs. Royall also mentioned Adams in her 'Sketches,' p. 166, and in her 'Black Book,' p. 126. But nowhere did the woman who was supposed to have been involved in the Potomac shore incident ever refer to any interview with John Quincy Adams.

"The supposed incident still makes a good story, and especially, I suppose, when newspaper men are interviewing the President, and when news is somewhat dull. However, I cannot believe that any of the known facts can justify the truth of this old story."

But, I insist, it's a good story and I, for one, will not disillusion any President as to its authenticity.

The Tithe That Binds

Coming away from a debate on taxes I couldn't help feeling that the discussion, scholarly as it had appeared at points, and ringing with altruism at others, had offered a political potion, only slightly flavored with any essence of economics. How willing is congress to depart from the past, if such a departure affects political futures?

Pondering this, I came upon a dispatch in the London Daily Herald from Romney Marsh, Kent. It recounted how, in the lamp-lit sitting room of a six-century-old farm, a 72-year-old farmer, Archibald Edwin Waddell, complained to a reporter that he was about to be thrown into bankruptcy because he refused to pay 75 pounds and 3 shillings — some $300 — in "tithes."

"I shall probably die muttering," Waddell said, "against this wicked, anti-social custom."

For previous refusals to pay tithes, there had been four seizures from his farm: bullocks, sheep, pigs, farm implements, furniture, his clothing and his cart-horse.

"My father," the old man concluded, "who farmed for 70 years in Kent, paid 1,400 pounds in tithes, and two of my brothers were forced to emigrate. I am fighting against a rope that has tightened around my neck, and around the necks of so many others who love the soil."

Few people realize that tithing, payment of one-tenth of the product of the land, a custom which comes down from feudal days when it was collected by the parish priests, and later the Church of England, is so modern, and that its effect will be felt until the year 1996.

Originally the tithe was paid in produce, but in 1836 it became a fixed rent still paid to the church. In 1925, the law was changed to make the tithe payable into what was called "Queen Anne's Bounty," a fund used for general church purposes. In 1936 tithing itself was abolished but the law provided that over a period of 60 years a sum should be paid yearly until the amount considered the tithe redemption fund to be the capital of the tithe on a given piece of property, had been reached.

That is what Farmer Waddell objects to. But he'll pay or get out, and he will never live to see the day when he doesn't have to support the church against his will.

FRIEND IN NEED . . . Kathleen Brandl, 11, of Washington, D. C., won herself a staunch and feathered friend in this wild pigeon after "unfreezing" it when she found the bird frozen in a snowbank near her home. Now her constant companion, it sits on her shoulder, takes food from her mouth.

NEWS REVIEW

South Threatens Split; Self Rationing Proposed

President Truman, who seems to run to 10-point programs, tossed another one to congress—concerning the preservation and protection of civil rights—and then stood aside to await the explosion.

It came quickly. Southern Democrats, hopping mad over at least four of the 10 controversial points, began to talk seriously of calling a Dixie convention to split away from Mr. Truman on the civil rights issue.

Focus of the current disunity was a bill, up for approval by the senate labor committee, to create a national commission against job discrimination on grounds of race, creed or color.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.) predicted that if the bill were approved in its present form the party would erupt into open warfare. Both foes and backers of the measure agreed that it would be a close thing.

The four proposals that most inflamed the southerners were the ones calling for (1) a federal anti-lynching law, (2) a permanent fair employment practice commission, (3) an end to Jim Crow rules in transportation and (4) outlawing of state poll taxes.

Remainder of the points advocated by the President were: A permanent commission on civil rights, a joint congressional committee on civil rights, a civil rights division in the justice department; tightening of civil rights statutes; home rule for the District of Columbia; statehood for Alaska and Hawaii; equalization of naturalization opportunities, and settlement of evacuation claims of Japanese-Americans.

Because 1948 is an election year, and a presidential election year at that, the program, which otherwise might be ignored, was certain to get hot partisan debate.

In answer to Mr. Truman's firm statement that "something must be done" about the civil rights issue, southern Democrats replied that they were thinking of calling an all-southern convention to pick its own presidential candidate.

Some thought that too drastic a step, but at Jackson, Miss., Walter Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi house of representatives, said he flatly favored such a course in order to withhold at least part of the South's electoral votes from Mr. Truman.

Charles F. Brannan, assistant secretary of agriculture, heads the new food saving setup. Originally started by the citizens' food committee last fall, it has been carried on until now under the direct leadership of the cabinet food committee.

Major emphasis, it was understood, would be placed on meat as the pivotal item in the cost of living merry-go-round; however, other foods also would be covered in the voluntary program. Based on specific recommendations of the food industry and public representatives, it is theoretically designed to meet the twin problem of scarce food supplies and high prices.

Biggest talking point the administration had in its attempts to solicit public support was the department of agriculture's somber prediction that the nation is heading for a serious meat shortage in the spring. And by way of emphasis Brannan added that meat rationing "by price" already is in effect because many people cannot afford to buy.

FOR SALE:
Some Eggs

U. S. government has hung out a "for sale" sign on 46.8 million dozen eggs that it bought last spring to support domestic prices.

There is one stipulation, however. Only foreign users will be allowed to buy them.

For the comfort of U. S. housewives the agriculture department was swift to point out that these eggs are not the kind that can be used readily for home consumption. They were shelled, dumped into huge containers and frozen before the government bought them in the first place.

Agriculture department decided to sell the eggs to foreign buyers when it was unable to sell them to bakers and confectioners in this country because egg production has been going up and egg prices down.

SELF RATIONING:
Second Best

Manifestly stymied in its efforts to get congress to pass rationing and price control legislation, the administration tried a new approach in the form of an appeal for nationwide self-rationing.

Greater public support of an intensified drive for voluntary food conservation would have to be developed if living costs are to be curbed, the administration decided.

As an initial step representatives of 18 consumer, producer and distributor groups met with Clinton Anderson, secretary of agriculture, to map details of the nationwide program.

JOURNEY TO THE MOON

Get Your Rockets Tuned Up

Science has advanced to the point where, when you talk about taking a trip to the moon, people no longer look sorrowfully upon you as one who has been affected by the fabled light from that lunar orb.

An actual journey to the moon may become a reality sooner than one would have expected five years ago. Right now, in several parts of the world, there are small groups of earnest experts who are quite serious about the prospects of travel between the planets.

One of those organizations is the British Interplanetary society, a group of about 450 members nearly one-third of whom are rocket and supersonic research scientists. Another third is made up of mechanical and electrical engineers, radio and radar technicians.

Many researchers working on military rocket-powered weapons believe that their work on rockets can be just as important for a peaceful future as it might be for war. From the aspect of motive power they know that by the time they can send a rocket halfway around the world they are likely to be within easy reach of the next phase—interplanetary travel.

That time may not be very far distant. Present velocity of a V-2 type rocket is about two miles a second. The velocity required to send one to the most distant spot on this globe is about five miles a second; and the estimated velocity needed to get a rocket out of the earth's gravitational pull is seven miles a second.

But actual travel in space is still a secondary consideration. After man has succeeded in shaking off earth's gravity pull with his rockets, the first thing he will do is to shoot a load of scientific instruments into space.

The visionary scientist sees himself sending instruments to the moon or to Mars. Or arranging it so that part of his rocket would become a satellite to one of the planets. Thus, through a development of television, he might see such things as the secrets of the dark side of the moon.

A wealth of research — literally out of this world—would be opened up long before an attempt could be made to begin human interplanetary travel.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

There's No Limit to Work Day For Mayor of Many Interests

WNU Features.

WOOD RIVER, ILL.—The mayor of Wood River (population 8,197) is a man of two titles, five jobs, unbounded enthusiasm and a complete disregard for the limits of a 24-hour day.

As mayor of the bustling Midwestern town, 35-year-old Lavier D. Humphrey puts on his "executive hat" and, like mayors the country over, deliberates highway improvements, tax rates, police affairs and garbage disposal.

Then he switches to dungarees and an oil worker's safety helmet for his eight hour a day job as operator in Shell Oil company's refinery in neighboring Roxana. Starting with the company as a laborer in 1933, Humphrey has worked up to his present job as an operator in the lubricating oil plant.

Donning a worn but serviceable baseball cap—symbolic of his intense interest in youth of the town — Humphrey turns to his third major interest, that of providing suitable recreation facilities for Wood River youngsters. He has established supervised playgrounds for youngsters of all ages and currently is sponsoring the conversion of a 15-acre corn field into a ball park and recreation center.

The mayor's fourth activity—the one of which he secretly is most proud—is his famed Junior G-Man club, first of its kind in the country. Humphrey and Police Chief Frank Starkey formed the club after youngsters caused $500 damage to municipal property during Halloween night festivities in 1944. Club members cooperate actively with police; they report parking violations, speeders, red light crashers; they unmasked a peeping tom always one look ahead of police, and they aided in detecting a gang of vandals who were breaking into the local high school. Since the club was organized, Halloween damage has dropped to less than $25.

Humphrey admits, however, that his fifth job is the hardest: The coordination of all his activities within the limits of a 24-hour day. Under a Shell policy encouraging employees to participate in civic activities, Humphrey often finds himself wearing the mantle of each of his jobs at once.

Between sandwich bites during lunch hour in the refinery, he may hear a citizen's complaint that his neighbor's children get up too early, study a report on speeders from a trusted G-Man lieutenant, review the latest set of ball park plans and even go over his own refinery reports.

Enthusiasm is this young Midwesterner's main trait — a contagious enthusiasm of rolled up sleeves, hard work and the deep satisfaction that comes from accomplishment.

His Honor

Like mayors the country over, Lavier D. Humphrey finds many responsibilities attached to the job of being chief executive of the bustling little city of Wood River, Ill. The routine of handling civic affairs, however, is relieved when he is called upon frequently to serve as peacemaker in settling neighborly squabbles.

Works, Too

Losing his official dignity, Humphrey is known as "Humpy" at the Shell refinery, where he works in a section of the lubricating oil plant. Most of his working day is spent in front of a complicated control board bristling with dials, knobs and recording instruments which keep tab on the plant's operations.

At Play

One of his honor's favorite relaxations is to listen to his wife play the piano—not the fast new swing tunes, but the old ones, Viennese waltzes, Victor Herbert, Sigmund Romberg. Son Don, 13, and a daughter, Laniece, 11, also join the family group for frequent evenings of music.

Human, After All

Back in high school, Humphrey set a record for the mile which lasted until 1947. He has been a fast-moving man of action ever since. Rugged as he is, however, he occasionally tires from the strain at the refinery and city hall. When the pace does catch up with him, it's usually in this living room chair.

Country Doctor Prescribes for Self—It's School

HARRISBURG, PA.—The country doctor in Pennsylvania has returned to school to learn the latest progress in the medical field. This new venture in medical education, never attempted previously anywhere in the world, has been hailed as a "pattern for other states."

Sponsored by Pennsylvania Medical society, the project has been accorded an enthusiastic reception by some 840 physicians of small towns and rural areas.

"Students" attend one eight-hour class a week in the nearest of six centrally located instruction centers. Teaching centers at present are in Allentown, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Oil City, Wilkes-Barre and Williamsport. The course extends for 10 weeks.

Instructors are medical experts from leading training institutions of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. They lecture morning, afternoon and evening on the latest know-how in medicine. Practical phases of diagnosis and treatment are covered, instructors explaining the best techniques known to the medical profession.

Of the 840 doctors who took the opening course 580 were general practitioners, most of them from small communities and rural areas. Sixty-two were specialists in internal medicine, 61 were surgeons, 32 were obstetricians and gynecologists and 25 were neuro-psychiatrists.

"This program has proved that the general practitioner, especially the typical country doctor, seeks to keep himself abreast of the latest progress in medicine," Dr. Charles W. Smith, chairman of the medical society's graduate education committee, said in commenting on success of the venture.

No Problem for Him

BURLINGTON, VT. — Stricken with laryngitis, Prof. Robert S. Long of University of Vermont thought of canceling his classes. Then he had a better idea. He whispered his lecture into a recording machine which he carried to the classroom and turned on full blast.

Farmers Strengthen Neighborly Tradition

EL PASO, ILL.—Strengthening a tradition of neighborliness between El Paso villagers and Woodford county farmers originally launched 33 years ago, 50 farmers aided in cleaning streets and yards of debris left in the village by a storm.

With tractors, axes and saws, the farmers cleaned up parts of fallen trees, brush and twigs, hauling the debris to a dump for burning. Then the farmers were treated to dinner in two El Paso cafes.

The neighborly tradition began in 1914, when 160 farmers hauled 700 loads of dirt into town to fill in the village parks, then being developed as a recreation center for children of the community and outlying rural areas. In 1918 the villagers reciprocated by organizing shock troop grain harvesters during a farm labor shortage.

Farmers With Wings Require Landing Strips for Safety

Improved Fields Needed as Ranks Of Pilots Increase

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Washington Correspondent.

With the nation's farmers literally taking to the air, not only for the thrill of flying their own airplanes, but also for commercial purposes, Civil Aeronautics administration is becoming concerned about the safety of these flying farmers, particularly in the matter of take-off and landing.

Available statistics indicate there are possibly 10,000 farmers who own and fly their own planes — planes all the way from small one-man light ships to heavier classifications such as the Douglas DC-3.

So, according to CAA, what the flying farmer and the potential farmer with wings needs is a landing field on his own farm. This is not a particularly difficult obstacle in the wide-open spaces and the grass pasturelands of the West, but in the Midwest and in the East and South proper air strips or landing fields pose some difficulties, particularly in the matter of location, surface of the field and hazards surrounding the field, such as wires, trees and homes of neighbors.

Cooperative Principle.

First, as a matter of convenience and economy, CAA suggests that two or more farmers with adjoining farms extend the principle of the cooperative to the construction of landing strips — that is, wherever it is possible considering the lay of the land, two, three or four farmers with adjoining land select a site which would trespass upon the lands of all. This would mean that each farmer would give up less land and that the expense of construction and maintenance would be less upon the individual.

The flying farmer does not need an airport in the usual sense of the word. All he needs is a landing strip of sufficient length with a surface sufficiently smooth and solid to bear the weight of light planes.

So, in most cases, his greatest problem is one of drainage since sod land or pasture land with short grass crops such as alfalfa or other low growing grasses will provide sufficient solidity. Maintenance of this kind of a surface becomes a problem only if traffic is heavy and if many heavy planes consistently use the field.

Limited Space.

Space for safe operation of the personal plane can be kept to a minimum in several ways. Simplest method, as pointed out, is to use pasture land, which might involve some danger to stock, but accomplishes the purpose of putting the land to dual use and gives the plane the best sod-covered field on the farm for landing.

Several safety factors should be taken into consideration in selecting the site. For instance, if the farmer is a considerate man his take-off path will not be directly over his neighbor's house. If he is a careful man, his approach and take-off paths will not be over such hazards as trees, hills or wires which will add danger to his flying.

Obstacles in the approach path usually cause the most trouble, particularly for beginner flyers, and what looks like an excellent location for a landing strip immediately may be condemned by an experienced flier. Another important factor is the prevailing wind. If a single strip is used it should be laid out as nearly as possible in that direction, and if two strips are prepared by flying farmer neighbors in cooperation they should be laid out so as to cover the greatest proportion of the most prevalent winds.

Related Problems.

Grading and drainage must be considered jointly for one affects the other. Grading should provide a surface sufficiently smooth for aircraft use and should direct the flow of surface water so that it is removed in the quickest possible time. If there is an excess of underground water from within the airpark area, artificial drainage may be necessary.

Another thing which the CAA experts point out as a safety factor is grades of landing strips. A flying farmer may become adept after long experience in flying from a rolling or sloping field, but gaining this experience may be costly. In general, it is desirable that grades be so designed as to permit an unobstructed view from a point five feet above any location on the usable landing area. This might save a crash with a horse or a cow some day.

While turf is the cheapest type of surface where wear-resistant grasses can be grown, it may be that use of the field is heavy enough to require a heavier base. Types of bases range from naturally well-graded granular soils to prepared sand-clay, clay-gravel, crushed rock, shell and macadam. Mowing is one of the important factors in maintaining a good turf surface and proper frequency in cutting height varies with the different types of grasses used and in different locations. Of course, the best source of this information, if the farmer is in doubt, is the local county agricultural agent. Also the advice of sod experts is available from CAA.

Types of Grasses.

In this connection, CAA points out that in northern sections of the country a good turf grass is red fescue. In the Far West, the Fairway strain of crested wheat grass will flourish and the flying farmer should specialize in the low-growing variety. Throughout the South, Bermuda grass is desirable as far west as middle Texas. In the Southwest, Buffalo grass and mesquite will make good landing strips.

One thing which should be watched is erosion. It is not hard to up-end a plane if it strikes an erosion gully in a landing strip. A ground-hog or gopher hole can cause expensive damage to aircraft and possible bodily injury to passengers.

Flying farmers use their planes more than the ordinary personal flyer. For instance, the executive secretary of Flying Farmers association says that in a survey in 24 states, the average flying farmer flew 247.2 hours in a year. The average private owner uses his plane for less than half that many hours a year.

Not Always Valiant Fighters, Some Leathernecks Are Ladies

Contrary to the general picture of the marine as a tough and intrepid fighter, the leatherneck also can be a lady. In fact, there were 23,000 lady leathernecks during World War II and of this number more than 2,000 still are active in the role of women volunteer reservists, it is recalled as the U. S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve of World War II, an important part of a famous fighting organization, observes the fifth anniversary of its founding on February 13, 1943.

In keeping with marine tradition, these women reservists are continuing to serve the corps and their country. Most of them have formed their own volunteer training units in major cities throughout the country. Already numbering 13, these units represent the more active members of the World War II women's reserve.

Modeled After Marinettes.

History of the lady leathernecks, however, actually dates back to World War I, when the marine corps created its first women's reserve in 1918. Members of the unit, known as "marinettes," served in the capacity of messengers.

Garbed in a uniform described as "even newer than the new look," the marinettes were restricted in numbers to 305 and in rank to sergeant and below.

Known only as marines and desiring no nickname, the 23,000 women marines of the past war served in more than 200 different types of jobs at more than 50 marine bases and stations throughout the United States and Hawaii.

Wide Range of Duties.

In replacing a male marine to fight, the lady leathernecks performed duties running the gamut from quartermaster to shoemaker, from aviation helpers to plumbers and truck drivers.

Treated the same as their male counterparts, the women reservists underwent regular boot camp training, received the same pay and were allowed to advance in rank to as high as colonel.

On the fifth anniversary, although congressional action still is awaited on a bill to create active women reserve training units, the 13 volunteer training units have been formed during the past 10 months. Present duties of members are to assist in office detail connected with the men's citizen marine organizations.

MODERN VERSION . . . Women marines of volunteer training units today are helping out with clerical work connected with the men's citizen marine organized reserve units.

THE 'NEW LOOK' THEN . . . Marinettes, the "glammer gals" of 1918, were the forerunners of the World War II marine women reserves. Three of them are shown here being instructed by the late Lillian Russell, famous singer and stage actress, who was an honorary sergeant of the corps.

Annual School Election Will Be Held Monday, March 8

TWO WOMEN AND TWO MEN CANDIDATES FOR TWO THREE-YEAR TERMS

Mrs. Fred J. Arnold And Mrs. Marvin Isvik Seek Election As Directors

The annual school election of the Independent School district of Klemme will be held at the Community Hall on Monday, March 8. The polls will be open from 12:00 o'clock noon until 7:00 p. m.

Two directors will be named for a three-year term to succeed H. Barz and E. J. Thompson. Those who have filed for the above offices are H. E. Barz, incumbant, Everett Guth, farmer living north of Klemme; Mrs. Fred J. Arnold and Mrs. Marvin Isvik.

Besides voting for the above directors, voters will also receive another ballot. For the first time voters will elect a member on the County Board of Education. V. A. Cook is the candidate on the Klemme Independent ballot.

Should Stir Up Interest

The school election this year promises to be a lively affair and a large turn-out is expected. In past years school election was a rather quiet affair with only a few interested voters turning out. However, with four candidates in the field, two of whom are well qualified women, voters really have a choice this year.

Every voter in the district should turn out for the election and have a voice in the affairs of our school. Our school is the most important thing in the community and people should show a greater interest in our school by going to the polls and supporting those who are to run the affairs of the school.

Don't forget to vote Monday, March 8 at the Community Hall.

Lighted Field Fund Nearing Goal, More Money Needed

HEAVY RAINS FRIDAY HAS CAUSED RIVER TO OVERFLOW BANKS

Railroad And Highway Bridges Were Endangered By High Waters

The heavy rains here Friday sent the Iowa River over its banks and the swift current piled up ice jams against railroad and highway bridges in this vicinity.

A crew of men guarded the Rock Island bridge south of Klemme Saturday and Saturday night as there was danger of the bridges being washed out by water and ice. Highway crews had to use dynamite to free ice jams on the two bridges south of the Carl Wille farm near the Riverside school. Ice caused damage to these bridges.

However, the danger had subsided on Sunday with freezing weather which slowed up the rush of water.

NEW DONATIONS PAST WEEK PUSH FUNDS CLOSER TO THE TOP

Everyone Is Invited To Help Along Lighted Field Project Here

Orville Stokesbary, chairman of the Civic Club Lighted Base Ball Field Project reports another list of fans who have contributed to the Lighted Field Fund the past week and no doubt the fund will near the goal by next week end.

However, if funds push over the top, it will mean that more money will be available for the purchase of extra equipment and also to keep a fund for the maintenance of the lighting system. Any money received over the goal will be put to good use, so send in your donations all you soft ball fans in town or country. Don't forget, certain times will also be set aside for the "small fry," both boys and girls, to use the field for their soft ball games. This is for everybody. Here's the list of contributions up to Saturday night:

Obituary Of Mrs. Edward J. Schaefer

Mary M. Suckow was born March 14th 1847 in Albany, New York, the fourth of a family of six children born to her parents, John and Caroline Suckow.

Her parents were natives of Mechlenburg, Germany and her father was a shoe cobbler by trade.

The family moved from Albany, New York to Clayton County Iowa, then to Alamakee County, and when Mary was eleven years old they moved to Hancock County, Iowa, this was in 1878, (seven years before the Liberty Methodist Church was built, and eleven years before the town of Klemme was platted.)

Mary Suckow had five brothers: Will was a preacher, lived for some years in Forest City, was outstanding as a pulpit orator. Henry was a farmer and continued to operate the home farm for many years. John was a public school teacher, he taught in Klemme, many years ago. Edd was a carpenter, he helped put up nearly every store building on Klemme's main street.

Charles was a painter and decorator, he lived in Klemme during the early years.

On December 28th, 1888, Mary M. Suckow and Edw. J. Schaefer were married, they commenced housekeeping on a Liberty Township farm, where they continued to live for 30 years.

This union was blessed with four children: Roy I. of Klemme; Elmer E. of Liberty Township; Benjamin T., who died while in training for the first World War; and Mabel L. (Mrs. Herald Ridder) of Nora Springs, Iowa.

Edward and Mary Schaefer retired from the farm in 1917 and moved to Klemme where they have now spent 29 years together. In December 1947 they observed their 59th wedding anniversary.

There was ever a quiet air of hospitality about the Schaefer home, which centered around this wonderful home maker, Mrs. Mary Schaefer.

The Schaefers were members of the Methodist Church, almost from the time the Liberty Church was built. Mrs. Schaefer was president of the Ladies Aid for several years.

For the past three years Mrs. Schaefer suffered more or less from Asthma and an irregular heart, this condition became serious some days ago and the end came Monday morning, February 23, 1948. She reached the age of 80 years, 11 months and 9 days.

She leaves besides her husband and three children mentioned above: two brothers, Edd. Suckow, Plano, Iowa; Charles Suckow, Clarinda, Iowa; one adopted sister, Mrs. Eva Janshaw, Portland, Oregon. Eleven grand children and four great grand children.

Sweepstakes Hospital Idea

An American metropolis has voted to ask the state to give the green light to a lottery to raise a million dollars for new hospitals. Well, the general letting down of bars against gambling in this country won't result in any upbuilding of character, but since everybody is taking a chance on something, it is hard to frown on the idea of hospitals benefiting. All we hope is that no city dedicates one new institution as the Straight, Place and Show hospital or adds a Daily Double wing.

We can't help wondering how a sensitive patient in a hospital built through gambling will feel at times. Will he feel a little uncertain whether the nurse has been scratched when she is a little late showing up?

Will he want the morning line on doctors, in order to get the weights? And will it do him any good to see a notation, after a medico had bungled a bit, "Will do better next time out?"

Will there not always hang over the Sweepstakes hospitals the mood of the race track, the lottery and the pinball machine? Isn't it possible that in some insidious way the time may come when a diagnosis will be made through a slot machine?

We are all for anything that will build modern hospitals and improve the old ones, but we don't want to feel that the medical staff is handicapping patients.

There is thought to be a better than fair chance that the state will permit the development of hospitals through gambling, and should the lottery take the form of a sweepstakes we look for the following chart notations:

Night Nurse . . . In and out.
Interne . . . Needs schooling.
Thermometer . . . Reliable sort.
Staff Doc . . . Good at times.
Cashier's office . . . Strictly money type.
Diagnosis . . . Good when right.
Iron Bed . . . Tough spot.
Sleeping Pill . . . Well liked.
Breakfast Tray . . . Shows little.
Menu . . . Unreliable sort.
The Pill . . . May be sleeper.
Pajama Pants . . . Moving up.
Orange Juice . . . Weak sort.
Soft Diet . . . Pass this one.
Hospital Steak . . . Away long time.
Square Meal . . . Later perhaps.
Day Nurse . . . Shows flashes.
Boiled Egg . . . Needs long rest.
Tender Sympathy . . . Scratched.
Solicitude . . . Now and then.

Letter for Special Delivery

Mrs. John Kieran,
Riverdale, N. Y.

Dear Margaret:

You and Jonathan will be going on the air soon, I predict, in a husband and wife program and I don't see how you can miss. But I tuned in on you and "The Brain" on a couple of programs and I want to warn you about something. You have to be firm. Do not waver on this point or you are lost. Jonathan is unconsciously a platform-hogger from away back and not too inclined to fly in company when he can fly solo.

The appeal of a Mr. and Mrs. Kieran radio program will be, to no small extent, to get a load of you, as the wife of a famous man. But that man of yours has no inferiority complex and you will have to battle your way to the mike with a rugged determination.

You have to heed this advice, Margaret. Take a firm stand now, before it is too late. He is no man to give an entertainment partner an even break. Use violence if necessary. But don't weaken. Hold out for at least 50 per cent of the microphone and don't settle for 49.

You may have to carry a little stick with a nail in it. Jab him the minute he monopolizes the mike. The big novelty will be you. And you're good. Don't agree to any program that can be called, "The John Kieran Sawing a Partner In Half Hour."

Yours with all good wishes,
ELMER.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 8 26-39.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalms 67.

The Personal Witness

Lesson for March 7, 1948

DR. ALBERT SCHWEITZER, described by Hermann Hagedorn as "Prophet in the Wilderness," is a living example of what Sunday's lesson is undertaking to portray, namely, living for Jesus where you are. Schweitzer, at 72, is described by Hagedorn as one who "burns like Francis of Assisi and looks like Josef Stalin." But to the people of Equatorial Africa, he looks and acts like our saviour Jesus did.

Dr. Newton

The lesson passage is found in Acts 8:26-39, and is the story of Philip, leaving his very successful evangelistic campaign in Samaria to follow the lead of the Holy Spirit into the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert. There he found a man in search of God, and through his witness the man was saved.

THE STORY OF JESUS

THIS man was not of Philip's race. He was an Ethiopian. But he was a man. And God loves every man of every race and of every condition of life. Jesus never did meet an unimportant person, nor will any true follower of his. Jesus said, "As the Father has sent Me, even so send I you," John 20:21.

This man was reading in the Book of Isaiah, where the prophet was foretelling how Jesus would suffer for the sins of the whole world. He could not understand the wonderful words. And the Spirit directed Philip to go and join himself to the eunuch. Philip ran to the chariot in which the rich man rode, asking, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" He was quick to give his witness. That is the first lesson of the lesson.

AND THE MAN LISTENED

WHEN we faithfully obey the Holy Spirit, he enables us to effectively witness for Jesus. We cannot be effective witnesses if we rely upon our own wisdom and our own judgment. The boy in your street who does not know Jesus will listen to your story if you go in the same glad obedience to the command of the Spirit of God as did Philip.

A lad told me this story. He had a neighbor who had never been to Sunday school, and he wanted to enlist this friend. He thought about it seriously. But he was not quite sure of himself. And then he prayed, asking God to direct him. The next day the boy asked him, "What are you doing Sunday morning?" With this opening the lad invited his neighbor to come along with him, and the result was that the little neighbor, of another race, accepted Christ as his Saviour and is today a regular attendant at church and Sunday school.

TO WHOM SHALL WE WITNESS?

THE question now emerges, To whom shall we bear this witness? We cannot all go as missionaries, as did Dr. Schweitzer. Most of us must remain at home and carry on the work of our everyday pursuits of life.

But every Christian can witness. First, to those immediately about us. In every community in our beloved country are people who do not know Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord. We can witness to them, not to all of them, but to some of them, perhaps to one of them. And I would remind you that if you miss that particular person to whom you may be directed by the Holy Spirit, he or she may never know about the Saviour's love.

Second, we can share in the sending of the missionaries to earth's remotest bounds, through our gifts. I delight to think that I am in partnership with many great men and women on foreign fields, through my gifts and through my prayers.

Third, we can witness through personal correspondence with people in other lands. The present far-reaching media of relief for stricken peoples of the world affords a wonderful opportunity for this very witness. Ask your pastor for the name of some person your age in one of the lands to which your church is sending relief, and write that person a letter, telling of your joy in serving God.

The eunuch went on his way rejoicing. Why? Because Philip had taught him the way of salvation. He had been used as an effective witness in leading a man of another race to experience the peace that passeth all understanding.

And Jesus is saying to us today, "So send I you."

A WOMAN'S PLACE

By JOHN T. CAVANAUGH

"SO, SALUSTRI is back," Managing Editor Pepper Drislane exclaimed as he clicked down the receiver. Excitedly, Police Chief Lawton had just shouted into the telephone, "This guy is looking for blood—don't take any unnecessary risks."

In the editorial room of the Hartfield Herald, Drislane sat with his head in his hands and mournfully looked over his city staff—two old men and seven girls. "Thirty years in newspapers and this has to happen to me—a chance to make headline history and here I am saddled with a bunch of sob sisters."

The Salustri case had been spectacular from the start. The self-styled big shot of the numbers racket had challenged repeatedly: "There ain't nobody going to pin a rap on me. This gazabo's got protection all the way to the state house and back and don't forget it."

But Jerry Cowan, erstwhile reportorial star of the Herald, and Managing Editor Drislane chose to forget it to the tune of pinning a 20-year federal sentence on the numbers king. Then the slipup; while waiting for the train that would carry him to prison, Salustri outwitted the guards, slugged the marshal and was on his way.

With the news of his escape, Jerry and Drislane knew Salustri would be back. The Herald's constant and merciless headlines had galled the gangster, bored right into his pride.

"Sure, he'll be back," the reporter told his editor, "and when he does, he'll head for our office first."

That was two years ago. Now Jerry was on assignment in the Pacific. Meanwhile, the managing editor waited. Of course, he was jumpy; who wouldn't be when each corner might turn into a hail of hot lead? And now the chief of police had passed the word that Salustri had been spotted in Bayside, just 11 miles this side of Hartfield.

The managing editor was dismally fingering the last cigarette in his squashed pack when Publisher Jim Geldhorn came into the room. Drislane blinked his eyes and dropped the cigarette—doggone, if it wasn't another girl. Attractive and well built, but still another girl.

Geldhorn hustled the young woman over to an empty desk and hurriedly left.

"On a newspaper a girl reporter isn't worth the powder it takes to—to camouflage her nose," Drislane had exploded when the publisher unobtrusively attempted to install the last girl on the city staff.

"All I hear these days is 'I've got an appointment with the hairdresser, the dressmaker, the butcher, the baker—.' These girls have an appointment with everyone but me and their work," he ranted. "Is this a newspaper office or a sorority house?"

"Chief," said thin-pated, fiftyish Mike Bales, the paper's only bachelor, coming up to the managing editor's desk, "I'm going to hop down to Nick's for a shave." Generally Mike shaved every second day and today was a first.

"Darn," muttered Drislane, "we're off again and it'll take another three weeks to see who is really queen bee of this hive."

The managing editor's head was poked under his desk in search of his lost cigarette when a pair of shapely legs approached.

"Mr. Drislane," he heard a feminine voice say, "I'd like to be assigned to the Salustri case."

Abruptly, a hush fell over the Herald editorial room and light expectant reportorial heads poised over their typewriters as the managing editor took several seconds to come up from under his desk.

In the face of the gathering editorial clouds, the new girl bravely continued with her request and began to fumble with a gold locket which was looped around her neck. "The picture I have from Jerry—" she offered but got no further.

The thunder broke loose and Drislane hissed, his face purple, "On a newspaper, a woman"—he didn't finish but resignedly collapsed in his chair.

With effort he continued feebly, "Miss Whatever-your-name-is, go get a manicure—get a cup of coffee

The managing editor's head was poked under his desk in search of his lost cigarette when a pair of shapely legs approached.

—get anything. But for right now, just get."

As the girl hastily traced Mike Bales' rapidly retreating footsteps, Drislane sighed, "Even Jerry Cowan away out in the Pacific is getting balmy. On top of all this, imagine his wanting to saddle me with his fiancee, some up-country jane who probably doesn't know a dateline from a clothesline." Gleefully, he pictured himself setting up ambush for the next time the publisher came in with another girl.

After an hour of planting imaginary booby traps all over the newspaper plant, the managing editor had mentally destroyed the publisher and all the girls on the staff a dozen times over. Just when he was halfway through his masterpiece of stuffing Geldhorn and the girls through the news press to be delivered as supplements to the 5 o'clock edition, Mike Bales with a face full of lather tore into the room.

"Chief, Chief," the reporter panted, "they just got him."

"Just got who — when — where?" Drislane roared.

"Salustri, at the barber shop," said Mike, furiously shoving a piece of copy paper into his typewriter. "I'll have the story written for the last edition in a jiffy."

DOWNSTAIRS the presses were silent and waiting as the managing editor's pencil poised over the reporter's scoop.

"Nat Salustri, former numbers czar who escaped local police two years ago, today was captured in Nick's barber and beauty shop on Main Street through the efforts of Miss Loretta Hewes, a member of The Herald's editorial staff," the story read.

"The gangster, who has hidden from the police since his spectacular escape from the United States Marshal's office in 1943, was recognized by the reporter as she walked through the barber shop to the beauty salon at the rear of the building. Miss Hewes, upon seeing Salustri, continued through the shop and left by a rear exit and soon returned with a squad of police officers.

"The reporter said that she had identified the gangster through his picture which she had carried in a gold locket given to her by her fiance, Jerry Cowan, formerly police reporter on The Herald and now on assignment in the South Pacific.

" 'Having threatened the life of my fiance, Salustri was a potential threat to my coming marriage, so I carried his picture, knowing that I would run into him some day,' Miss Hewes said. 'Now that he is captured, I know that I can plan to marry Jerry as soon as he returns.' "

Speechless, the managing editor scanned the copy. Then, poising his pencil, he added to the message: " 'In the meantime, I will continue working at The Herald as police reporter.' "

TOWBOAT PILOT

By Elston J. Melton

(Caxton Printers . . . . $4)

By Lyn Connelly.

Here at last is an intelligently written book for adolescent boys, one of the best of its kind since the immortal Mark Twain penned that perennial favorite, "Tom Sawyer."

Tom Briggs is essentially a good boy, but because he takes precious time away from his daily chores to swim with his chum, Johnny Sanders, and because he dreams constantly of the day when he might be a towboat pilot on the mighty Gasconade river, he is considered lazy and shiftless by his cruel stepfather and many of the town citizens.

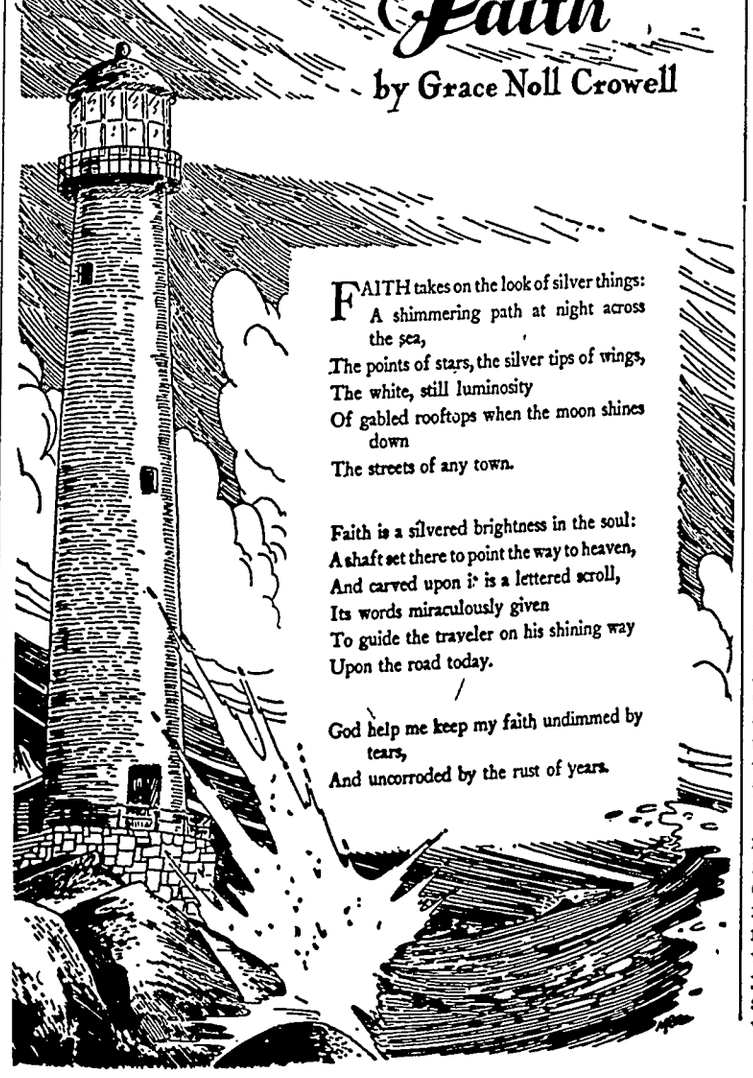
You'll share Tom's frustration when, after he works hard to buy himself a small boat so that he can fish to support his family, his stepfather sells the boat and pockets the money. You'll share his horror when his hunting rifle goes off accidentally in the post office and he is accused by Mr. Pugh, the postmaster, of having deliberately attempted to kill him.

Despite his many handicaps, Tom proves through sheer perseverance and courage that he is capable of being a towboat captain. The story carries him from the age of 12 when he is in the dream stage, through the age of 21, when he makes his first cruise as a pilot. But long before the realization of his ambition, he earns the respect of his neighbors when he clears Mr. Pugh of a possible murder charge of which only Tom knows he is innocent, thus proving that he holds no malice in his heart for the postmaster who would have sent Tom to a juvenile home when he, too, was wrongly accused of a crime.

The book is a joy for those loving the great outdoors. Mr. Melton, a prominent Missouri newspaper man, knows his subject well and handles it beautifully with the result that there emerges a book full of tears and joy, tenderness and adventure.

Faith

by Grace Noll Crowell



FAITH takes on the look of silver things:
A shimmering path at night across the sea,
The points of stars, the silver tips of wings,
The white, still luminosity
Of gabled rooftops when the moon shines down
The streets of any town.

Faith is a silvered brightness in the soul:
A shaft set there to point the way to heaven,
And carved upon it is a lettered scroll,
Its words miraculously given
To guide the traveler on his shining way
Upon the road today.

God help me keep my faith undimmed by tears,
And uncorroded by the rust of years.

New Uranium Discoveries Show Wide Distribution

The world is expanding its known sources of uranium, vital mineral of the Atomic Age.

Both newly-independent Burma and the Union of South Africa have announced the discovery of extensive uranium deposits, National Geographic society notes. These latest finds are further evidence that the atomic-energy ore is much more widely distributed around the globe than popularly believed.

Prospecting for uranium lodes is much simpler than searching for gold. The uranium can be detected easily by a scientific "divining rod." Radioactive by nature, the mineral literally broadcasts its whereabouts in the ground. Forty years ago Hans Geiger, a German scientist, invented the instrument which hunts out the hidden ore.

Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

IN WHAT line of professional sport can the athlete or competitor make the most money? Baseball, football, boxing, racing, wrestling, basketball or what have you?

The range in salaries from Joe DiMaggio to Bob Feller, according to recent report, was something like $65,000 to $85,000. At the same time, Johnny Lujack was signed up for an amount approximating $20,000 a year. Charley Trippi drew down just about the same chunk of cash for 1947.

FELLER

Football with its 20 games a season, including exhibitions, can't match baseball with its 190 games, also including exhibitions.

There are not many ballplayers paid the same as Bob Feller, Ted Williams and Joe Di Maggio. But also there are not so many football players paid on a level with Lujack, Trippi and a few more.

Even as it is, pro football can make very little money with its brief season thrown against modern expenses—even the winning teams. The others can drop enough doubloons to founder a Spanish galleon.

On a general average, baseball and football pay close to the same amounts, with baseball in front. The kickback is that any number of ballplayers get $7,500 or less a season.

Stars Lure Crowds

What about the pro golfers? A Hogan, Nelson, Demaret or Locke can make from $25,000 to $30,000 a year, but there are not many of these. Only a few stars. Most of the others are underpaid, but it happens to be the stars who draw the crowds.

Golf compares favorably with football for the few who must work over 200 days a year to top $20,000. The average pro golfer on tour doesn't make $5,000. Club golfers who are also instructors can do much better.

Ballplayers also last longer than football players, although such veterans as Sammy Baugh, Sid Luckman, Bulldog Turner and Mel Hein can hang around for better than 10 or 12 years. They are the unbreakables.

Joe Louis can pick up more money in one fight than any baseball or football player can earn in a big part of his career. The Louis-Walcott outdoor jamboree should play to at least a million-dollar gate. It will be an interesting fight along physical and psychological lines.

Louis gets 40 per cent of the take. This means around $400,000, from which his manager takes his cut, whatever it is. In any event, at least $250,000 comes to Louis. The only kink here is that your Uncle Sam, losing no time at all, lops off around 75 or 80 per cent.

The morbid facts are that the same collector doesn't leave Feller, Williams and other high-priced players enough to start a bragging debate.

Wrestling Is Steady

What about the wrestlers? Some active fact-finder says that Carnera will collect around $250,000 for a year's activity. This may be too high. But wrestlers do better than many people know about. It might be remembered that a wrestler can operate five nights a week in a rush period. Boxing champions must settle for two or three performances a year.

Jimmy Londos told me once that he made as much as $20,000 a week. Londos was then an incredible operator, also a very highly intelligent human being.

The only true answer to this salary matter in sport must take in the highest number who average the best pay over the years.

My answer here would be baseball, where so many thousands are involved in so many leagues. There may not be so many Ruths, Fellers, Greenbergs, DiMaggios or Williams, but there are more than 400 big leaguers who can knock off from $7,500 to $15,000—a higher average for a greater number.

Pro football can almost match this payroll with the two leagues reaching for a rival windpipe. The football players get all the money, and it will be this way until two strong leagues can play at peace.

Which reminds us, we almost forgot the jockeys. How about Eddie Arcaro, Johnny Longden and a few more? All they have is around a million dollars each. You know $100,000 a year is no big overlay.

Lining Up the Stars

It will be interesting to see which teams and which leagues sign up football's leading college stars of 1947.

Including all bowl and post-season games played, the seven leading backs of the year were Johnny Lujack of Notre Dame, Bob Chappuis of Michigan, Bobby Layne of Texas, Ray Evans of Kansas, Charley Conerly of Mississippi, Doak Walker of S.M.U. and Harry Gilmer of Alabama.

Contestant Gets Decision In No-Blow Boxing Match

The only boxing match that was won without a single blow being struck was a bout in 1943 in Bristol, England, between two American soldiers, Louis Fetters and Carmine Milone says Collier's.

At the gong starting the first round, Milone rushed toward Fetters so fast that, in leading with a haymaker, he lost his balance, fell, struck his head on a ring post, was knocked unconscious and counted out.

Hard Of Hearing Amazed By New Developments!

Out of the electronic laboratories come two amazing new developments that are now available to the hard of hearing everywhere.

Imagine, if you can, an extremely tiny device with power enough to make even a whisper be heard distinctly, yet because of its new Audiomatic control, painful, unwanted noises are cut off.

More surprising still, is the fact that, in spite of its tiny size, not two, or three, but FOUR vacuum tubes in a push-pull output circuit deliver tremendous power—way beyond the realm of ordinary aids to hearing.

So enthusiastic are the manufacturers of this new development, The Microtone Company, Dept. 499, 4602 Nicollet Avenue, Minneapolis 9, Minnesota, that they will gladly send, without cost, complete information to anyone interested in improving his or her hearing.

Whether you now own an old hearing aid, a comparatively new one or none at all you owe it to yourself to learn the facts.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

How to Put Up with Women's Styles

When Will Dudley's misses finally gave in to the new-style longer skirts, Will was mighty critical at first. Allowed as how women were a slave to fashion ... ought to dress to please their husbands and not style designers.

Sue finally reminded Will of his habit of sitting by the radio Saturday afternoons in shirt sleeves and old slippers, listening to the sportcasts with a mellow glass of beer. Suggested that maybe Will was a slave to comfort.

And Will admitted she was right.

Perhaps the way somebody dress isn't always to our taste—just Will's glass of beer may be another person's cider.

But from where I sit, those little differences aren't important—unless we go out of our way to make them so, by being hypercritical. As Will says now: "Well, anyway those long skirts hide a multitude of shins" ... and lets it go at that.

Returning to private control with a new strong financial structure, The Rock Island Lines move forward into a second decade of Planned Progress.

Ten years ago the first six Rockets went into service, followed by 14 more ultra-modern streamlined trains. Then came Rocket Freights, 1333 bridges built or rebuilt, curves straightened, grades reduced, centralized traffic control with short wave radio, new car shops, new testing laboratories, and improved roadbed.

SOPHISTICATED SENIORS CLASS NEWS

Only twelve more weeks and our High School days will be over. However, there are a lot of things to be done before we receive our diplomas.

This week was a busy week for the Seniors. Monday we took a day off from our studies to have our pictures taken, and believe it or not no one broke the camera. Representatives from the Waltz Studio of Des Moines came to Mason City to take them and promised to send our proofs in about a week. I'm sure everyone had a good time, at least everyone looked rather worn out the next day. We also chose our class play this week. It is a comedy mystery, three-act play, which will be given the first part of April. The name of it is, "Aunt Cathy's Cat".

However, this week has not been all loafing as we still have studying to do. In English we are learning to increase our vocabulary and discovering just where the different words of our language originated.

History notebooks have all been handed in and corrected for the last six weeks. The discussion in history is about the machine age and agriculture.

We have finished studying about the Wet Middle Latitude Lands in Geography and at present we are studying about our natural resources, which proves to be rather interesting.

Bookkeeping is getting more complicated as we begin the chapter on "Columnar Cash Records". Let's hope it doesn't get any harder.

OFF THE RUBBISH PILE . . . Boys' club members check a working drawing of a speedboat model, limited in cost to $1, for the Skipper's Cup contest. Explaining construction details are Guy Lombardo, left, and David W. Armstrong, executive director of Boys' Clubs of America.

START FROM SCRAPS

Boys Comb Rubbish Heaps For Boat Contest Materials

It's a treasure hunt in the rubbish heap for boys all over the United States. They are seeking old tin cans, mother's castoff garters, scraps of wood, paper clips, rubber bands and even leftover paint, all of which will be used for building entries in the first nationwide Skipper's Cup model speedboat contest.

To build a swift and sturdy craft for less than $1 is the immediate objective of many of the quarter million youngsters who are members of or affiliated with Boys' Clubs of America. This organization and Eveready Battery company are co-sponsors of the nationwide contest.

If the "skipper" qualifies locally, his next aim is to survive regional eliminations so he can race his speedboat in the Reflecting Pool at Washington April 10 and 11 for final honors.

The national contest is dated to coincide with annual observance of Boys' Club Week.

The contest is limited to boys under 16, all of whom are supplied with working drawings of model types. The model boat was designed by Douglas Rolfe, who also will serve as one of the judges of the national finals. Instructions covering length, weight and detail govern all series. Hulls must be completed and water speed tests certified to national headquarters on or before March 13.

Builders of the best boats locally will receive awards of tiny, two-ounce electric motors and a supply of flashlight batteries. Winners in the seven Boys' Club regions of the U. S. will receive regional Skipper's cups.

In the national finals in Washington the seven boys who score top time trials, regardless of region, will compete before U. S. and foreign celebrities under the shadow of the Lincoln Memorial.

Judges will include Guy Lombardo, band leader and speedboat champion; Bill Stern and other well-known sports figures. Former President Hoover is serving as honorary chairman of the national committee.

Local craftsmanship contests will precede speed trials. Judging, which will be on a basis of point competition, will cover basic design, originality, workmanship, finish and over-all appearance.

War Vets Respond To Call for Blood

ATLANTA, GA.—For 24 veterans of battlefields extending from Luzon to St. Lo, the call for blood was enough.

Many of them gratefully remembered that their own lives had been saved by blood plasma during the war, and here was Lawson veterans' hospital appealing for blood donors.

All 24, with Purple Hearts shining on their jackets, lined up at the hospital to give blood.

Proud Son Sees Widowed Mother In Cap and Gown

ITHACA, N. Y.—When the library tower chimes at Cornell university peeled forth their congratulations to mid-year graduates, Jonathan Hartwell Harwood III, aged 4, near burst with pride.

Among the young women in academic robes was his mother, Virginia Oake Harwood. Few fellows have the privilege of seeing their mothers graduate from college.

Jonny doesn't know it, but he was the chief reason why his mother finished her course in the college of home economics. Jonny's father fought in the invasion of Normandy, June 6, 1944; and he never came back.

Jonny's dad graduated from Cornell, too—in 1942. And his mother, whose parents live in Lockport, N. Y., left school in her sophomore year to marry him. They didn't have much time together—just a couple of summers while dad was training at Fort Bragg. Then he was sent to England to train as a Ranger—and was made a captain. Then came D-Day. . . .

"People thought I was crazy when I decided to take my two-and-one-half-year-old son to Ithaca with me in the fall of 1945 and continue college," Mrs. Harwood admits. "Maybe I was a little crazy. But I had to have something to do—something to occupy my time and my mind. I could be a better mother to Jonny, I felt, if I graduated from college and was prepared to earn my living."

The pension and insurance money made it possible for them to rent a small Ithaca apartment and live in modest comfort. And Jonny went to Cornell, too. Jonny attended the college's nursery school. He also will be graduated this year—from nursery school to kindergarten.

Woman Lighthouse Keeper Quits Post As Feet Are 'Tired'

TURKEY POINT, MD.—Because her feet are tired and she wants to "just rest," Mrs. Fannie Salter, the last woman lighthouse keeper on Chesapeake bay, has given up her job.

Believed to be the only qualified lightkeeper of her sex in the nation, Mrs. Salter retired from a job she has held for 23 years. She took charge of the Turkey Point tower on February 11, 1925, under appointment by Calvin Coolidge. She succeeded her husband, who had been the keeper for three years before his death.

On sick leave since last September, the woman light tender explains that "climbing the tower has given me fallen arches."

Although she has no definite plans for the future, Mrs. Salter, who is in her 60s, insists that she will remain near the water. Her immediate plans are to "just rest and catch up on long-delayed visits with relatives."

Sale of Loafing Space To Restore Old Plaza

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Appealing to the weaker side of man, Albuquerque Historical society offered loafing privileges in the plaza in return for donations in a drive for funds to restore the old town plaza. Results were good, officials of the society report.

The scale ran: For $8.55, one square foot of loafing space; for $10, plain and fancy loafing anywhere; for $17.10, loafing privileges with frills; for $25, your child's footprint in concrete, and for $50, your own footprint.

He Gets Stung Daily—But It's His Living

BALTIMORE.—Harold J. Franklin gets stung several times a day—but he makes his living by doing it.

Franklin's job entails thrusting his arm into a cage filled with 3,000 mosquitoes. After a minute he withdraws his arm and counts the bites. If they total about 60, well and good. If not, he repeats the process in another cage until he can get the required number of bites.

When he finds a hungry community of mosquitoes, he covers his arm with insecticide and thrusts it in again, giving the insects another opportunity for a vicious bite on his arm. Once again he must laboriously count the number of bites.

Franklin is a laboratory technician for a local chemical company. The process is a test of the power of mosquito repellants.

Martin Is Likely GOP Dark Horse

Contest Between Taft, Dewey Decisive in Republican Race

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

As this is written, the crystal ball gazers say that the 5' 8" black-moustached governor of the Empire State is going to be the next President of the United States. Some people will question this, and three, six or more months from now, even my private crystal-gazers may revise their predictions.

But the Dewey following is confident, even in the face of the latest Roper poll, which shows that Harold Stassen is the only Republican (now that Eisenhower is out) who could win four out of the six major geographical regions of the country from Mr. Truman! The poll says Stassen leads everywhere but in the solid South.

Suppose the solid South should split from the Democratic party, as they indicated they might in order to rebuke the President for his so-called "anti-southern" civil rights message which recommended anti-lynch, anti-poll-tax, fair practices legislation, which is labelled "pro-Negro" by many southern critics? Well, suppose that, and as of the date of this poll (February 5), Stassen has it.

BAUKHAGE

Still the old-timers stick to their prediction of Dewey, which they make with tears in their eyes, instead of smoke from the smoke-filled room where decisions are supposed to be made.

I wish that you people could have attended that over-crowded luncheon at the National Press club when Gen. Dwight Eisenhower spoke and introduced his successor, Gen. Omar Bradley, as chief of staff.

It was a good talk, and you probably read the report of it. You also probably have read the report of the question and answer period which General Eisenhower permitted, and which was one of the best news conferences—that's what it turned out to be—that I ever have attended. Members who couldn't get in were standing up, cocking ears, 12 to 15 deep outside the entrances to the dining room.

Naturally some questions dealt with the Eisenhower withdrawal statement issued late in January. The night after the Eisenhower withdrawal, which most Republicans and Democrats considered as final, I happened to be with two die-hard, right-wing Republicans, who wouldn't even admit they were as happy as they were. They kept saying, why couldn't he have said that much earlier if he meant it, and anyhow he has left a loophole so he can run, if not now, in 1952.

I couldn't see that. I knew a lot of Republicans thought Eisenhower's letter was an absolutely honest statement, dictated by the reasoning of an honest man, untrained in politics, it is true, but speaking from his heart.

There isn't space to repeat Eisenhower's long statement in which he said, among other things:

"I am not available for and could not accept nomination for high political office. . . . My decision . . . is definite and positive.

"The necessary and wise subordination of the military to civil power will be best sustained . . . when lifelong professional soldiers . . . abstain from seeking high political office. . . . I would regard it as unalloyed tragedy for our country if ever should come the day when military commanders might be selected with an eye to their future potentialities in the political field."

General Sherman said: "I will not run if nominated and will not serve if elected."

But what motivated Sherman . . . and Eisenhower?

The sincere belief expressed in Eisenhower's statement that a man of purely military training wasn't equipped for the job? (That statement, as you know, was thrown back at Eisenhower as a sideswipe at Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who has emphatically NOT said that he didn't choose to run.)

I have spoken of the Eisenhower family at some length before in this column. I do not claim to be more than an acquaintance. But, as I said, when General Eisenhower's statement came over the wire, I was firmly convinced that there wasn't any equivocation in it. And I am glad that the press and their friends heard Eisenhower answer the questions as he did, giving back steel for steel on every throw.

There was a big sigh of relief, of course, when the Republican and Democratic leaders knew Eisenhower was out. I felt the same way, but for a different reason. My reason for being glad that Eisenhower isn't going to be President—as he would have been on any ticket if he had run—is the same reason he put forth. I have tremendous respect for him, personally, professionally. I am not a professional soldier, but my experience as a wartime soldier is reinforced by an indirect impression of military thought which goes back for many generations in my own family and is kept alive with close personal contacts in the armed services. I simply say this to the voter:

You may have a tremendous respect for a man's military record, but that doesn't mean you'd call him in if your child had appendicitis. Politics is just as much of a profession as medicine or the law.

We need a trained leader in this particular kind of leading. Maybe we will get one. Maybe we won't.

Speaker Joe Martin Universally Popular

Stassen has certain qualities of leadership with which he seems to have impressed the people interviewed by the Roper pollers. But unless Stassen could "sweep the primaries" — I'm frankly quoting my chief crystal-gazer — he hasn't a chance at this writing. There doesn't seem to be a chance of his sweeping the primaries, and anyhow there aren't many states which have adopted this device, which it was thought could beat the "smoke-filled room."

Now, the man who is going to be nominated is the man who wins in the Taft-Dewey contest (always, as of NOW). That doesn't mean it will be Taft or Dewey. But it does mean that it will be the man who, although he hasn't enough votes on this prelim, can pick up enough independent votes in later contests to see him through. At the present writing, it looks as if there were enough of those "changeable" votes to nominate Dewey.

If it's neither Dewey nor Stassen, the wise guys in Washington say it will be none other than Speaker Joe Martin, who never insulted anybody and has more friends in and out of Washington than a winner in a crap game when everyone else is broke. Without ever pulling any rough stuff, Joe Martin has put more people under willing obligation to him than any man I know in congress.

For example — when the Taft-Hartley fight was at its hottest, a certain Republican congressman came to Joe and said: "I'm sorry, Joe, I've got to bolt. My constituency doesn't want this bill." Joe didn't argue. He simply said: "Don't worry. I understand your situation perfectly. We'll get the votes anyhow. Forget it."

That man is Joe's friend for life.

Some years ago, a magazine took a secret poll of the Washington correspondents to determine the most "useful" man in congress. He was to be judged by his "integrity, intelligence, industry and influence." Joe got the highest vote of anyone in either house or senate.

Not long ago there was one of those big parties here, periodically thrown by various visiting firemen. It was a regular stampede, but some way I managed to back Joe Martin into a corner with my two Washington-wise assistants. Joe is a bachelor, and these two women are not lacking in either brains or pulchritude. They'd both met the speaker before, more or less professionally, anyhow rather formally. This wasn't formal. Neither of them is a born-and-bred Republican. Like me, and all other Washingtonians, they are voteless and more or less neutral between the parties. Both of them fell for Joe Martin hard. And it wasn't because it is Leap Year and Joe is a bachelor. They are both happily married (the only kind of assistants my wife and I hire).

At any rate, Joe Martin is a good dark horse to watch.

MARGARINE STRATEGY . . . Rep. Edward A. Mitchell (Rep., Ind.) acted as host at a capitol luncheon for congressmen and members of women's leagues who favor repeal of the present taxes on oleomargarine. Donning a chef's bulging cap, Mitchell demonstrated the process housewives must go through to color their margarine at home.

NEWS REVIEW

Peril Seen for Tax Cut; Soil Control Row Due

Following the first blush of joy over the spirit of deflation which seemed to have been evoked by the commodity market price slump, U. S. citizens began to realize that complications might set in.

Most significant hidden gimmick behind the market skid appeared to be the development that the price decline might, in the words of Sen. Scott Lucas (Dem., Ill.), "eliminate all possibility" of income tax reductions this year.

And that apparently was the cautious but considered opinion of the entire tax-writing senate finance committee, of which Lucas is a member.

Sen. Owen Brewster (Rep., Me.), also a finance committee member, expressed a concurring view, pointing out that any appreciable general price decline "certainly would have to be taken into consideration" by Republicans in their tax-cutting plans.

Another member of the group, Sen. Harry Byrd (Dem., Va.) said that if a decline of market prices develops into a business recession, it probably would have "a considerable effect" on tax reduction.

"I certainly am not going to vote for any bill that would put the treasury in a deficit position," said Byrd.

While the senators' statements reflected a good deal of pussyfooting and at least a temporary surge of indecision with regard to tax reduction in the light of the market slump, it was obvious that they were thoroughly concerned with this turn of events.

Theory which set their tax-cutting plans awry is that a continued slump of commodity market prices would bring down the national income and tax receipts, thus rendering any major tax reduction perilous.

SOIL CONTROL: State or Federal?

One of the springtime battles now shaping up in congress will concern the issue of whether the national farm erosion program should be federally or state controlled.

Fireworks are scheduled to begin in March when the house agriculture committee opens hearings on a bill sponsored by Rep. Harry D. Cooley (Dem., N. C.) which would turn over the soil conservation program, operated by the agriculture department since 1935, to state land grant colleges.

Along with the transfer of authority would go about 10,500 department agents who administer the program in about 2,000 districts. That will provide a point of strong controversy, as will the measure's provision for federal grants to help states foot their soil-saving bills.

Pushing the switch from federal to state control most strongly is the national farm bureau, one of the most powerful lobbies in Washington, on the grounds that the soil conservation program would accomplish more under state authority.

The federal program has not been as effective as it should be so far, the farm bureau contends. But opponents of the transfer counter with the argument that the states lack experience to handle the project satisfactorily.

Currently operating under an annual budget of 39 million dollars, federal soil conservation service has 10,500 persons working with farmers, helping prepare conservation plans which the farmers may accept or reject.

So far it has prepared conservation plans for 476,128 farms covering 131,855,608 of the country's one billion acres of farm land.

AID BURDEN: Taft's Plank

Sen. Robert Taft, Ohio's G.O.P. aspirant to the White House, started off another campaign jog around the West by offering a thoroughly Republican message calculated to appeal to a large portion of the western voters.

The United States cannot allow its foreign aid program to jeopardize freedom at home, he said in Chicago, his first stopping place.

"We should not be actuated by purely altruistic desire to improve the condition of a lot of other people who have failed for centuries to do the job themselves.

TAFT

"We want peace and prosperity throughout the world to eliminate a threat to our own freedom, but it is certainly not worth while to adopt a foreign policy so burdensome on our own people that it will destroy at home the very freedom we are trying to protect."

There was expressed a major plank in Taft's campaign platform: Careful control of the foreign aid program in the pre-eminent light of how it may effect this nation's domestic economy.

Also, it was consistent with his activities in congress where he has been making that theory felt with regard to approval of the Marshall plan.

U. N. PLUM: To Europe

Decision on where the United Nations will hold its 1948 assembly meeting will mean that some European city will get a healthy, 50-million-dollar plum tossed in its lap.

Because the choice of a site for the coming meeting probably will involve that much money there is a considerable ferment of anxiety in the cities of Paris, Brussels, Geneva or the Hague, principal contenders for the honor.

Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary-general, just back from a tour of European cities, has made a factual report without actually recommending any one spot. He did, however, narrow the field down to those four cities.

The 57 member nations of the general assembly decided at last fall's session to hold the 1948 parley in Europe, possibly to get away from the scene of their erstwhile rather futile efforts.

SCIENCE STILL TRYING

Plague Struck 600 Years Ago

It was 600 years ago, in 1348, that the Black Death swept ravenously through Europe, killing about 25,000,000 persons, to take its place as one of the greatest calamities of all time.

Historians estimated that by the end of the century the Black Death —bubonic plague—had killed one-fourth of Europe's entire population. In China another 13,000,000 died in an outbreak of the disease at about the same time.

Even to this day the seeds of bubonic plague are scattered throughout the world. Since 1898 it is estimated that more than 12,000,000 persons have died of it in India.

Authorities don't know where or when the plague first began, but some say that epidemic disease mentioned in the Bible can be considered "true plague" and traced through history to 1320 B. C. It is believed to have started in lower Egypt, and in a few centuries "spread to the ends of the inhabitable world."

The black rat of Asia, which carries bubonic plague, probably was introduced into Europe by returning crusaders in the 12th century. They would have multiplied sufficiently to be noticed in Europe within a century, and history books say they appeared at that time.

It wasn't until around 1900 that it was definitely established that the black rat harbors the disease. The rat is bitten by a flea; the flea then bites a man and transmits the plague to him. In one form the disease even may be communicated between humans.

According to the U. S. health service, plague among rodents exists in many places in the world today, including a great part of this country. Outbreaks have occurred among human beings on the west coast, and rodent plague has been reported as far inland as Kansas. However, officials do not fear any outbreak of the Black Death in the United States.

Medical scientists recently have discovered that the sulfa drugs are valuable in treatment and believe that the new drug, streptomycin, may prove so also. New and more powerful flea and rat killers, including DDT and the poison R-1080, are proving extremely effective.

Have Baked Ham for a Social Supper.
(See recipes below.)

Feeding Fifty

If your club or church is planning a community social dinner for a get-together or for the purpose of making money, you'll appreciate these tested recipes. The recipes are bound to be tempting to most people, which is an important consideration for dinners of this type.

You'll need to do careful planning in both purchasing and preparing, or perhaps you can have a committee work out the donations so there will be more of a return on the dinner. Have your group discuss an able leader to insure a successful dinner. She should be thoroughly familiar with all the procedures of the menu, and should be able to divide and assign the work properly, as well as to iron out all sorts of details that come up.

Tableware should be checked in advance so there will be enough to go around. The same goes for kitchen equipment.

Men as well as women will like the menu for this community supper as it is appetizing and well balanced.

Baked Ham
Buttered Green Beans or Peas
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Cole Slaw
Apple Cranberry Sauce Relish
Rolls Jelly Butter
Pineapple Chiffon Cheese Cake

In addition to the items listed on the menu, you'll want to provide coffee, tea and milk as beverages. Here are the recipes for this dinner. They are carefully planned to serve 50 people.

Baked Ham.
(Serves 50)

14 pound smoked ham
4 cups brown sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
¼ cup cloves

Place ham (wrapped in heavy waxed paper or inside wrapper), fat side up in an uncovered roasting pan. Bake in a slow (350 degree) oven about 5½ hours. About an hour before ham is done, remove from oven, take off remaining skin and score fat surface. Mix brown sugar and mustard, add enough vinegar to make a paste. Spread paste over fat surface and stud with cloves. Return to oven and bake in a slow (325 degree) oven for about 45 minutes to glaze the surface.

Here are some other glazes which may be used. The amounts are sufficient to cover the surface of one ham:

ORANGE GLAZE: Mix one cup brown sugar, juice and grated rind of one orange and spread over fat surface. Garnish with orange slices when serving.

HONEY OR MOLASSES GLAZE: Use one cup honey or molasses and spread over ham; stud with cloves. Finish baking.

SPICE GLAZE: Use one cup brown sugar and one cup juice from spiced peaches, crabapples, ginger pears or pickled peaches. Garnish with the spiced fruit.

For the vegetable, green beans, you may use two No. 10 cans, season with one cup butter, salt and pepper. Heat thoroughly but be certain not to overcook.

Candied Sweet Potatoes.
(Serves 50)

2 No. 10 cans or 8 No. 2½ cans sweet potatoes
1 pound brown sugar
2 quarts bread crumbs
1 cup melted butter

Place sweet potatoes in a baking pan. Combine remaining ingredients and place over sweet potatoes. Bake in a moderate (350 degree) oven until heated through.

Cole Slaw.
(Serves 50)

1 pint mayonnaise
1 pint sour cream
1 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup sugar
7 quarts (6 pounds) cabbage, shredded fine

Blend the mayonnaise, sour cream and seasonings. Mix lightly with the cabbage.

Apple Cranberry Sauce Relish.
(Serves 50)

3 oranges
5 No. 2 cans apple sauce
3 1-pound cans cranberry sauce

Grind oranges and combine with apple sauce. Chill for several hours. Cut up cranberry sauce in cubes. Just before serving mix cranberry cubes with the apple sauce.

Pineapple Chiffon Cheese Cake.
(Serves 50)

3 cups sugar
3 pints syrup from pineapple and water
12 egg yolks
2 ounces (¼ cup) plain gelatin
3 No. 2½ cans crushed pineapple
4 pounds (2 quarts) sieved cottage cheese
¼ cup grated lemon rind
⅔ cup lemon juice
12 egg whites
1 teaspoon salt
1 quart heavy cream for whipping
2 quarts graham cracker crumbs or zwieback
1 pound butter, melted

Combine two cups sugar and two cups syrup with slightly beaten egg yolks. Cook over hot water until smooth and thickened, stirring constantly. Soften gelatin in remaining syrup for five minutes. Add to hot mixture and stir until dissolved. Chill until the mixture starts to congeal; add pineapple, cottage cheese, lemon rind and juice. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, salt and whipped cream. Combine crumbs with remaining sugar and butter. Line a pan with this mixture, saving about a third for the top. Pour in cheese mixture and top with remaining crumb mixture. Chill for several hours until firm.

When you serve whitefish or halibut, you'll find that cranberry sauce or jelly adds just the right note of tartness as well as color to the fish. Rice or noodle ring makes a nice platter when filled with leftover lamb or chicken creamed with peas and pimiento.

When you serve vegetable loaf, serve it along a sauce made of tomato soup and grated cheese.

A nice easy dessert consists of tapioca mixed with crushed pineapple, served with soft boiled custard.

Serve fish on a bed of watercress if you want it to look truly effective. The greens, of course, should be eaten.

If the family doesn't take kindly to liver, parboil it, chop and mix with egg, bread crumbs, chili sauce and seasonings. Make into patties and wrap in bacon. Bake in tomato sauce.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Stassen's Status

DESPITE the fact that GOP party bosses here completely ignore Minnesota's Harold Stassen and his Republican presidential aspirations, there is little question in the minds of objective observers that the young ex-governor is gaining ground with the masses of the voters.

Stassen represents what little liberalism there is in the Republican party. He is a logical successor to the role of Wendell Willkie who stampeded the 1940 convention and snatched the GOP nomination from under the noses of Taft and Dewey. Carroll Reece, GOP national chairman, and other party leaders, however, do not intend to let such a stampede happen in another convention. So despite the fact that Stassen is popular with the masses, particularly the younger element in the ranks of the Republican party, the odds here are that he never will be able to capture the nomination at Philadelphia next June.

STASSEN

So the word has gone out from the bosses to beat down any rising Stassen sentiment and for this reason many Republicans who believe in the Minnesotan likely will go some place else for the reason that no one likes to back a loser.

Indications are, however, that under certain circumstances probably even if Stassen can get some of his liberal planks in the GOP platform, he might accept the second spot on the ticket. As a result, it may be that he can force some of his progressive liberalism down the throats of the party bosses despite themselves. That is something which hasn't been done since the days of Theodore Roosevelt.

Congressman Fred Hartley of New Jersey, co-author of the Taft-Hartley labor law, says he is going to retire. So national attention is focused on Indiana's seventh district where Congressman Gerald Landis now is serving his fifth term. He would become chairman of the important house education and labor committee if Hartley retired. Democrats think they will beat Landis and are planning a major effort to take the district with the help of a large number of coal miners. Landis was elected by only about 3,700 votes in 1946. Both sides agree the outcome is doubtful.

Battle for Senate

One third of the members of the senate are elected this year. Your Home Town Reporter believes that regardless of which way the presidency goes, the Democrats may capture control of the senate.

Of the 32 senate seats at stake 18 are held by Republicans, 14 by Democrats. But 10 of the Democratic seats are in the solid South. Democrats likely will recapture senate seats in Kentucky, Oklahoma and West Virginia, may lose seats in Colorado and Montana.

They have a chance of regaining seats in New Jersey and Wyoming. It appears at worst they can't lose their present lineup of 45.

The St. Lawrence seaway is up again in congress. It has been before congress every session for 40 years. The same arguments for and against it are being used today that were used 40 years ago, with Midwestern senators and congressmen for the bill and the eastern seaboard and New Englanders against it.

Who's Speaking Now

Senator Taft of Ohio literally ripped to shreds President Truman's program of social reform. Taft says: "Taken together they will add up to national bankruptcy."

But Senator Taft is on record as favoring all these things. A housing bill, health bill and aid to education bill all bear his name. He also is for expansion of social security and raising minimum wages.

His speech reminds this reporter of old Sen. Jim Watson of Indiana, who was known as "the lovable old humbug" and who still is here in Washington. In a speech one night Watson said: "We are for everything the Democrats are for, only we Republicans can do them better."

Not Self-Important

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) is one of the most important men in the senate, but he was not too self-important to give an exclusive one-man committee hearing to a young man in search of world peace. After three hours of testimony, members of Vandenberg's foreign relations committee excused themselves one by one to go to lunch. Only Vandenberg remained to hear Richard Rosamond, 26, of Philadelphia, in his plea for peace.

Klemme School News

FRESHMAN NEWS

—By Margaret Buckley

We have started on a new six weeks period and we, hope to make it the best yet of the school year.

In Algebra we are working on a unit called, "Special Products and Factoring". It seems to be fairly easy for us.

We have been studying about "Solar Energy and our Weather" in General Science. Now we are studying the unit, "The Relation of Solar Energy to the Work of Plants".

In English we have been learning how to use pronouns properly in the different parts of the sentence. Several of us are having trouble with them, but I'm sure we can master them.

We are learning something new each day in Home Economics as we work on our different projects. Some have completed their second and are now on their third projects.

—KHS—

SOPHOMORE NEW

Reporter, Darlene Etchen

Six weeks tests are over and we are looking forward to getting our report cards. Happy Day ! ! ! Or will we be happy? ?

In English we are studying the different kinds of clauses which Mrs. Harvey explains to us and we understand. Or do we? ? ?

Circles seems to be the main topic in geometry, and everyone is going around with them. We are trying to start off this six weeks with better grades so Mr. Andreae won't have to use his red pencil, next six weeks.

In biology we are studying the different glands of the body which is very interesting. We should be prepared every day for a test even if it is with pencils and paper.

In Home Ec. the girls are making different things such as blouses, skirts, etc. The sewing goes very fast since we have new electric machines to sew with.

In Manual Training the boys are very busy completing there shelves, book cases, etc.

—KHS—

JUNIOR CLASS NEWS

—Reported by Donna Lu and Marjorie.

Another six weeks is past and tests are over, happy day!

Tuesday we had a class meeting to discuss our banquet, we decided on the place but not on the theme. We hope to start working on this soon.

A certain Junior boy who likes to sleep in Geography class was awakened by an eraser Wednesday. Mr. Patterson says he will have better aim next time.

We have been studying novelettes in Literature class, and learning the difference between them and novels.

Business letters are the main topics in typing, they are getting more difficult to most of us.

Government seems to stay about the same, Mr. Andreae trying to teach us something while we try to listen.

To-nite is the usual six weeks event of getting our report cards; we imagine every one will be satisfied, or will we?

Aren't Eggs Wonderful?

Not only are they delectable in the hundreds of ways they may be served, but the average egg is high in essential amino acids, and contributes iron, phosphorus, and the B. complex vitamins, along with some vitamin D. The egg at any price is a cheap article of food.

BUT—"Is An Egg An Egg?"

Dr. Bertha Bisbey, Professor of Home Economics, College of Agriculture, University of Missouri, reports a study recently made to determine the relationship between the ration of the hen and the nutritive value of the egg.

It was demonstrated that eggs are as variable as the ration of the hens producing them. The appearance of the egg is not an index to its quality. The public should be educated to an increased use of eggs in the family dietary and also to recognize the conception that "an egg is an egg" is true only if the birds producing the eggs are adequately fed and managed".

SCHOOL ELECTION BRINGS OUT LARGEST NUMBER OF VOTERS IN YEARS

V. A. Cook Elected Member Of County Board Of Education

Klemme's Independent School election held here Monday afternoon brought out the largest vote cast in many years and was perhaps a record vote. 182 ballots were cast for the four candidates on the ticket. Mrs. Fred J. Arnold received 99 votes; Everett Guth, farmer, received 93; Harvey E. Barz 68 and Mrs. Marvin Isvik, 88 votes.

Mrs. Fred J. Arnold and Everett Guth are both new members of the School Board, to replace Harvey Barz, president, who was running for re-election, and E. J. Thompson, whose term expired and who was not a candidate. Mrs. Fred J. Arnold becomes the first Klemme woman to be elected on the Board.

There was one spoiled ballot and a few scattered votes written in, but they had no bearing on the outcome of the election.

Dairy Herd Improvement Ass'n. Monthly News Report

The Hancock County Dairy Herd Improvement, John Ward, supervisor, reports for the month of February, 1948, 25 herds tested. There were 292 cows in milk, and 64 dry cows. Obituary Of Henry Carl Beier

Henry Carl Beier was born August 25, 1869, on a farm near Elkport, in Clayton County, Iowa, the oldest of a family of eight children born to his parents, William J. and Louise (Schlei) Beier.

In 1875, Wm. J. Beier Sr., Fred Schlei Sr., John Suckow Sr. and Henry Schwichtenberg Sr., who were Clayton County neighbors, came to Hancock County, and each contracted to buy a farm of 160 acres from Rudolph Fiegenbaum, who was the land agent. Land sold for from $1.25 to $3.50 per acre—no fences and no buildings.

In 1877, the Beier family moved to their Liberty Township farm, and built it up, little by little. This is the place where Elmer Beier now lives.

It was here that Henry Beier grew to manhood. He purchased and built up a farm two miles west of the home place, and on December 22, 1897, Henry C. Beier and Ida Lenz were married. This union was blessed with ten children. Tragedy came to this happy home in 1925 when Ida, the mother and home maker died.

Two years later Mr. Beier and his children moved to the Beltrami community.

Henry Beier was a member of the Liberty Methodist Church from the time the church was built.

We who knew Henry throughout the years that he lived near Klemme, will remember that he had a quiet and kindly disposition, was clean in his dealings. We will also remember that he loved to sing in quartette work, and had different offices in church and Sunday School.

Henry C. Beier had been ill for several months, and the end came suddenly Sunday P. M., February 29, 1948. His age was 78 years, 6 months and 4 days.

He leaves three sons: Carl of Beltrami, Minn.; Elmer of Liberty township; and Fred of Kanawha, Iowa. Seven daughters: Mrs. Dennis Leiran, Mrs. Ivel Hanson, and Mildred Beier of Beltrami, Minn.; Mrs. Wilbur Haefner, Liberty township; Mrs. Robt. Budlong, Titonka, Iowa; Mrs. Walter Kalm, Minneapolis, Minn; and Mrs. Clarence Cook, Kanawha, Iowa. Two brothers: Wm. Beier, Goodell, Iowa, and Emil Beier, Klemme, Iowa. Three sisters: Mrs. Wm. Kulper, Waterloo, Iowa; Miss Lydia Beier, Waterloo, Iowa, and Mrs. August Ridder, Leland, Iowa; also twenty-five grand children.

THE pink-haired gentleman with only a touch of gray in his thatch was watching one of his Olympic vaulters shooting at 14 feet. His name was Dean Cromwell, head coach of the U. S. Olympic track team for the year 1948—destination London.

Cromwell has been head track coach at Southern California since Charley Paddock was a kid and Fred Kelly was a hurdler. That means a long parade of years. The first query fired at head coach Cromwell was not too sensational: "How are we fixed for the next Olympic games?"

Gil Dodds

"All set," Cromwell said. He ought to know. He has turned out more Olympic winners in his day and time than any coach I ever ran across.

"I figure it this way," the head coach continued, "with thousands of American kids in training—kids and older men—with from 300 to 500 track coaches who are the best in the world, how can we lose? We've made a great showing in every Olympic so far. We should do the same in this one. We are better equipped than any other nation.

"Oh, we won't mop up. The Swedes will be tough at the mile or the 1,500 meters. The Finns will be tough at 5,000 and 10,000 meters. Here and there someone else will pick up a victory. But we have too much manpower, are too ably coached to lose out. The Swedes may need one or two of those 4.02 or 4.03 milers with the way Gil Dodds is running. We'll have some good sprinters, some good jumpers and pole vaulters, but I can't see any long-distance men now who can run with some Finns and Swedes who were running for 5 to 10 miles when they were mere youths only 10 years old.

"We don't have many athletes who like the grind of training for 5,000 or 10,000 meters. Most of them want the dashes, the hurdles or the half mile. We won't have any Jesse Owens around, but Mel Patton can travel a bit. It is bound to be a good team."

Picking the Team

Explaining the procedure for picking the team, Cromwell said the big showdown will come in the Intercollegiate games in Minneapolis and the A.A.U. game in Milwaukee, both championship tests.

"It has been suggested that we take the six best men for each event in the two meets—making 12 men all told," Cromwell added. "We won't need that many. In any event the winners in these two championships held in June will be the ones who get the call. It will be all aboard for London only for those who prove their place in these two big championships."

This should be simple enough. Hundreds of track coaches covering the vast athletic map of the United States soon will start getting their stars in shape.

The main idea will be to get the Olympic possibilities or probabilities ready for the Intercollegiate and the A.A.U. games.

"I don't know who the best men are today," Cromwell admitted. "Neither does any other coach. But they soon will be popping up all over the map—a few of them great, some of them good, others not so good. The East and the Midwest are strong. The South and the Southwest are far from weak. The world has been better off before, but these next games will be among the best we've had. Perhaps they can help create a better feeling."

Forty Years of Drouth

Probably the top running race of any track meet is the mile or the 1,500 meters. Here we have a combination that demands both speed and stamina, especially when you get down in the low four-minute class.

But how many know that it has been just 40 years since an entry from the United States ever won this major event in Olympic competition? The last American to finish in front was Mel Sheppard, in London, in 1908. Since that time the British, the Finns or some other foreign nation has taken over the job of mopping up in this long distance event.

Back in 1936, in the games at Berlin, we seemed to have a shining chance with Glenn Cunningham on the job. But Cunningham couldn't handle the fast flyer from New Zealand, who set a new Olympic record. This was Jack Lovelock, who ignored time and yet set a record. He ran only fast enough to win.

Cromwell has been looking for some time at our 40-year record at the mile or 1,500 meters. "I'd sure like to end that losing streak this summer," he said, "but the way those Swedes can cover the distance makes it tough. They've had two that broke 4.02 for the mile—Anderson and Hagg. That's too fast for us.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Red Cross Drive Seeks Funds To Wage Far-Flung Activities

Familiar Symbol Heartens Victims On Disaster Trail

WNU Features.

Disaster left widespread desolation, destruction and despair in its wake as tornadoes, floods, hurricanes and fires ravaged much of the nation during the past year. Beginning early in the year, the 1947 trail of destruction swept through the Texas-Oklahoma Panhandle where the worst tornadoes in 10 years struck in April, moved with the June floods through seven Midwestern and eastern states, caught the Gulf states with severe September hurricanes and floods and finally devastated wide areas of New England with forest fires in October.

During the year almost 11 million dollars was allocated by the American Red Cross to assist 305,000 persons. In terms of costs, 1947 was the peak year in disaster relief work for the past decade.

In an attempt to fill its depleted coffers and to assure funds for its wide-scale enterprises during the forthcoming year, the Red Cross will conduct its annual roll call campaign throughout the month of March.

Families living in agricultural communities last year bore the brunt of some of the worst disasters, it is noted in a summary by the Red Cross which showed nearly 300 calamities during 1947 in which the organization gave assistance.

Few Areas Spared.

Few sections of the country were spared in the disasters, which struck 46 states and Alaska. These included 142 fires, 50 floods, 41 tornadoes, 3 hurricanes, 21 other storms, 30 explosions, minor earthquakes, transportation wrecks and a number of other serious accidents.

Grimmest toll in casualities was taken in Texas City, Texas, where close to 500 lives were lost and more than 3,500 were injured. Disaster-caused deaths, up to December 1, totaled 1,266 on Red Cross records, approximately twice the disaster death toll of 1946. Altogether, 7,969 persons were injured.

In a year of continued acute housing shortages, more than 81,000 buildings, many of them farm homes and barns—were destroyed or damaged. In a year of international food shortages, hundreds of thousands of acres of America's most productive farmlands and richest pastures were either permanently ruined by erosion or made useless for the year by ravages of long-standing, severe floods.

On the job immediately after the tornadoes had struck, the Red Cross aided some 10,000 persons in the Woodward, Okla., area where two nearby rural communities, Glazier and Higgins, in the Texas Panhandle, were virtually leveled and scores of residential blocks of Woodward were devastated. Nurses, doctors and medical supplies were brought in to supplement local resources. Heaviest cost item was for rebuilding and repair in that relief operation in which approximately $1,323,000 in Red Cross funds were expended.

Floods Sweep Nation.

In Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska, four flood crests, in many localities record "highs," were reached in midsummer before the waters finally subsided. Red Cross operational costs exceeded $1,500,000 in aid to more than 26,000 flood-routed residents, many of them farmers. Thirteen thousand more residents were assisted by the Red Cross in sudden floods in Kentucky, New York and Vermont at that time, at a cost of $742,500.

Floods resulting from deluges that accompanied Florida's two hurricanes in September and October caused more damage than the hurricane winds which lashed four Gulf coast states. Cost estimate for this operation, which will not be concluded for months, now has reached $2,700,000.

The total destruction caused by forest fires, where few if any belongings can be salvaged or buildings repaired, was proved again in New England last October. In the fire-stricken areas, the Red Cross rehabilitation operation includes temporary housing for a large number of families inasmuch as rebuilding cannot be undertaken in Maine until spring. An emergency allocation of $1,000,000 for relief was made as the fires still raged and additional funds will be allotted as rebuilding operations get under way

In expediting emergency relief, and also in the longer rehabilitation operations during 1947, the Red Cross had the cooperation of the U. S. weather bureau, the armed services, local, state and federal authorities, and of hundreds of other organized groups and individuals.

Red Cross rehabilitation aid includes not only extended medical nursing care, and rebuilding and repair of homes; the organization also provides needed household furnishings, livestock, tools and equipment for farmers and craftsmen, and re-establishment of small businesses or other gainful occupations for families who have insufficient resources to get back on their feet again.

While disaster relief kept the Red Cross on the jump throughout the year, it was but one of the organization's many activities which affect every community throughout the country.

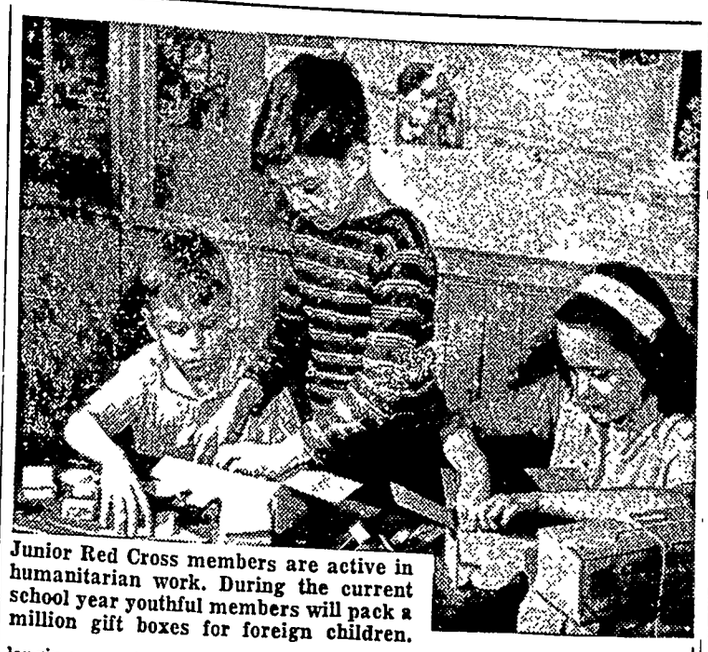
More than 275,000 Red Cross volunteers served a total of 25 million hours. Production workers made 2,565,200 garments and similar articles for use in relief and other activities at home and overseas. This was sufficient to supply one garment to every man, woman and child in the states of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, Arizona and Nevada, with enough left over to do the same in Alaska. Canteen workers served 3,145,000 persons, almost equal to the entire population of the city of Chicago. Motor service made 668,600 trips, traveling 8,800,000 miles, the equivalent of 352 trips around the world.

Volunteers Aid Afflicted.

Many of these Red Cross volunteers helped recognized community agencies perform their service tasks on behalf of the people. During the year they worked in hospitals, clinics, social welfare agencie, playgrounds, schools, correctional institutions, orphanages and homes for the blind, the aged and the infirm.

In recent years the Red Cross has expanded its efforts to make life in rural regions safer. An active first aid and accident prevention program, coupled with instruction in proper home care of the sick, are two forms in which these efforts are manifesting themselves.

At the close of 1947 almost 2,000 Red Cross highway first aid stations were being operated by men and women in many parts of the country. Good neighbors in deed as well as theory, operators of these stations often are called upon to play the good samaritan to those living in their communities, as well as to passing motorists who have the misfortune to suffer accident nearby.



Junior Red Cross members are active in humanitarian work. During the current school year youthful members will pack a million gift boxes for foreign children.

Reports from one station indicated that victims of 53 accidents had received first aid during the course of a year, less than half of them motorists.

Give Emergency Succor.

First aid stations are supplemented by mobile first aid units. Equipped with necessary materials, these cars and trucks frequently are the property of public utility concerns and other fleet owners. Drivers and crews, trained by the Red Cross, are prepared to give first aid in emergencies. Some 10,000 such units were in operation at year-end, each bearing a distinctive identification plaque.

Last year more than 118,000 persons, mostly women and older girls, completed Red Cross home nursing courses. Many of these classes were held in smaller communities and rural districts. In addition Red Cross public health nurses made 351,000 visits to persons needing their services.

As Red Cross workers performed these daily tasks, others were carrying out the organization's traditional responsibilities to the armed forces, veterans and their families. Stationed at military and naval posts and hospitals at home and overseas are professional Red Cross workers with an understanding of human nature and a knack of helping solve the most intricate of personal problems.

Link With Soldiers.

With the Red Cross chapter home service workers, these field directors form an emergency link of communication between those in service and their loved ones at home. Just how this works was illustrated when a Red Cross field director who was on maneuvers received word from chapter home service workers that the mother of a soldier in his outfit was seriously ill and the soldier was wanted at home.

On the strength of this Red Cross report, the man's commanding officer authorized emergency leave, and while a courier sped to locate the soldier, the Red Cross field director arranged his transportation. The soldier arrived home in time—not to see his mother die, but to save her life with a blood transfusion.

Red Cross hospital workers with the aid of home service workers obtain medical background histories at the request of medical authorities, they help in solution of personal problems of the hospitalized and assist in hospital recreation programs. At Veterans' administration hospitals, trained field directors help direct Red Cross volunteer programs on behalf of the more than 100,000 veterans now hospitalized. Red Cross claims service workers last year assisted veterans or their beneficiaries in preparation and filing of claims for government benefits to the number of 1,095,832 cases.

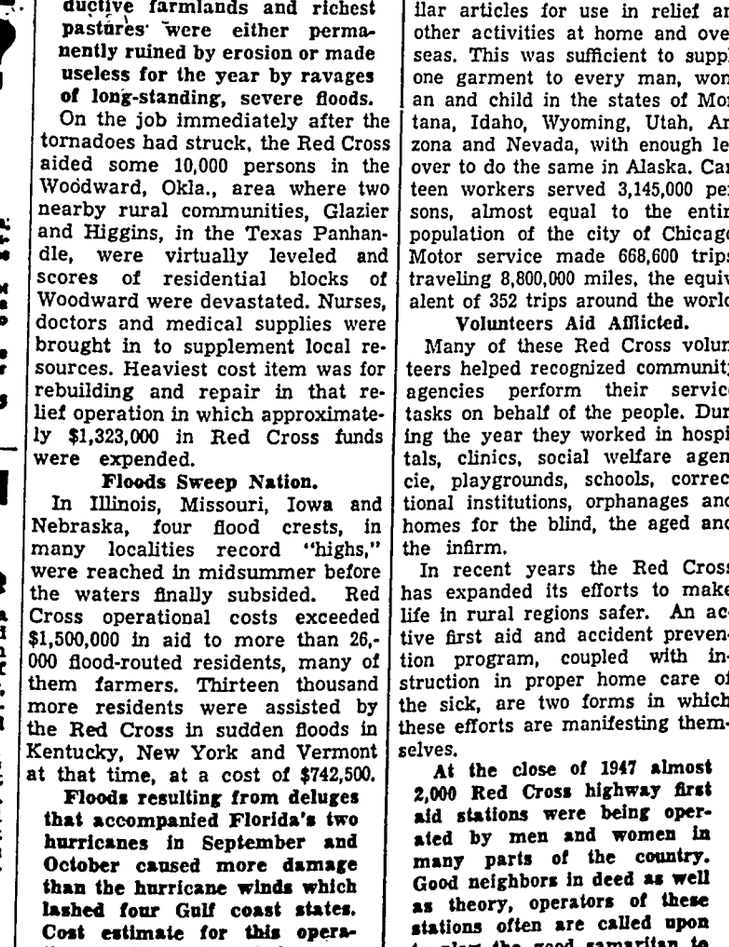
Program of Service.

Throughout March the American Red Cross is appealing to the people for funds with which to carry on its far-flung activities during the fiscal year 1948-49. A total of 75 million dollars is needed by the national organization and its 3,751 chapters.

As Basil O'Connor, Red Cross president said in announcing the 1948 fund appeal:

"The Red Cross exists only to serve. It lives up to tradition best by searching out new ways to be of service, new trails to blaze, new ways to improve the welfare of our communities and of our nation. It is a program that the Red Cross can offer the American people with confidence and pride."

Men often enroll in Red Cross home nursing classes. Here a Red Cross instructor shows a new father some of the latest tricks.



Prolific Writer Pens Letters by the Yard

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—A prolific writer is Clinton Reynolds, whose hobby is writing letters by the yard.

His latest tome covered 10½ feet of shelf paper 13 inches wide. He refilled his pen five times to author 3,000 words on subjects ranging from the bill of rights to a trip to Missouri. Writing time: 5 hours, 15 minutes.

But this is not the most verbose epistle composed by the prolific penman. Back in 1942, he got off an 18 footer to a brother in the service.

Reynolds buys shelf paper in 36 foot rolls to carry on his correspondence, which is just a hobby with him. He says everybody should write letters more often.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Mirror of Opinion

SPEAKER of the House Joe Martin recently told members of the American Small Business organizations meeting here that there was an "insidious campaign" to undermine the prestige of congress in the minds of the people. The canny New Englander, a newspaper publisher himself, resents criticism of congress. Speaker Martin has been in the public eye for many years, and we cannot believe that he is so complacent or naive as to believe that the 80th congress has not given grounds for honest criticism, even for abundant criticism.

The trouble with most politicians who grow old in the profession of politics, is that to disagree with them is to criticize . . . and that seems to be the basis of Speaker Martin's plaint. This writer believes that the one single group of men in the country who most accurately mirror the opinion and thought of the home towns of the country and rural America are the publishers of the weekly newspapers of the country.

MARTIN

So it is with deep interest we note that a poll of country editors by a trade magazine shows a large majority of the country editors favor 7 of the 10 major proposals made by President Truman to congress. On one of the 3 which they oppose, the sentiment is almost even.

The results: 65 per cent of the editors favor universal military training; 65 per cent approve a long range housing program including public housing for low income people; 54 per cent favor the $40 tax cut for each taxpayer; 61 per cent approve the Marshall plan and $6,800,000,000 outlay for the first year; 66 per cent favor extension and strengthening of rent control; 60 per cent approve extension of social security benefits; 80 per cent favor granting statehood to Hawaii and Alaska; 51 per cent oppose the President's civil rights program by law, but seem to approve it by education or other means; 74 per cent oppose a national prepaid health program, and 61 per cent oppose tacking the $40 individual tax cut onto the corporation taxes.

Surely Speaker Martin and the GOP majority in congress who oppose most of these proposals do not consider this attitude of rural editors a part of the "insidious campaign" against congress.

Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican national committee, wrote to Eugene Hensel, general counsel for the National Association of Farm Cooperatives, declaring that his party was proud of its long record of support for the cooperatives. The chairman's face must have been red indeed when the majority committee report of the house ways and means committee on Chairman Harold Knutson's $6,500,000,000 tax cut bill contained the statement that "small businesses are being bankrupted by competition of tax-free cooperatives." GOP members of the committee deny authorship and are seeking to pin it on Chairman Knutson himself.

Cushion for Depression

While many here both in and out of government are jittery over the break in prices, fearful of a depression, this reporter's opinion is that there never can be a depression comparable with the 1929-1930 crash.

The truth is, the administration is doing everything possible to stave off a recession until after election, and the Republicans are doing everything they can to bring it on before election.

But many economic and social reforms will serve as cushions to prevent a catastrophe such as happened 18 years ago.

The private power lobby continues to get its foot into the door of congress and whittle away at public power. Latest instance is on the Rockwell bill, HR 2873. As it came out of committee, the bill would modernize the reclamation law and encourage development of western resources. For two or three days it withstood amendments from the floor seeking to weaken the bill. All failed. Then majority leader Charles Halleck took a hand and the bill was recommitted. It came out mangled and mutilated. It increased power rates on public reclamation projects and deprived irrigation farmers benefit of financial aid from power revenues.

Housing Issue

Housing will be a hot issue in the presidential campaign. Congress is awaiting a six months study by a committee headed by Rep. Ralph Gamble of New York, due March 15. In the meantime plans are to grant a moratorium on rent control, which ends February 29, preparatory to ending all control. Housing expediter says rents will rise 50 per cent if controls are removed. Congressmen will feel effects in hotel bills at Philadelphia conventions

Use two dust-cloths instead of one—then both hands are being useful.

There'll be no soggy crust if you place the freshly baked pie on a wire rack to cool instead of on a flat surface. The rack of your broiler will do.

Fresh bread stays fresh longer if wrapped carefully and placed in your refrigerator. Do this to prevent early staleness.

White woolen toys may be cleaned by making a thick paste of dry starch and water. Rub into the toy and let it stand until dry; brush off starch.

For a subtle and refreshing fragrance, hang a pomander ball in your clothes closet. This is easy to make. Take a large, firm orange and stick whole cloves into the entire surface.

When sanding unfinished furniture for painting, sand thoroughly with fine sandpaper wrapped around a padded wood block.

You can mend the run in your sheer nylons if you catch the end loop of the knitting. The stitch must be held securely with thread. Use a mercerized cotton or silk mending thread for this operation. Run the needle in and out of the threads that form the run. Be sure the thread is fastened securely a little way from the end of the run to prevent its going any further.

White tea towels come from boiling them in a porcelain enameled sauce pan in which a few lemon peels have been added to the water.

To remove old paint or varnish from fine wood, place a wad of steel wool in a rubber crutch tip and rub lightly, being careful to avoid scratching. Then clean wood with turpentine.

Extension Agent Reviews 4-H Program

What Hancock County 4-H members will have to do this year to better the records set in 1947 were enumerated this week by Paul Henderson, the County Extension Director.

"As the nation observes National 4-H Club Week, it is well for us to take a moment to reflect on the past, to view the road we have traveled, and then to face forward and move up the road of progress," Henderson said

"Doing that in our 4-H program we find that there now are 320 girls and boys in Hancock County 4-H clubs in comparison with 270 for 1947. Our goal is to increase this number by 40 before April 1."

With the final date of enrollment in most boys' projects still open, it is not possible to make a comparison at this time Henderson pointed out.

Girls taking part in 4-H work last year studied Home Furnishings This year the girls are studying clothing, Miss Elsie Mae Van Wert, County Extension Economist, said, and their work will cover such things as clothing construction, color and design in dress, and good grooming.

An expanded program of activities for 4-H members also is in the picture for 1948, Henderson said. They include district camp at Clear Lake, Rally Day, Achievement Days, Banquet, tours, delegates to State Convention, and Short Courses.

Henderson said that 4-H week also is a time when we should acknowledge the help given by 4-H leaders and committee members who make the entire 4-H program possible. "The young people of this county are deeply indebted to the 50 persons who fill leadership posts," he said. "These leaders are serving voluntarily and giving a large amount of their time to the work. Their only reward is the success of the 4-H members with their projects and seeing them develop as useful citizens".

MORE BIG CATTLE IN FEEDLOTS NOW

Almost a Third Weighed More Than 900 Pounds At First of Year

Cattle in Corn Belt feedlots this winter are fewer—and also bigger. Sam H. Thompson, Iowa State College agricultural economist, says figures indicate that a larger proportion of cattle now on feed are weighing more than 900 pounds.

On January 1 this group totalled 31 percent, up three points from a year earlier.

Smaller Group

For the 600-900 pound group the percentage was 46, the same as last year. Of the cattle under 600 pounds, including calves, the percentage was 23, down three points from a year ago.

In Iowa, which had 27 percent of the Corn Belt total, 32 percent of the cattle on feed weighed 900 pounds or more, an increase of five points from last year.

With a drop of 25 percent in total number of cattle on feed, Iowa's reduction exceeded that of any other Corn Belt state.

Short-Term Feeding

Thompson noted that there is a continuation of the tendency begun last year toward short-term feeding. The number of feed cattle expected at the Corn Belt markets in the next few months is down considerably from then. But the number of top grade cattle is expected to be larger than the very small proportion of a year ago.

In spite of this short-term feeding, it appears that about 58 percent of the cattle now on feed will not be ready for the market until after the end of April.

Although the ice was 14 inches thick, a heavy seam which cracked sent the truck to the bottom. No one was aboard.

The co-op now has 752 miles of line and serves approximately 1,800 families. Thirty-two miles of line were added in 1947 and 77 new families hooked up. The average kilowatt increase during 1947 per member was from 152 to 207 kilowatt hours. Company trucks operated over a total of 55,524 miles and employes worked a total of 33,522 hours.

The co-op employs an office staff of 4 and 8 linemen. H. L. Bush is manager and Clarence Niemeyer head lineman. The organization has made a steady growth and ranks as one of the best in the state. Seven hundred fifty stockholders attended the annual meeting, the largest crowd ever to attend the annual meeting of this group.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Seventy-eight men from all nine Districts of the Winnebago Council, Boy Scouts of America, were in attendance at the first quarterly meeting of the area board. The meeting, which was held in Mason on Thursday evening, February 26 was the Annual Chapter Review of the Council. Mr. Earle K. Behrend, Deputy Regional Scout Executive from Kansas City was here to help conduct the Review. The report showed that in most parts of the program the Council did a fine job. However, several weak spots were sighted and steps were made to improve the situation in 1948. Mr. Behrend pointed out the fact that the "Open the Door" program now in operaion in the Council will go a long ways toward bringing a better program to more boys. He stated "throughout the years this Council has done an excellent job, and it is expected that at some time you would level off. You have seen this and have taken steps to meet the situation." The Board went on record as being in favor of putting on a third Field Executive, and the Council President was authorized to appoint a selection committee.

Judge W. P. Butler of Mason City was appointed Chairman of a committee to revise and bring up to date the Constitution and By-Laws of the Council. Carl Dwyer of Mason City was appointed Chairman of a committee to prepare a personnel policy for the Council.

Prior to the Council meeting, all the Council operating committees met for supper meetings. Report of the meetings were given, showing that the 1948 Camp plans are now well under way, the "Friends of Scouting" Campaigns are not yet complete, that the training program, advancement program and the health and safety programs are also well set up. The organization committee has now launched a very effective" Open the Door for a Thousand More," program.

Scout Executive James W. Norfolk stated "this meeting is an example of why the Council grows, with the volunteer manpower here who are keenly interested to see that boys get Scouting.

Men attending from Hancock County were E. H. Phillips, Kenneth Juhl, Curtis Riehm, Bud Pritchard, Garner; H. J. Johnson, Kanawha; Lowell Brooks, Britt; and L. J. Bonstetter of Corwith.

Make Your MOLDBOARD PLOW CUT AND COVER TRASH with the LANTZ REG. U. S. PAT. OFF. KUTTER KOLTER

Saves time, work, and increases crop yield. Helps the moldboard plow to cut and cover trash, cover crops, heavy stubble and hybrid corn roots. Saves going over field with disc harrow or stalk cutter. Turns trash into fertilizer.

HELPS FIGHT CORN BORER

Corn Borers spend the winter as a caterpillar in the stubble and root crown of corn. The most successful method of fighting them is to plow under all stalks and stubble. The Kutter-Kolter does a "clean job" of it.

The Kutter-Kolter is easily adapted to any American-made tractor-drawn moldboard plow. Thousands in use prove their value.

Ben's Bride Gets Chickenhearted

Ben Ryder was mighty proud of his young bride when she offered to care for his new flock of baby chicks. "Just like a mother with her brood," he boasts.

Then came market time for fryers—and the crisis! Sue simply wouldn't let Ben near her chickens with an axe. She'd raised them as babes ... she'd named them ... they were her very own!

Ben poured himself a glass of beer, to think things over sensibly. He hated to lose the price on fryers ... but he figured Sue had put up with his peculiarities, he guessed he could put up with her fondness for the chickens.

So now Ben has the nicest brood of laying hens in town, and from where I sit, one of the most successful marriages, too. All because he "lived-and-let-live"—literally. And whenever he wants fried chicken, he takes his bride over to Andy's Garden Tavern for a crisp wing and a glass of beer.

We have been making scrap books to show the effects of the Industrial Revolution in our country.

SOPHOMORE CLASS NEWS
—Reporter, Don Finders

Well, I guess most of us have recovered from our report cards and are settled down to work again.

In English class we have been writing business letters. Some of us have been feebly trying to write an essay or short story in Literature, but not many succeeded in finishing. However, some fine original stories have been turned out.

Geometry has been rolling along as usual for we are still studying circles.

Mrs. Andrae is still popping those tough Biology tests at us, nearly every day. I wonder how long she stays awake at night thinking up those tough questions. We're starting the chapter of responses now. We are trying to find out why we do some of the things we do.

The Home Economics class are still making dresses and skirts.

The Manual Training boys are making peculiar objects. These peculiar objects happen to be, "little wood skunks" which are going to be used for lawn ornaments.

JUNIOR CLASS NEWS
—By Alice and Madeline

We Juniors seem to be getting plenty of surprises lately, report cards, tests and otherwise. We had another quiz this morning in Government class.

The typing class has been so busy typing that no one noticed how liberal he was being with paper, so now we face a shortage. If we aren't careful we'll have to use our imagination to type on instead of paper, and that isn't much. We are supposed to type a perfect letter, but that seems impossible.

In Literature we have been studying the form, history and development of the American novel. We have studied selections from the early writings of Cooper, Howthorne and Mark Twain, and modern writings of Sinclair Lewis and Mary Ellen chase.

In geography we have been studying about natural resources.

SCIENCE IN SURGERY

Complicated Device Photographs Perfect Camera—The Human Eye

Most people understand how the X-ray is used by the medical profession, and many have heard that photography is being used in the medical field. However, it is difficult for the average person to visualize just how photography can be used to advantage in medicine.

A visit to the New York Eye and Ear infirmary, the oldest specialized hospital in the western hemisphere, where people from all walks of life have been treated for more than a century in its numerous eye, ear, nose and throat clinics demonstrates the value of the technique. This hospital is staffed by the great and near-great in the fields of ophthalmology and otolaryngology. Surgeons with Park avenue practices come daily to diagnose and treat the 35,000 people who pass through its clinics each year.

Here medical photography has become a recognized and established service in the treatment of many eye diseases.

Explains Techniques.

This department was organized and is run by Mary R. Brown, one of the few women in this country who specialize in the field of ophthalmic photography. She is a pretty, quiet woman whose own son is just completing his medical education. Mrs. Brown explained some of the scientific techniques she uses daily in her diagnostic research and medical record work for surgeons at the New York Eye and Ear infirmary.

In addition to the small and delicate cameras that photograph the outer sections of the eye, there is the Fundus camera used for photographing the retina of the eye—the area deep within the eye itself. This complicated camera uses the lens of the patient's eye as part of its optical system and the resulting pictures are in color. They have great diagnostic value; the surgeon's decision depends many times on these true-to-life photographs.

Mrs. Brown relates that, "Only recently, a young lad who had his eye hurt playing basketball was brought into the hospital. A growth had formed on the retina and retinal pictures were ordered. These were airmailed to a famous eye specialist in England to corroborate our own surgeon's diagnosis. With nothing but these colored slides, magnified and thrown on a screen, he recommended preserving the eye, as our own men did. In time, the growth went away, just as the specialist said it would, and today this boy has his sight."

Recalls War Case.

"Back in November 1945," Mrs. Brown recalls, "a young G.I. bride, whose husband was still in the South Pacific, was brought in for photographs. Her record, when she entered the hospital, stated that a tumorous growth, thought to be malignant, had formed in the iris of the right eye and therefore the eye should be removed. The surgeon in charge at the New York Eye and Ear infirmary was not in full accord with this diagnosis and did not feel that this patient should lose an eye without further study. He ordered photographs taken of the condition every month, carefully measuring the size and comparing with the previous plates. At the end of a year the growth had not expanded in any direction, these measurements proved. During the following year pictures were taken every two months and careful checks were made against the first plates. It has been fully determined, up to the present time, that the growth is not malignant, and this grateful young woman still has her eye today."

Movies taken in color and used for teaching purposes are a part of Mrs. Brown's daily work. These films of rare and delicate operations performed at the infirmary are being used to guide and teach a new generation of eye surgeons throughout the Americas and as far away as India and the Philippines. In addition to routine work, classes in medical photography are conducted for graduate students in ophthalmology. Thus the young specialists who train here can take with them to the small communities throughout the country a knowledge of ophthalmic photography that will help them trace the progress of eye diseases and their treatments, thus many times saving the sight of an eye otherwise lost.

No Track or Train But Railroad Pays Regular Dividends

ADRIAN, MICH. — Although it hasn't operated a train or collected a fare for nearly a century, the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad again is making its semi-annual payment to stockholders.

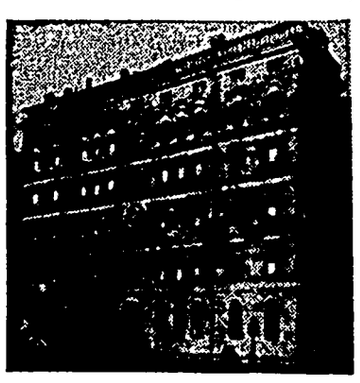
Now forgotten by all except historians and its fourth and fifth generation stockholders, the Erie and Kalamazoo ranked as the oldest railroad west of Schenectady, N. Y.

Although the railroad has long been inoperative, it derives a regular income from lease of its original right-of-way to the New York Central railroad. The present dividend amounts to $9,000 after deductions for taxes and expenses. Last year the E. and K. paid $19,500 in dividends.

Incorporated by the Michigan territorial legislature on April 22, 1833, the E. and K. was capitalized for $1,000,000 but only $300,000 in stock was issued.

It originally was authorized to operate between Lake Erie and "the navigable waters of the Kalamazoo river," but it was destined to run only between Port Lawrence (now Toledo, Ohio, but then part of Michigan) and Adrian, a distance of 35 miles.

By 1836 track had been laid from Port Lawrence to Adrian and the first horse-drawn train clattered over the wooden rails in October.



HAVEN FOR AFFLICTED . . . The New York Eye and Ear infirmary, where Mrs. Brown helps guide surgeon's hands and scalpels with her photographic technique, is the oldest hospital of its kind in the western hemisphere. Founded in 1820, it ranks as the third oldest hospital in the City of New York.

Oklahoma Boasts Self-Supporting Capitol

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—One of Oklahoma's proudest boasts is that it has probably the only self-supporting state capitol in the world, one that even pays a bonus now and then.

While other states have to settle for the oratory, Oklahoma finds its coffers enriched by black gold. In the 13 years since the oil wells were drilled on the capitol grounds by order of E. W. Marland, former governor, the state has profited to the extent of $5,619,945.

The wells were drilled over bitter protests from residents of the swank Lincoln Terrace neighborhood nearby. Drilling oil wells is about the messiest job ever, they contended, besides representing a fire hazard. They quoted a city zoning ordinance to show Marland couldn't do it. The governor said he'd like to see someone stop him.

Seers Silent on Commodity Trend

Myth of Current Price Dip: 'Truman Planned That Way'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—It is still open season for economists, financial experts and market wizards. It took about a week after the first drop on the commodity market to send them into their holes. Up to that time, you could get a prognostication anywhere from the Chicago stockyards to Broad and Wall streets or Pennsylvania avenue and 15th street.

But along about the sixth day of the dip, anybody who would tell you whether we were facing a permanent nose-dive or just weathering the flutter of a few yards of ticker tape was as rare as a vote against tax-reduction (that issue, itself, had changed after the sixth dip).

The reason no expert would talk was that all of them had been making wrong predictions ever since Coolidge's permanent plateau of prosperity of pre-depression days or Hoover's corner around which prosperity was always ducking.

Baukhage

The most silent man in Washington was Secretary of the Treasury Snyder. He knew that too many people remembered what he and others had said two years ago last fall. Snyder, at that time reconversion director, had predicted that by the spring of the next year (1946) eight million people would be unemployed. In fact, so many others believed that that Henry Wallace, already dreaming of a home with white pillars on Pennsylvania avenue, decided to make "Sixty Million Jobs" a come-hither plank in his platform. He wrote a book with that title and it became a best seller. His book set a goal of 56,500,000 to 57,500,000 civilians employed by 1950.

But somebody must have stolen the idea or else they wanted to play a mean trick on Wallace—and on Snyder—anyhow there were 57,149,000 persons employed in this country as of January, 1948 — two years early, and 10 months before presidential campaign time.

Likewise, in October of 1946, several astute Washington inside-stuff letter writers were saying privately to their thousands of clients, and the AFL monthly survey was saying in public print, that by early 1947 prices would come down. One could say on January of 1947, with considerable accuracy, that there was a general agreement on recession beginning soon and followed by more a little later.

Other writers predicted it a little later, and some, by summer, were insisting that deflation already was here.

But what happened? In the very year of that doleful prophecy, prices started on the upshoot that took them into their all-time high.

Many other similar bad guesses might be mentioned, all of which contributed toward making the prophets reticent, and so when the slide came in February of this year, nobody would even whisper "fox" for fear that not even a kit would appear. They knew that nobody would believe them after all the without-the-wolf-wolfing that had been going on.

In any case, this dip, drop, depression or delusion, whichever it turns out to be by the time these lines reach print, or later, will have its garland of myths and legends entwined about it.

The best myth, of course, is that Mr. Truman "planned it that way."

The blueprint is simple enough if you are good at reading a blueprint between the lines. Prices were getting too high. At worst, they might bring on a real depression before election; at best, they would bring a series of strikes and work stoppages which might seriously hamper the Marshall plan on the one hand, and add to the discontent of the voters on the other. It would be like any operation, not dangerous from the surgeon's point of view. Just a little amputation of credit, at least so said doctors who work on the body economic, which would let enough blood out of some businesses to cause a little unemployment. Enough to scare off strikes and make businessmen a little more cautious about expansion.

There was some evidence that this may really have been intended because the President did ask in his November 17 message to congress for credit controls and increased bank reserves. However, when congress said "humph" to that along with the President's other recommendations, he turned around and demoted the man who is said to have written the deflation prescription from the chairmanship of the federal reserve board (Marriner Eccles), and put in a man supposed to have more sympathy with an opposite course.

However we mustn't spoil a good story by facts. There are other points which can be introduced to give a touch of verisimilitude to an otherwise not-too-convincing narrative. The soothsayers say that several methods were pursued, some of them successfully. For example, the President slam-banged at what he called the "gamblers" in commodities who were driving up food prices by speculating in grain and other futures.

That did open a Pandora's box, and some of the plagues released alighted on the very rooftree of the White House. But it also threw a scare into the marketeers and the markets.

Then came the day of a White House press and radio conference when the President made a remark—credited at the time by some of his friends as an unhappy slip—when he said that if the cost of living was not controlled, there would be a crash. That got headlines, frightened a lot of little fellows who pulled out their chips, and, combining with other evil Jinns released from the economists' Jinn bottles, did the trick.

There are many others of these tales which will grow, such as the creating of sun-spots by the administration's atomic-energy experts. But one is enough for the moment.

Anyhow "it was planned that way!"

Taft-Hartley Issue Losing Its Potency

There has been a lot of noise over the Taft-Hartley act lately, and on the surface it looks as if the law might become an issue in the presidential campaign. If that should happen, it certainly would help the prestige of Senator Taft. But the old-timers say it can't happen.

As you know, last autumn, right after the act went into effect, a lot of people felt its provisions would decide the votes in the bye-elections. But those elections came and went, and it was hard to adduce any statistics to prove that T-H had figured very much, if at all.

Later on, animosity against the law died down. But now both the CIO and AFL have announced their preliminary plans for campaigning against the men who voted for it; Taft has used it in his campaign speeches in Midwest centers where labor is strong; Philip Murray was indicted under its provisions, and both Murray, representing the CIO, and the International Typographers' union have charged it is unconstitutional. But the issue still fails to command any real dramatic interest.

This is another proof of how a controversial issue that calls forth bitter debate and stirs up nationwide interest at the moment, can fade into the background as time passes, and by election day have little or no effect on votes.

It is much like a fire that makes Page 1 because it breaks out just as an edition of an afternoon paper is going to press. It may get a banner on Page 1 if the news is light, but by the next edition, it may have shrunk to a single head on an inside page. Recency expands the importance of all events. You may recount excitedly at dinner how you almost got hit by a truck on the way to work. But by tomorrow night, you'll be telling with much more gusto about a fish you caught last summer.

Aid for China Asked; Senate OKs Budget Cut

Although it was obvious that his heart wasn't in it, President Truman presented congress with a request for 570 million dollars to be sent to China as a prop for the foundering economy of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government.

White House and state department sources admitted that the request was something less than a half-measure and claimed that the President had acted under pressure from the Republican congress which has insisted that the U. S. must support Chiang against the Communist revolution in connection with the European recovery plan.

At best the 570 million dollars is a token gesture—just a chip in relation to the vast amount of timber that would be needed to restore the rotting derelict of Chiang's government.

Theory behind this latest extension of aid, which will be used to finance Chinese imports of cereals, petroleum, coal, fertilizer and so forth, is that the money will enable Chiang's government to free other resources for purchase of arms and ammunition to continue the fight against the Communist guerrillas.

But that is more of an idle hope than a valid theory, because the government forces, despite their American arms and equipment, are being bested consistently by the Communists.

BUDGET CUT: Indifferent

With little discussion and a good deal of outright indifference, the senate adopted a resolution to cut President Truman's fiscal 1949 budget by 2.5 billion dollars.

How much significance the senate resolution would have in the final analysis was questionable, in view of prevailing uncertainties which might affect both sides of the ledger.

The 2.5-billion-dollar reduction would leave an estimated 10 billion dollars for tax cuts and debt reduction. Republicans, therefore, were feeling increasingly confident that an income tax slash of up to 5 billion dollars could be enacted.

Brevity of the senate discussion and its lack of apoplectic oratory was in direct contrast to last year's strident contest over the budget committee's recommendation of a 6-billion-dollar cut in the 1948 budget.

Democrats made no effort to block the proposed spending slash which had been recommended by the house-senate budget committee. It still requires house adoption.

Biggest bug in the senate's budget recommendation was the fact that it probably embodied a number of inaccurate estimates. Republican sponsors of the measure admitted that accurate estimates of budget needs were impossible at the time.

Sen. Styles Bridges (Rep., N. H.), chairman of the budget committee, compared the estimates with "a pre-game guess at the final score." But Sen. Alben Barkley (Dem., Ky.) called the procedure "a step in the dark."

IRELAND: New Premier

Even to members of the Eire assembly who had helped defeat him it was strange to see Eamon De Valera, premier of Ireland for 16 years, sitting quietly on the opposite side of the house as leader of the opposition.

In his place as premier was John A. Costello, former attorney general, whom the assembly had voted into office after a new six-party coalition had taken control of the legislative group as a result of the previous elections.

Costello, in a dignified speech to the assembly, explained his sudden emergence as premier of Ireland: "I consented to this nomination at the request of a number of parties who felt that the interest of the country required that there should be an inter-party government and that the premier of that government should occupy a position in political life detached from the controversial bitterness of the past."

The "inter-party government" whose choice Costello was is compounded of six political parties of apparently divergent ideals: Republican, United Ireland, Labor, National Labor, Independent and Farmers.

Just how long a government made up of so many diverse components would last was the subject of much speculation in Ireland. In their present cooperative mood the parties of the coalition may carry on for a year or two, but few were prepared to give the government a much longer span of life.

CAT FEET: First a Dream

Like the fog that "comes on little cat feet," Carl Sandburg, honored and honorable free-verse poet and voluminous biographer of Lincoln, was creeping into the senatorial race in Illinois.

A hitherto almost imperceptible drive supporting Sandburg as a possible candidate for senator picked up considerable impetus with the release of a public opinion poll indicating that he might become a popular choice over the Democratic candidate, Paul H. Douglas, and the Republican candidate, Sen. C. Wayland Brooks.

SANDBURG

As far as the question of how a poet can turn into a politician is concerned, those favoring him say he is a "good man," he understands the common people and is educated and well-informed about the country's needs. The opposition claims he is politically inexperienced and, since he is a writer, is an impractical dreamer and an idealist.

But Sandburg, the poet, once wrote:

"The republic is a dream.
Nothing happens unless first a dream.'

TUNE IN TOMORROW

Soap Operas Benefit Society

Relax, ladies. Don't feel guilty about listening to the great and grievous trials of "John's Other Schmoe" every day at 11:15 a. m., brought to you through the courtesy of Philbottom's Ossified Sheep Dip.

The news is now out that soap operas, as presented interminably on the radio, actually might do you some downright good.

An anthropologist, Prof. W. Lloyd Warner, and a psychologist, Dr. William E. Henry, tuned in on a daytime radio serial over a long period and arrived at the ponderous solution that soap operas are "of considerable value to our society."

The two scholars, consultants for a research organization which directed the study for Columbia Broadcasting system, based their report on a detailed analysis of the serialized drama, "Big Sister."

Women being the chief listeners, it is they who derive the greatest benefits from these daytime dirges by having their egos bolstered and their spirits strengthened by hearing stories of fictional women going through problems and experiences that parallel their own, the scientists pointed out.

"The basic and primary theme is that good and noble women who are wives and mothers are invincible within their own arena of life, the American family," said the report.

"Men, who are superordinate elsewhere, are subordinate and dependent (in the story) on the wisdom of the wife. This primary theme always triumphs over the second theme which runs counter to it—that family ties can be broken and a woman's security threatened chiefly by the loss of the husband to other women, and, quite secondarily and obliquely, by death."

Moreover, the social scientists said, the program, among other things, provides its women listeners with "moral beliefs, values and techniques for solving emotional and interpersonal problems — and makes them feel they are learning while they listen."

In brief, the report added up to a clear-cut spiritual and moral victory of the soap opera over its hardened and blase critics.

Healthful Breakfast Will Appeal to Family If Menus Are Varied

All those in favor of bacon and eggs have the right idea for there's no denying the importance of a substantial breakfast. In addition to bacon and eggs, the pattern should include fruit or fruit juice, toast, butter and a beverage.

You can't expect a first-class health rating if you skip breakfast frequently. And you can't do your best work, be you business man, farmer, housewife, career girl or school child, if mid-morning hunger pains bother you.

The remedy? A well-rounded breakfast that gives you foods essential for health.

You say you can't eat breakfast? Nonsense. Of course, if you're one of those skip-breakfast people, it may take you a little time to get used to eating it, but little by little you can do it and really like it. It's worth it, if you feel better and can work better, isn't it?

Afraid of gaining weight, you say? No, not if breakfast includes a citrus fruit, soft boiled or poached egg, dry toast and coffee or tea without cream or sugar. You won't have nearly as hard a time resisting the snacks which put on weight if you're fortified with a nicely balanced breakfast.

We have variety in lunches and dinners, why not plan to have it in breakfasts? It will make them ever so much more interesting.

Prepare eggs in several different styles, scrambled, poached, soft boiled, coddled, fried, baked or creamed. Have interesting breads and spreads.

Don't forget that meats add variety, too. Try sliced or frizzled ham as well as bacon, sausage, canadian bacon or dried beef.

Then, too, you can find interesting variations for pancakes and waffles. Why not this:

Bran Griddle Cakes.
(Makes 15 cakes, 5½ inches in diameter)

- 2 eggs
- ¼ cup sugar
- 2¼ cups milk
- 3 cups sifted flour
- 2 tablespoons baking powder
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ⅓ cup melted shortening
- ½ cup bran

Beat eggs and sugar until light and fluffy. Add milk and mix well. Sift flour with baking powder and salt; add to first mixture, stirring until flour disappears. Add shortening. Fold in bran. Bake on a hot griddle, turning only once.

You'll find that Dutch pancakes will do a nice filling job during breakfast, as well as contributing the valuable protein of eggs for this meal.

Dutch Pancakes.
(Serves 4)

- 4 eggs
- ½ cup sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons soft butter
- Confectioners' sugar
- Jam

Beat eggs thoroughly. Sift flour and salt together and add to eggs alternately with milk to make a smooth batter. Spread butter over bottom and sides of cold frying pan. Pour in batter and place in a hot (400 degree) oven. Bake 20 to 25 minutes, reducing heat gradually to moderate (350 degrees) during the baking. Pancakes should puff up at the sides and be crisp and brown. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and spread with jam. Roll like an omelet and serve immediately from a hot platter.

Eggs and Pork Sausage.
(Serves 6)

- ½ pound bulk pork sausage
- 3 cups dry cubed bread
- 6 eggs, beaten
- 6 tablespoons milk
- ½ cup grated cheese

Saute sausage in skillet until well browned. Pour off most of the fat, then add bread cubes and brown. Combine eggs, milk and cheese and add to sausage mixture. Cook like scrambled eggs. Serve at once.

Shirred Eggs and Sausages.
(Serves 6)

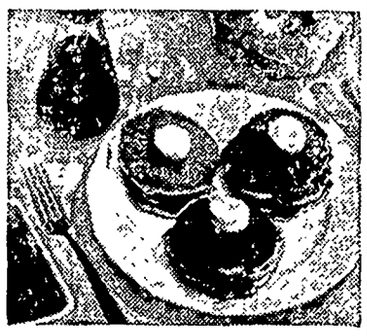
- 6 link sausages
- 1 cup catsup
- 6 eggs

Cut sausages into one-inch pieces and brown lightly. Place in a shallow baking dish and cover with catsup. Break eggs over catsup and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 15 minutes.

Sour Cream Coffee Rolls.

- 2 cups milk
- 1 cup sour cream
- ¾ cup shortening
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup sugar
- 4 beaten eggs
- 2 cakes yeast
- ¼ cup warm water
- 13 cups flour

Scald milk and cream. Add shortening, salt and sugar, then cool. Add the eggs and the yeast which has been softened in lukewarm water. Add the flour to make a stiff dough. Blend well. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down. Cover the bottom of large muffin tins with ½-inch thick pieces of dough. Cover with filling and place another piece of dough on top. This may be baked as a coffee loaf in the same manner, covering the bottom of a loaf tin with dough, putting on the filling and covering with another piece of dough. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake rolls in a hot oven 25 minutes. For bread, use a hot oven for 10 minutes, then reduce to moderate for 40 minutes.



Hardly anyone can resist piping hot pancakes with butter and syrup for breakfast. For those with substantial appetites and large caloric needs, serve pancakes often. Or, use them to add variety to the breakfast pattern.

Filling.

- 1 cup cooked, chopped prunes
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup chopped nuts
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ⅓ cup raisins

Mix together thoroughly.

The sour cream coffee dough will make three loaves of bread and several dozen rolls.

Banana Sour Cream Bread.
(Makes 1 large loaf)

- ¼ cup thick sour cream
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 1½ cups mashed banana
- 1 cup bran
- 1½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon soda

Blend the first four ingredients. Add, sifted together, the dry ingredients. Place in a greased loaf pan and let stand 20 minutes. Bake in a moderate (350 degree) oven for about one hour. Make this the day before, and toast for breakfast. It's delicious.

LYNN SAYS:

Remember These Facts About Yeast Breads

Rising time on bread or rolls usually follows this pattern: Dough made with one cake of yeast and two cups of liquid will take three hours to rise. Each subsequent rising takes less time.

Rising may be hastened by using more yeast. However, not more than two cakes of yeast should be used in the average recipe for fear of giving too much yeast flavor.

Sugar is yeast food and it also gives flavor to bread. Too large amounts retard the yeast growth.

Sour, heavy bread is caused by too high temperature during the rising time.

Crisp crusts on bread are made by brushing the top with slightly beaten egg white 10 minutes before the baking. This also will give a browner crust.

Soft crusts can be achieved by brushing with melted fat just before baking.

Christian Character

Lesson for March 14, 1948

WHO is the most valuable person in your community? In many communities it has come to be the custom to select the Man of the Year or the Woman of the Year, the idea usually being to name the person, through a process of sampling of public opinion, who has rendered the outstanding service of the year.

Dr. Newton

Sunday's lesson is a dramatic scene out of the long ago, picturing a community's tribute to a truly great man, the apostle Paul. Read Acts 20:17-38, and you will have the story.

LOVED AND HONORED

THE first impression I get from this story is the fact that these people of Ephesus loved Paul. They loved him enough to lay aside their work and hasten to the nearby seaport of Miletus to see him for the last time, and to bow down in his presence and honor him.

Why did they thus love Paul? Because he had told them about God. You need but read again the record of Paul's ministry in that important city of Ephesus to be reminded of how greatly he had served them in the name of Jesus.

Loved and honored! What a tribute to the worth of Christian character! Wouldn't you appreciate the tribute which they paid Paul as the goal out yonder to which you strive? Boys and girls of today may thus be honored tomorrow, if they will live for Jesus as Paul did.

THE POWER OF RIGHT LIVING

PAUL not only told the Ephesians how to live, but illustrated day by day in his own life what he preached to them. The most eloquent sermons are not spoken, but lived. "What you are speaks so loudly I can't hear what you say."

The boy and man who plays the game straight are putting into practice what the teacher and preacher proclaims on Sunday. The power of right living will win its way today, just as it did in the long ago when Paul witnessed for Jesus in Ephesus.

It was not easy to live for Christ in Ephesus, nor is it easy to live for him in Chicago or Los Angeles or Boston or Miami, but it is the one way to ultimately impress the world of the reality of Christianity.

PAUL'S CONSUMING PASSION

WE ARE what we are becoming, and never was this axiom of life more powerfully illustrated than in the case of Paul. "I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus," Philippians 3:14. And in Ephesians 5:6-21, Paul reviews the qualities of conduct which produce worthwhile character, admonishing all Christians to strive for these qualities.

"I live, yet not I, Christ liveth in me," is another of Paul's watchwords, and still again, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me."

It was the consuming passion of his life to embody the teachings of Christ in his words and in his works. It is conceivable that the people at Ephesus had come to see Christ in the life of Paul, and that his daily ministry in their midst convinced them that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself.

WHAT AM I WORTH?

THE question then emerges, What am I worth to my community? When I come to the end of the journey, will the people who know me best honor and love me for what I have done?

I can see the people of Ephesus bowing on the dock at Miletus, kissing this weary old servant of the Lord. It is a beautiful scene. This tribute meant more to Paul than all the gold of Ephesus would have meant. It was compensation of abiding worth to him. And what is vastly more important, it was glory to God which must have evoked the praise of the angels about the great White Throne.

John Wycliffe, in the introduction to his translation of the Bible into English in 1380, wrote as follows: "When the teachings of the Bible are generally accepted and acted on, then shall we have a government of, for and by the people." The yucca moth and the yucca lily are excellent examples of cooperation in nature. The yucca moth visits no other plant than the yucca lily and the yucca lily is visited by no other insect than the yucca moth.

The female moth visits the lily for the purpose of laying her eggs. In return for this privilege the moth carries pollen from one yucca lily to another. By doing this the moth makes it possible for the yucca lily to produce seeds.

ROY SCHAEFER RECEIVES LETTER FROM GERMAN WAR PRISONER

When Roy Schaefer was employed at the Britt Hemp Plant, he formed an acquaintance with a number of German prisoners who also were working there. Upon leaving the hemp plant in July, 1945 several promised to write when they returned home. A letter was received from one of the first of these as follows:

Gelsehkirchen Buer
January 30, 1948

Dear friend,

Last week I returned to my home from England. My old mother and my brothers and sisters were very happy to see me again. When I was in Britt in 1945 I did not expect that I would be a prisoner that long. At that time I was sent from Britt to Waverly near Waterloo to a corn factory. Then I was sent to Gruley in Colorado to the potato and sugar beet harvest. In the winter of 1945-1946 I was at a Motor-pool of a camp where troops were dismissed. Fort Logan near Denver, Colorado. From there over to New York and to Europe. But the hope of seeing the loved ones at home soon were in vain. After landing in Antwerpen and had spent 12 weeks in Belgium we were taken back to London, England. In England I worked on a farm about two years. In time it was made a little easier for us P. W.'s so that we could some how stand it. We were allowed to mingle with English families and I found as every where else in the world some people who had a real understanding of the lot of war prisoners. Now, Thank God, everything is over and I am glad to be home again to work for my dear mother and the family.

Now you know my dear friend how I fared since that time. I often thought of you and your dear wife and how you helped us under those trying conditions.

I would also like to let you know that your two packages arrived here in good condition. As my mother told me the first one arrived a week before Christmas and the second one before Sylvester (New Year's Eve). My mother had tears in her eyes when she told me this, not so much of gratitude as being touched by your concern over us. When I gave my sister your card I told her not to do any begging, but to thank you for what you had done for us. Tho we need these things desperately I do not want you to go to such expense for I will not be able to repay you. You must have a good memory for the clothing and underwear are a good fit. Every Sunday afternoon when mother cooks a cup of coffee I tell her about you dear friends, and it is a pleasant recollection for me.

When I returned home last week I first became conscious how poor we have become in Germany. After a person has been away from home for 8 years it is hard to get used to the changed conditions. Everything has changed during the last years. Where formerly we had nice thriving cities there are now rubbish piles and poor people scarcely clothed are trying to live in this wreckage. Right here in the Ruhr District we see this daily. It is a good thing that this winter is not so cold. To rebuild we lack cement most of all. All kinds of building material is almost impossible to get. Only one thing is not missing, namely our willingness to work ourselves out of this mess so that we can again live a life that is worthy for a human being. I am certain that the 12 year long mis-management that brought on our misery, can not be cleared away in a few years time. I am thankful to God that I arrived home in good health. Just like me there are many other younger men who are willing to work to get ourselves out of our misery.

Now I do not want to close without thanking you again for all the good that you have done to us. May God reward you for it, for we will not be able to repay you. My aged mother tells me to write that she prays to God that he may bless you for your work of Christian love to your fellowmen.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain with the best greetings and best wishes for you and your family.

Your young friend
Aloys Pieckenbrock

Can Calculate Dairying Profits

Wondering whether there is profit in milking cows this year? Here is a rule-of-thumb method of figuring the profit margin in dairying, learned by County Extension Director Paul Henderson from extension dairy specialists at Iowa State College.

Take the price being received for 3½ pounds of butterfat, says Henderson, and add to it the price of 100 pounds of hay being fed. Using this total, figure it against the cost of 100 pounds of the grain mixture being fed. If the combined price of the butterfat and the hay more than equals the cost of the grain, there is still a profit in feeding grain to dairy cows.

Repair Machinery For Safety's Sake, Suggests Henderson

Farm field work is just around the corner. Within a few months three million tractors with plows cultivators, discs, and planters will be at work to meet the 1948 food goals. Farm accident tolls will be determined largely by the condition of this machinery when it goes into the field.

County Extension Director Henderson suggests that farmers check all equipment before field work begins. Defective hitches, seats, clutches, wheels, brakes, steering and unguarded gears and shafts will take their toll in farm accidents. On the other hand, well conditioned machinery saves time and costly field breakdowns, and makes farm work easier.

Tractors equipped with fire extinguishers and holders for grease guns and other servicing tools will prevent fires and falls.

Check all fuel lines to make sure they are tight. A leaking hose or valve can lead to fire, Henderson says. And move the fuel supply out a safe distance from the buildings.

ESCAPED

A locomotive smashed into a new 1947 automobile near Exira last week and three occupants of the car escaped serious damage. The engine was traveling only about 12 miles an hour but carried the auto 200 feet. Driver Howard Gregerson, 17, was treated for shock and bruises.

YOUNG FARMERS INJURED IN BLAST SET OFF BY WELDER SPARK

(Note: This story was unintentionally left out last week, but as it has good news value we run it this week, as it was set up for publication last week).

Gerald and Pete Barz, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Barz, suffered bad burns last Thursday afternoon while working in the shop on their father's farm northeast of Klemme.

The young men had cleaned up the shop and among the items was a rusty can containing some blasting powder. This they placed on a ledge above the door where it would be out of the way.

Gerald was using an electric welder in the shop near the door and his brother Pete was just in the doorway when there was a blinding flash. Pete's clothing caught afire and he rolled in the snow to put out the flames. He also was burned about the face. Gerald also received bad face burns. It is thought that some blasting powder had fallen down and a spark from the welder had set off the charge. No fire was started in the building by the blast. Both young men are recovering from their burns.

Pete's billfold was nearly consumed by the fire and he lost some valuable papers. A number of bills were nearly burned beyond recognition, but the Government will issue new ones for the bills destroyed. Both young men feel they got out of this one lucky.

Questions were in charge of Mrs. Gerald Koerner. In The Garden was sung by Mrs. Marvin Isvik and Mrs. Dwight Hummel. Motion was carried to do the spring cleaning in the church Thursday, March18.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostesses, Mary Swanson and Mrs. E. J. Arnold. There were 34 ladies and 7 children present.

KELMME SCHOOLS TURN IN TOTAL OF $72.00 TO POLIO FUND

The item published last week about Klemme Schools turning in a check for $27.50 and another for $5.85, was a bit mis-leading and was not the full amount the Klemme Schools raised for the Polio Fund. However, on February 2nd the School also sent in a check for $38.65, which makes a grand total of $72.00 contributed by the Klemme Schools.

FARM TO MARKET ROAD MAY GO THROUGH KLEMME MAIN STREET

The east-west road at the north edge of Klmme is up for improvement this year and will be rebuilt as a farm-to-market road by the State. The purpose of these roads is to make an all-weather highway from farm to market.

Plans are now being considered in the building of this road to utilize as much of the paving as possible and with this view in mind the new farm-to-market road will turn south 3 blocks on U. S. 69 and then come into Klemme on paving to Main Street. The Main street paving would then be continued on east past the John Meinders home and then turn north 3 blocks where it would again join the regular farm-to-market road and continue straight east to the Cerro Gordo county line to the Ventura-Meservey highway.

By building this road through Klemme's Main street would bring the farmer close to our filling stations, stores, creamery, elevator, stock yards, etc. It would also solve a street improvement problem in Klemme as the street from the paving at the Post Office on east is the worst street in town, as it handles more traffic than any other street.

The Times may have more information regarding this project later as plans are worked out by County Engineer Merten. Supervisor Chambers, supervisor for this district, has put in a lot of work on this project which he hopes can be completed to the best interests of all.

HANCOCK ROAD WORK GIVEN OK

The Hancock County board of approval gave its OK to the 1948 road construction program which will include the grading and graveling of approximately 24 miles of highways and the construction of 7 wooden bridges.

Representatives were present from 15 of the 16 townships in the county. Britt was the only township not represented. The program will entail expenditures from the road construction fund totaling approximately $70,000, according to County Engineer Charles F. Merten.

Vandenberg Stock Surges

HOTTEST REPORT on the political battlefront is that Gov. Tom Dewey will swing his supporters to Sen. Arthur Vandenberg if Dewey gets caught in a convention deadlock with Senator Taft and can't get the GOP nomination himself.

Despite repeated disavowals of white ambitions, Vandenberg will have strong "silent" backing at the Philadelphia convention — particularly among the so-called Willkieites in GOP ranks, most of whom now are supporting Dewey, but who are ready to swing to Vandenberg as their second choice because of the Michigan senator's broad-gauged stand on foreign affairs.

Those close to Vandenberg, however, insist that he does not want the nomination. The Michigan senator, who will be 64 years old this month, feels the presidency would be too great a burden, although a recent physical checkup showed him to be in good shape.

Vandenberg also is upset about the health of his wife, who has been ill.

Inside betting, however, is that Vandenberg probably can get the nomination, and that he will accept if a deadlocked convention drafts him.

Not an Accidental Job

ALL THE INNER-PARTY bitterness against one Harry Truman has been brought to the boiling point by Henry Wallace's thumping victory in the Bronx, and for the first time certain Democratic leaders have decided that it is about time to look around for another 1948 candidate.

Helping to spark the intense backstage discussion, Harold Ickes, the Old Curmudgeon, has pointed out something many people have forgotten — that it's the exception rather than the rule for vice presidents to be reelected.

Out of six vice presidents who became presidents of the United States, only two succeeded themselves — Calvin Coolidge and Teddy Roosevelt.

Four others were thrown out by their parties as unsuited to hold office further. Vice President John Tyler, who became president on the death of Henry Harrison, was discarded by the Democrats. Millard Fillmore, who entered the White House on the death of Zachary Taylor, proved to be a flop and was not renominated by the Whigs. Andrew Johnson, who succeeded Lincoln, was almost thrown out before the end of his term, while Chester Arthur, who took over after Garfield's assassination, was denied the Republican nomination to succeed himself.

In other words, American historical precedent has recognized the fact that the vice president of the United States is usually a political accident and has treated him as such when it came to new nominations to the non-accidental job of president.

Grandstanding John L.

IF JOHN L. LEWIS calls a coal strike on the excuse that his miners should get retirement pensions, it will be the flimsiest of all Lewis strike excuses.

Unquestionably aged miners deserve a pension. But the real fact is that Lewis already has around 50 million dollars paid into his welfare funds by mine operators which could be used for pensions.

The miners' welfare and retirement fund out of which old-age pensions would be paid has been built up by a royalty of five cents a ton, paid by the coal operators on every ton of coal mined.

Actually there are two miners' welfare and retirement funds. Fund No. 1 was set up when the government controlled the mines and, based on a royalty of five cents per ton of coal mined, has received a total of 25 million dollars. Out of this, 8 million dollars has been disbursed for disability payments and death benefits to miners' widows. The remaining 17 million dollars is being held in escrow.

Fund No. 2 was established under private operation of the mines and by it mine operators pay 10 cents on each ton of coal mined. By June 30 it will contain 50 million dollars. This fund is administered by Lewis himself, plus Ezra Van Horn, representing the coal operators, and for a time Thomas E. Murray, a New York manufacturer, representing the public. However, a failure of Lewis and Van Horn to agree even on details caused Murray to throw up his hands in despair and resign.

Meanwhile, Lewis has not even agreed on a proper actuarial system for pensions such as that put into effect by any insurance company. Under the Taft-Hartley law no money can be paid out for pensions until such an actuarial system is established.

Therefore, while Lewis has around 50 million dollars with which to pay pensions — once he complies with the Taft-Hartley law — he now is intimating that he will call a strike to get pensions for aged miners.

As usual, it is the miners who suffer while Lewis and the operators make faces at each other.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: Mark 4:26-29; Luke 4: 16-22a; 17:20-21, Romans 14:17.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 60: 1-3, 10-14.

The Kingdom of God

Lesson for March 21, 1948

JESUS went back to his boyhood home in Nazareth, and on the Sabbath he went into the synagogue, "as was his custom." They gave him the Book of Isaiah, from which he read a passage in the 61st chapter, adding, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears," Luke 4:21.

Dr. Newton

Jesus had come to let people know about God — to reveal the Father's perfect love for all men. He loved the Bible, and was constantly reading it, which in his day was the Old Testament only. And he loved the Sabbath day, which we now call the Lord's day. Beginning with his resurrection, the first day of the week has been observed as the Lord's day. And Jesus loved the appointed places of worship, and was always found in some synagogue on the Sabbath. Don't you wish you might have been in Nazareth that day when he stood up to read the Scripture?

WHAT HE CAME TO DO

JESUS, I repeat, came to reveal God to men, which is but another way of saying that he came to teach men about the Kingdom of God. Here we shall need to read Mark 4:26-29, and Romans 14:17.

"The Kingdom of God is as if a man should cast seed into the ground," said Jesus; and Paul, in Romans 14:17, says, "The Kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit."

Jesus, then, came to establish a kingdom within the hearts of men. It means the rule of God in human hearts. What he wills, we gladly do. It manifests itself in the daily life of the individual, in the home, in the school, in the church—everywhere.

"THY KINGDOM COME"

SO VITAL is this truth for the Christian that Jesus, in the pattern prayer, teaches us to say, "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as in heaven."

If we live in the atmosphere of this prayer, we shall embody daily the fruits of the coming Kingdom of God. If we really "seek first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness," we lift the level of life wherever we stand and serve. This is precisely what Jesus did. "He went about doing good."

We help to answer the prayer, "Thy Kingdom come," when we do with all our might what our hands find to do—in the home, in the community, in the church.

KINGDOM OF GOD AMONG MEN

IT IS not enough to consider this truth in terms of some far-off dramatic event. It is a present force and factor in today's world.

One day the Pharisees asked Jesus when the Kingdom of God should come. He told them that it would not come with observation—that it is within the hearts of men.

What did he mean? I believe that he meant just this, that the Kingdom of God will and must manifest itself in the common affairs of everyday life. We may hinder its manifestation. We may retard its coming. On the other hand, we may make it manifest and hasten its spread to earth's remotest bounds.

How? By yielding ourselves to the rule and reign of God in every relationship of life. In race relations, in social service, in relief to the afflicted, in united effort for peace, in better housing, in better recreational facilities, in educational opportunities for all. The Kingdom of God is not an impractical theory, but a working principle, even as the leaven works in the loaf.

WHEN WILL IT COME?

THE Kingdom of God will come when redeemed hearts everywhere enthrone God in their whole attitude and purpose. Then, and not until then.

Will it come? This is a stubborn question. From our viewpoint, it may seem doubtful; but Jesus declares that it will come. "I have overcome the world," he declares.

The one question for you and for me, What part shall I have in the coming of the Kingdom of God upon the earth? We each decide by our willingness or unwillingness to follow him.

OKLAHOMA

(Editor's Note: This is another in the "Stories of the States" series.)

By EDWARD EMERINE

WNU Features.

From tents to towers, from No Man's Land to a mighty state, Oklahoma's development has been recent and fast. Although its history goes back to Coronada and his quest for the Land of Quivira, white men consistently overlooked its wealth above and below the ground until the latter part of the 19th century. A part of the Louisiana Purchase, Oklahoma was bought and sold, given to various Indian tribes, purchased back from them, and generally considered a land of little worth until 1885 when congress authorized the President of the United States to negotiate for unused land which might be opened to white settlement.

Lands of the Creeks and Seminoles were thrown open to homesteaders on April 22, 1889, and 100,000 people raced into Oklahoma. The entire region was settled almost within a day. Towns were laid out and plows bit into the sod before the sun went down. There was no government until May, 1890, when an act passed by congress created the Territory of Oklahoma. The first governor was George W. Steele and the first legislature met at Guthrie on August 27, 1890. The eastern part of the area remained Indian territory.

Fight Over Statehood.

Agitation for statehood began almost immediately. Whether there should be two states or one was an argument that lasted for years. The whites wanted the state of Oklahoma. The five Nations met at Muskogee and petitioned for the state of "Sequoyah." Grown weary of the constant problem, congress

NATIVE SON . . . Oil man and rancher, Roy J. Turner was elected governor of his native state of Oklahoma in 1946, taking office January 13, 1947. He is a World War I veteran. He owns a 10,000-acre ranch near Sulphur, and in 1935 bought a Hereford ranch which is the site of an annual junior field day and judging contest for 4-H boys and girls.

finally passed an enabling act in 1906 which provided for admission if white and Indians could come to an agreement. The proposal was adopted September 17, 1907, by an overwhelming vote, and on November 16, two months later, Pres. Theodore Roosevelt proclaimed Oklahoma the 46th state of the Union

Once on its way, Oklahoma could not be stopped. Settlers found a state that was thrice blessed—rich soil, a favored climate and vast mineral resources. Located in the heart of a great nation, Oklahoma began growing wheat like the northern states, and cotton like the southern states, and producing oil, gas and minerals like eastern and western states. Here indeed was a treasure house that had been overlooked for generations.

A glance of Oklahoma's agricultural production for 1946 shows that it ranked first in broomcorn and mung beans; third in pecans, grain sorghum, alfalfa seed and sorghum forage; fourth in wheat, and sixth in peanuts and sudan grass seed. Oklahoma's cotton crop for 1946 was a little short of $50,000,000 and the corn crop for that year was $39,000,000. In cattle the state ranks ninth and its production of milk, butter, eggs, chickens and turkeys brings its cash farm income to 18th place in the 48 states.

Rich, Fertile Plains.

Oklahoma's crop diversification is aided by its physiography. It lies entirely in the Mississippi river basin. Its drainage is primarily in the Arkansas and Red rivers and their tributaries. Surface of the state as a whole is a plain, mountainous only in the northeastern part where the Ozark mountains rise. The altitude ranges from 4,500 feet near the Colorado border to less than 400 in the southeastern corner. Vast wheat fields are found in the western part of the state, and irrigated areas are developing rapidly. In most parts of Oklahoma, however, there is adequate rainfall for all kinds of crops.

Rich though the surface soil of Oklahoma may be, still greater wealth was found beneath the fields. During the 55 years of its oil history, 5,250,000,000 barrels of oil have flowed from Oklahoma's wells. Geologists predict that even greater deposits of oil and gas await discovery. In 1944, $157,000,000 in crude oil alone was produced by 52,000 wells. More millions of dollars accrued from natural gas and allied natural products. Tulsa is considered the oil capital of the United States.

Typical of Oklahoma's mineral recovery are the zinc and coal mines which have been opened. In 1945, zinc production amounted to more than $15,000,000. Sand and gravel, stone, clay, lead and other miscellaneous minerals such as native asphalt, cement, lime, gypsum, manganese ore and others add to mineral wealth from the state's inexhaustible supplies.

Industrial Development.

Prior to the war, Oklahoma's manufacturing was developed around the agricultural and mineral sources. The leading industry long has been petroleum refining. Zinc smelters and refineries also are important, and the flour mills, and cotton seed oil, cake and meal factories have a large output. Lead and natural gas industries also are important. Recently Oklahoma has added other industries and has the largest cotton mills west of the Mississippi. Metal fabrication has grown important for supplying oil field and factory equipment. Aircraft plants in Tulsa and Oklahoma City are the result of wartime production in the state. Cement production and manufacture of dairy products are stable. Meat packing and food specialties are steadily growing industries.

In this scientific age, Oklahoma looks forward to further industrial development. Cheap natural gas, unlimited water resources, adequate electrical energy, huge coal deposits and other natural advantages are seen pointing to a new "chemical age" in its future.

Despite its agriculture and industry, Oklahoma has play-acres by the millions. Its mountains are scenic, with sparkling streams, rock cliffs and bluffs, virgin forests and skyline drives. It has sand dunes, sacred and historical spots, dinosaur quarries, lakes and rivers, underground caverns, camping and picnic spots and other scenic and recreational advantages for visitors. Lake o' the Cherokees, created by Pensacola dam, is a playground of northeastern Oklahoma. Mt. Scott, near Lawton, towers over a region dotted by 30 lakes. Lake Murray, near Ardmore, is one of many man-made likes. Salt Creek canyon is a miniature Grand canyon. The state's largest tree is a cypress 800 years old, requiring nine men with arms outstretched to reach around its trunk.

Peak Into Prehistoric.

Dinosaur and petrified wood quarries and fields in Cimarron county afford a peak into the prehistoric. Old Fort Gibson and the national cemetery, established in 1824, and the new Fort Sill and the old Geronimo jail near Lawton are well-known attractions. Alabaster cavern near Freedom is one and a half miles long and 160 feet underground and has 25 different rooms of multi-colored beauty. There are virgin forests in McCurtain, LeFlore and Pushmataha counties.

In the central part of the state is Sulphur with a great flowing well, a magnificent plume of water, and Platt National park with springs, fine drives and camping grounds. Claremore and Guthrie have flowing mineral waters with well-equipped bathing facilities. Oklahoma has seven public parks, all of which are rich in natural beauty.

A new federal dam across the Salt Fork in Alfalfa county eventually will cover all of the Great Salt Plains and will be used as a wild game refuge. In the northeast is a dam on Grand river, 18 miles east of Claremore, with 1,200 miles of lake shore line. All lakes and streams are stocked with fish, particularly bass and perch. The state is ideal for quail hunting. In season, deer, wild turkeys and waterfowl are plentiful.

Oklahoma is a proud state—proud of its newness, its oldness, its stability and its progressiveness. It is proud of its Indians. The more than 36 tribes in its state compose about 20 per cent of the Indian population of the United States.

Dances and festivals range from the Sacred Fire ceremony of the Cherokees, said to have been established more than 2,000 years ago, to the modernized Armistice Day celebration of the Osages. There are many war dances, peyote dances, Indian fairs and festivals, stomp and green corn dances, and scores of others.

Reason for Pride.

Oklahoma is proud of corn and wheat fields with producing oil wells within them. It is proud of its irrigation development and the richer harvests sure to come. There is pride, too, in the deep dark-red loam soil which predominates the state's area. It is the state's boast that almost any crop grown in America can be grown in Oklahoma. Food for a nation springs from its soil—the same soil that covers lakes of petroleum and beds of precious minerals.

UNIQUE CAPITOL . . . Although Oklahoma didn't know it at the time, its state capitol was erected over one of the largest oil pools in the state. Consequently the capitol building now is surrounded by oil wells. They may not add to the dignity of the capitol and other state buildings but they do lend an unique touch to Oklahoma's seat of government.

Oklahoma is proud of its youth and the state's educational status ranks high in the nation. In 1946 Oklahoma's 3,464 elementary schools and 849 high schools had an enrollment of 517,070, with more than 40,000 additional students in the state's 40 universities and colleges.

What other states have taken a century, or two centuries, or even more, to do, Oklahoma has done in little more than half a century.

Its skyscrapers stand in contrast to tepees. Modern and thriving, it still is proud of 10-gallon hats and spurs, Indian blankets and moccasins, and the only herd of longhorn cattle left.

Oklahoma is ready for the future and whatever progress the world may offer. Whatever the goal, it expects to get there "sooner" than the rest.

by GRANTLAND RICE

I WAS standing with a brace of ballplayers watching a number of pro golfers practicing before a recent tournament. Each one must have belted out at least 200 shots.

"I wish we had that chance," one ballplayer said. "We get to the park and probably get 10 or 12 swings. We should have a chance to hit at 100 or more pitches every day."

This is quite true. Early each spring Ty Cobb would practice hitting at home for two hours a day. Ty would get more batting practice in a month than all other ballplayers got in a year.

I've been heading south for some 40 years of spring practice. I can recall few ballplayers in that time who took the trouble to get in extra work swinging a bat. Cobb got his work at home. Ty often was a holdout, not for more money but to really get ready for a tough campaign.

Ty Cobb

He was supposed to be a holdout in 1911. That spring he was working overtime hitting and sliding at home. He reported at Terre Haute on April 7. The season opened around April 12.

Cobb was roughly criticized. Only five days of training, they said. "That's no way to treat his club." They knew nothing about his homework at Royston.

All Cobb did that season was to bat .420 and steal something like 83 bases. It was one of his best years. I believe a Cobb would be better off training at home in his own way than reporting at any spring training camp. He would have more time to build himself up.

Cobb had the ambition that too many ballplayers lack — possibly 70 per cent of them. Too many want it the softer and easier way — not the hard way of training, discipline and hard work.

Among others there'll be two ballplayers I'm rooting for this season. One is Ewell Blackwell — the other is Ralph Kiner. Both have potential probabilities of greatness. Both know their responsibilities, which so many ballplayers don't.

The Star All-Arounder

Who is your nomination for the best all-around football player of all time?

We happened to be at a gathering that included such well-known names as Jeff Cravath of Southern California, Mel Hein of the Giants, Joe Stydahar, Bob Snyder, Morley Drury and perhaps a dozen others known to gridiron fame.

More than a few names were entered in the argument. Jim Thorpe, Ernie Nevers, Red Grange, Bronko Nagurski, George Gipp, Don Hutson —these were all among the leading candidates for this highly mythical honor.

"If you were picking the greatest backs, I suppose you'd have to name Thorpe and Nevers," Cravath said. "Probably Thorpe on his big days. But for the all-around combination, I don't see how you can get away from Nagurski, a great tackle, a star end, a wrecking fullback and passer. I believe the Bronk would have made a good quarterback. While he weighed around 225 pounds, he was also fast and shifty.

"One answer is that 11 Nagurskis could wreck any other one-name eleven, although 11 Nevers and 11 Thorpes wouldn't be any shove-arounds after a little line experience. Seven Bronks would be too good a line to run against."

Cravath's statement drew heavy backing from most of the others.

Oddly enough, it happened to be Grange who led all others at the box office. Red had an appeal beyond Thorpe or any other single star, although he was only a fair passer. Grange made more out of football than any other star—more than double the amount, when you consider all the cash that came his way through his football fame.

Joe Louis' Last Stop

Joe Louis says his return engagement with Jersey Joe Walcott in June will be his last stop.

It has been a long time since the Bomber came out of Detroit and the Golden Gloves to knock out Jack Kracken in one round, in his first professional fight. No one should expect Louis to be the same fighter he was at that time or when he won the title. When you reach the top you usually begin to soften up in a short time, and the wonder is that Louis is still champion. The main answer has been lack of competition, lack of quality in the other corner.

The public at large was badly jolted by the Bomber's performance against Walcott. They took it for granted the Louis of 1947 was still the Louis of 1937. There is a mighty big difference.

Jack Dempsey was at his peak at the age of 24. He was over the hill at the age of 31 and through at the age of 32. Louis is now three years older than Dempsey was.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial irritations.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Pinex Saves You Money!

'Columbus Clocks' Found To Be but Fair Souvenirs

At the Chicago World's fair (Columbian exposition) in 1893, thousands of souvenir clocks were sold bearing a portrait of Columbus and the date 1492, says Collier's. Years later upon the death of the original purchasers, a large number of these souvenirs came into the possession of descendants and others, many of whom, believing they owned "a clock brought over by Columbus," sought an estimate of its value from clock authorities and antique dealers, only to be disillusioned.

Millions of American families during these days of high living costs are in danger of being under-nourished, warns the National Dairy Council, because housewives are buying according to prices and not according to food values. They stay within budgets but may jeopardize family health. So here, says the Dairy Council, is its "Guide to Good Eating"—a safe and sound nutritional guide, on which the council on foods and nutrition of the American Medical Association sets its seal of acceptance. Eat these foods daily to get the basic nutritional requirements of your body, and then eat whatever other foods you want to give you that satisfied feeling.

FRESHMAN NEWS

—As Reported By Nellie

We have all settled down now at last deciding we had better start studying.

Literature has been a hard task this week, "telling stories". It seems our Literature books can tell them better than we, so a few of us insist on looking in the books and reading them.

In Algebra we have been working on factors. Most of us get these quite well so Mr. Andrea doesn't have as many headaches as previously. Friday we had a short test which most of us don't care to have returned.

The subject on General Science has been Green Plants, The Food Makers of the World. We also have had a few experiments.

A school party was planned Thursday to be held Friday evening in the Gym. Two one act plays will be given by the Speech class.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

—As Reported By Jerry

The school is quite a busy place lately as quite a few things have been happening, at least to the Seniors; while we little Sophomores just sit back and take it all in. They have been having pictures taken, starting plays, and what not.

Mr. Bulka is giving those band members some extra drilling, for contest and the music clinics are coming soon. Mr. Bulka has been having night practices too. He says at last those contest numbers are beginning to sound like something.

Manuel Training is going strong for the boys. New pieces of wood work are being started every day. Some boys are beginning to make bedsteads or tables with drawers. These are the first projects of this kind we have undertaken.

We never hear much about Home Economics but Mrs. Andrea has been seen grading some very nice looking skirts, blouses, aprons and dresses.

Biology is complicating itself, or are we doing it? Well, anyway it's certainly getting difficult. With the certain kinds of responses, Mrs. Andreae's hard tests, and the various things to figure out, we're more than glad to leave that room when the dinner bell rings.

In Geometry we have just began the study of locus measurements which takes up the drawing of graphs. More work for us.

In Literature we have been working on poems.

This Friday night a high school party is being planned. We surely hope it is a good one.

KHS

JUNIOR CLASS NEWS

—As Reported By Irene

The Juniors are about the same as ever (doing as little as possible).

In Government Mr. Andreae was very nice to us. He changed from the same old routine of class. He gave us a test. The test papers were very neatly typed and very easy for us, provided we had studied.

In Shorthand it is the same, more reading exercises; and more brief forms. When more breif forms come up you should see the pleasant smiles, or possibly if I said smile. I would more likely be correct, because Mr. Patterson is the only one pleased.

In Literature we are studying the essay, I am inclined to agree with the rest of the class, they aren't too interesting.

In Typing, Mr. Patterson was most kind and assigned us more letters to type. This wouldn't be bad except they must be perfect. Even one little mistake may not be overlooked.

SOPHISTICATED SENIORS CLASS NEWS

By Wm. Jones

We've all been in agony waiting for our proofs to come back. Last week they came back and now we all want retakes. Monday the representative from the Waltz Studio came for the retakes. Some were taken but in general we were all satisfied

The Speech class is working on two one-act plays which they will present at the high school party Friday night. They are very interesting and we all believe we should have them more often.

English has been interesting as we are studying (that is those who are studying). English is something we should pay more attention to. See you all at the party Friday night.

How to Keep 'Em Down On the Farm

The other day Pete Swanson's nephew, Bud, allowed as how he was fed up with farm and country life... and was going to the city where there was a lot more opportunity and excitement.

Some folks might have tried to stop him. But not Pete. He even advanced Bud carfare for the trip ... figured that when he'd had a good look around, he'd come back where he belonged.

And what happened? After seven days of big-town bustle and excitement, Bud was back behind the wheel of a tractor, with color in cheeks again. And he'd traded night life of the city for a quiet glass of beer with Dad.

From where I sit, that's how goes. Try to prevent some one from getting what he thinks he wants and he'll go on wanting it. But give him his head, and he'll settle for the sensible thing—whether it's country life, or a temperate glass of beer!

GOOD TIME TO TEACH GUN SAFETY

Take time this winter to go rabbit hunting with your young son and also teach him practical gun safety rules at the same time, suggest county extension director Paul Henderson.

The gun handling principals taught your boy now may save his life or the life of his friend later on, he points out.

Rule one is respect every gun as you would a loaded gun. This rule is foremost in teaching gun safety. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.

The next rule is also an Iowa State law. Put only empty guns that are cased or with the action broken down in a car. This rule should be extended to the home, Henderson suggests.

Another precaution is don't mix hunting with the farming. Loaded guns on tractors and other farm equipment has caused deaths. Carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle at all times.

Never climb a tree or fence with a loaded gun. It doesn't take long to break the action or completely remove the cartridge from the chamber. Always be sure that the barrel and action are clear of obstructions. Check especially for dirt and snow in the barrel.

ACCIDENT TOLL OF FARM FOLK HEAVY

Corn Harvest Took 4 Lives And Resulted In 180 Other Injuries

The cost of harvesting last year's corn crop in Iowa included at least four lives, plus more than 180 other painful and often serious accidents.

These figures were given this week by Norval Wardle, Iowa State College farm safety specialist, who has recently completed a statewide accident survey.

Most of the accidents involved mechanical corn pickers. They proved once more the value of this bit of safety advice: "Keep your hands on the steering wheel while the corn picker is in gear".

Carelessness, Hurry

Most common cause of corn harvest accidents was doing unsafe things such as cleaning out the rolls while the corn picker was running, or stepping over an uncovered power take-off.

Second big factor in the kill- and maiming of Iowa farmers was failure to use safety devices. One costly error was leaving off power take-off shields.

Hurry was the third potential killer lurking in the cornfields. Accidents happened most frequently late in the day, or on the last few rows of corn. Farmers hoping to finish a job a few minutes sooner often paid with broken bones.

Pulled Into Pickers

Of the four deaths reported, three were caused where the farmer was pulled into a mechanical picker. One man was found dead in his picker several days after the accident. Two others were rescued, but died later in hospitals.

One farmer took a shotgun along to shoot pheasants as he did his picking job. The gun discharged, and the farmer died.

Vareity Of Injuries

Wardle says his safety survey certainly did not include all corn harvest accidents in the state. But on the basis of the figures on hand, he knows of the basis of the figures on hand, he knows at least 32 farmers lost one or more fingers. There were 10 broken hands, 5 broken legs, 4 broken hips and 4 broken shoulder blades listed in Wardle's survey.

Lacerated hands, cuts and bruises were received in 51 other accidents. Bruises and minor cuts were reported in the remaining 74 mishaps accounted for in the survey.

FORCED LANDING

When he attempted to use a highway near Sidney as a landing field recently Leonard Morris came to grief when one wing of his plane struck a highway marker and swerved into a ditch. His daughter was a passenger. The Morrisses were enroute home from Oklahoma to Lohrville, Iowa, when darkness caught up with them and caused the attempted landing.

ROMANCE OF THE BELLS . . . Cast in Spain in the eighth century, an ancient bell with a romantic history has summoned McKendree college students to classes for nearly a century. The bell reposes in the dark belfry of the tower of the historic college chapel (above), which was built soon after the turn of the 19th century.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Students Heed Aged Bell's Call to Class for Century

WNU Features.

LEBANON, ILL. — Oldest chapel bell in the United States is not the famed Liberty Bell in Philadelphia or an aged bell from long-settled St. Augustine, Fla., but an ancient bell which has rung classes in and out of McKendree college here for nearly a century.

This fact is authenticated by historical data, meager in spots, but fact nevertheless. The bell has a recorded history that dates back for centuries before founding of the Lebanon institution.

The bell, which is located in the clock tower of the historic chapel building on the campus at McKendree, a Methodist institution, has been used almost hourly to summon students to class ever since the college was a mere stripling of 30 years.

But its sonorous voice was heard centuries before Columbus braved the Atlantic to discover America. The vibrant toll of the bell first was heard in Spain, where historians say it was cast in the eighth century. Later it was recast in Spain and brought to Florida sometime in the 16th century.

There are many unfilled gaps in the story of the bell's turbulent history. From Florida it found its way to the Southwest during the historical era when the West was the last frontier of the country. In the 1850s a roving band of Santa Fe traders found the old bell, dated as to its arrival in America, in a deserted Indian mission in New Mexico.

For some reason the heavy instrument was brought to St. Louis, then the gateway city to the new country. Historians disagree as to whether or not the bell was recast or repaired in St. Louis. Anyway, the name, "Saint Louis," is visible on the bell, as well as other symbols and insignia so corroded as to be almost undecipherable.

Following its arrival in St. Louis, the bell was taken to Centralia, Ill., in 1858, to be exhibited at the Illinois state fair. Here it was purchased for McKendree college by a Mr. Cobleigh, at that time president of the budding institution.

The bell was taken to Lebanon and hoisted into the bell tower of the new chapel then under construction. Since then, it has reposed in the dark belfry of the tower above the building, where the outside world little realizes the romance of its long history.

Just how the bell served during its first century in America is unknown. McKendree college, founded in 1828, is conceded to be one of the oldest colleges in the Mississippi basin, and one of the buildings, known as "Old Main," is said to be the oldest assembly hall west of the Alleghenies.

Very few people have seen the bell at its resting place high in the clock tower of McKendree's chapel, for to reach it, a person must climb a series of ladders that lead upward to the darkened tower.

Aged Evangeline Oak Receives Special Aid

ST. MARTINVILLE, LA. — In an attempt to stimulate the aged tree, special tree food has been placed in the ground at the roots of historic Evangeline Oak, which stands on the banks of Bayou Teche near the old Attakapas trading post.

About 100 pounds of a special preparation were embedded near the roots to overcome slight deterioration of the tree noted recently.

Broncho Busters Thrill Youngsters Of Old River Town

CASSVILLE, WIS — This is one town where the youngsters don't have to go to the Saturday afternoon movie to see their cowboy heroes.

Some of the best broncho busters, trick ropers and bulldoggers in the country live right here in this Mississippi river village of 956 population. To the delight of the town's youngsters, they wear their big hats, fancy jackets, loud shirts and high-heeled cowboy boots around town whenever they are home from rodeos in New York, Chicago, Denver, Pendleton, Salinas and other cities.

The hard ridin' hombres who give the village a touch of the rough and ready west are four members of the Buschbom family. They are Bill Buschbom Sr., 41, and his two sons, Jack, 20, and Bill Jr., 23, and Bill's brother, Ted, 34.

At present the Buschboms have more than 100 horses, some trained and some wild, and an assortment of bulls, steers and calves on their ranch near here.

As usual, Cassville youngsters anxiously are awaiting the advent of spring. Then the Buschboms will spend a few weeks practicing bareback riding, roping and bulldogging steers in the field near the big barn before hitting the sawdust circuit.

During those two weeks, Cassville mothers are going to have a hard time getting their pistol-packin' cowboy sons home in time for meals.

Jack Buschbom ranks as one of the top three or four bareback riders in the country, winning about $5,000 in prize money in that competition last year. Bill Jr. is one of the top ranking trick ropers. The father, a former bronc rider and bulldogger, now confines his activities almost exclusively to putting his 8 to 12 trained horses through their paces in his "liberty act" at major shows. Occasionally, however, the lure of his old calling impels him back into the ring for bulldogging contests and last year he won first place in a Mobridge, S. D., show. Uncle Ted also is a bulldogger.

Home Ec Students Practice on Husbands

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—For the first time, the practice cottage conducted for seniors in home economics at Central State Teachers college has male occupants. The three men, however, are not studying home economics but are husbands of three seniors in the course.

Spending part of a semester as occupants of the practice cottage is a requirement for home economics seniors. The idea, of course, is to put into practice what was preached in the home ec classrooms.

The three degree seekers, Lillian Korzilius, Elizabeth Paulson and Gloria Schultz, tried out their lessons on real, live husbands when Miss Bessie May Allen, department director, permitted the three couples to live in the house.

Two of the husbands, Edward Korzilius and John Paulson, also are students in the college while the third, Louis Schultz, is employed in Stevens Point.

"Party Split" More Fun than a Fire

Schism of Dixie Democrats Could Wreck Party Hopes

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

A political year may be pretty hard on business, international affairs and persons who expect congress or the President to take some highly important but controversial action which might scare away votes—but, if you can stand on the sidelines dodging the brickbats which each side hurls at the other, a political year is lots of fun.

One thing that is as interesting to the casual observer as workmen excavating a cellar, a sandlot baseball game, a fire or a dog-fight, are the quadrennial "party splits" which threaten (several months before the conventions) to rend the big parties in twain. They usually end the same way—both splinters singing Sweet Adeline, and cursing the other party in perfect harmony.

On the surface the recent row between the southern Democrats and the White House looks like one of those affairs. There is no doubt that the southerners are good and mad. And by all their standards they have every right to be. So there is no telling what might happen! But the fact remains that the Negro voters in the north can vote either Republican or Democratic, just as they please. In fact, the colored population really has more freedom than the rest of the electorate because it has no tradition of following a strict pattern.

Baukhage

A Democrat, however, is he lives in the South and if he is to remain a Democrat, has to vote with the Democratic party, even if he does it with anger in his heart and tears in his eyes. Since the administration banks on this, we see even a president from the southern state of Missouri, defying the wishes of his friends below the Mason-Dixon.

I am not questioning any of the supporters of civil rights and the Constitution from the President down, but there does remain the fact of the Negro vote, and there remains likewise many a warm personal and political friendship which has to be subjected to a painful ordeal. The "split" is exciting to watch whether with Sweet Adeline or not.

And if you look across the aisle, you'll see some more splinters.

Listen to this: . . . If Republican leaders in congress want to win the political confidence of both Republican and independent voters, they must stop trying to sell the program of the National Association of Manufacturers as good Republican doctrine . . ."

That wasn't Henry Wallace speaking. Nor Democratic national headquarters.

That was Republican Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon. Morse assails "the conservative leadership" of his own party as vigorously as he scores reaction in the Democratic party.

I already have discussed Wallace and his third party "split." There are those who think it of so little importance that it can be ignored. Some now are predicting that before the election, Wallace will be granted some concession, some advantage, and will come out for Truman for president. I wouldn't go that far, but I have heard the prediction in more than one quarter.

Republicans are supposed to welcome Wallace to the race, and to count on him to cut down the Democratic vote to something almost insignificant.

Let me quote Senator Morse on that subject, as his words appeared in an article in the February issue of the Progressive magazine. Morse says that Wallace mustn't be taken too seriously, but that he mustn't be ignored either. He adds:

"Let my Republican party never forget that there are not enough Republicans to elect a Republican president, nor enough Democrats to elect a Democrat as president. Fortunately there are not enough fellow-travellers to elect Wallace."

"Splits" can't be ignored, it is true. They are important because there is always the possibility that the splitters might find another Teddy Roosevelt to lead them. That can't happen often, though, and meanwhile splits are fun to watch.

'Inside Info' Exaggerated

There has been remarkable interest recently in charges that Washington officials used "inside information" obtained because of their connection with the government to play the markets. The other day one highly-placed gentleman came to me in quite a stew.

"Have you heard the rumor that I was being charged with playing the market on information I got from the White House?" he asked.

"No," I replied. "Who is doing the charging?"

"That's what I want to find out," he sputtered.

"Well," I answered, surprised at his wrath, "you certainly don't feel insulted by it, do you? Anybody can be charged with anything in an election year."

"I certainly am insulted," he came back, "not because my honor is being impugned, but it is an insult to my intelligence to imply that anyone who has been around Washington as long as I have would be such an ass!"

When I first came to Washington as a reporter, I remember there was a minor scandal on "leaks" that had been used for profit. The chief offender, however, was a publicity man, not an official, and from the standpoint of business it proved a fine thing for him. As soon as the charges that he had obtained confidential information and had passed it on to his client were made public he had a dozen offers from other big firms to get on their payrolls. He did, but it wasn't long before he left Washington. He didn't get any more confidences.

A lesser factor in the affair was a newspaper reporter. It was discovered that he was on the payroll of a brokerage firm to whom he phoned anything he thought might be of interest after he had written his story for his paper whose last edition had an early afternoon deadline. It was shown that the brokers paid him all of $25 a month. In the investigation it also was shown that while he knew what was news for a newspaper, the reporter had only the foggiest idea of what would interest a broker as he probably never owned a share of stock in his life. He was duly fired from the paper, and suspended from the Press club, but nobody was too sore.

They knew, as my friend indicated, it was stupidity rather than lack of virtue which was his chief sin.

My own first lesson on the subject of Washington journalistic ethics was administered very tenderly by an Old Timer, my boss. My assignment was helping to cover the British embassy early in World War I, before America had become embroiled.

One night, my boss, who knew everybody in Washington, took me along to introduce me to the British commercial attache—I'm not sure that was what he was called in those days, but it describes his job. He talked with us quite a while, much more freely than he would have conversed with me alone, for I was a stranger to him.

In the course of the conversation, he mentioned that tomorrow, or next day, Great Britain would announce what amounted to an embargo on American wool (Britain wanted to switch her buying to Australia). The attache explained the background of the move in detail.

When we were out on the street, my boss pulled out his watch and remarked to me: "Now, if we were crooked, we would still have time before the markets close to make a lot of money selling short, wouldn't we?"

He didn't have to explain further. AFTER the British had made their announcement, I was able to write a good "follow," interpreting the move. That's all any newsman gets out of "confidential" information, and all that 99.44 per cent of us ever expect.

The same thing applies to government employees. Those who act otherwise soon depart.

Reds Assume Control Of Czech Government

There were six days of crisis in Czechoslovakia and then it was all over—the Communists were in complete control of that nation of 13 million population.

The iron curtain came down with a muffled clang as President Eduard Benes accepted the resignation of 14 of his cabinet ministers after he had refused for a week to do so.

Into power strode Communist Premier Klement Gottwald who had led his party upward from a minority status in Czechoslovakia until now its members dominated every phase of the nation's life and were prepared to swing it directly into the orbit of other Soviet satellites.

Wielding the club to keep the Czechs in line was Gottwald's good right hand, Vaclav Nosek, minister of the interior, who controls all Czechoslovakian police forces. In that powerful position in a Communist-dominated state Nosek was analogous to the mailed glove on the dictator's fist.

For what it was worth—and that was very little — aging President Benes had managed to keep at least a superficial appearance of representative government by insisting that the government be composed of members of other parties of the national front which reinstated the Czechoslovak republic in 1945 when the Germans were being driven out. But it was a hollow, tasteless victory—meaningless in any practical application.

The new government consists of 12 Communists (there were seven before), four Social Democrats, two Czech National Socialists, two Catholic Peoples party members, one Slovak Democrat and two non-party men, Jan Masaryk as foreign minister and Gen. Ludwig Svoboda as minister of defense.

Bewildered Czechs finally knew their cherished republic had come to a grim end when loud speakers in Prague blared this announcement into the night:

"Reaction has been beaten. Go back to work and let us complete our tasks on the two year plan."

In Czechoslovakia's ironic chronology the surging wall of the Red tide engulfed their country just 10 years after the western Allies had sold the nation to Hitler at Munich in a tragically selfish and futile effort to avoid war and save their own skins at the price of just one small Central European state.

Reaction

With the Balkans all tied up with a red ribbon the world began to wonder which small nation the Communist tide would engulf next.

Some thought Finland might be the top name on the list, others wondered whether Austria, France and Italy might not be clamped soon in the Communist vise.

There was general agreement on one fact, at least: That the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia had forged perhaps the most vital link in the Russian chain intended to shackle the Marshall plan.

In Finland and Italy, as in Czechoslovakia, elections were coming up soon and the Communists were out for victory. Finland, like Czechoslovakia, is ruled by a coalition government which has acknowledged that the country must remain on the best of terms with Russia.

COLD CHICKEN: No Fuel Oil

Campaigning politicians this year may have to eliminate "a chicken in every pot" from their lists of promises because there might not be enough chickens to go around.

Reports from the poultry belt in the Midwest say that the severity of the fuel oil shortage is cutting into the 1948 baby chick hatch to threaten poultry and egg production this year.

Thousands of farmers canceled chick orders for early March delivery because they couldn't get oil for their brooder stoves. Iowa and the Northwest were suffering most from the situation, but it also was bad in Illinois and Indiana. The kerosene shortage has been severe enough to cause hardship in most of the poultry producing area.

Some poultrymen were deferring chick deliveries until later dates, hoping that warmer weather would ease the tight oil supply.

Officials of one large hybrid chick hatchery in Iowa claimed they needed six tank cars of fuel oil to get their 1948 production under way.

One of the most vociferous complaints generally being made among farmers was that city consumers were using up all the fuel oil.

FEARFUL: Hoof and Mouth

Cattle, hog and sheep growers of the U. S. continue to live in the shadow of a fear that the hoof and mouth disease which has been decimating livestock in Mexico for many months will spread across the border and affect U. S. herds.

At a recent session in Chicago a joint committee of the cattle, hog and sheep raisers forwarded a plea to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson to renew efforts to eradicate the disease.

Among other things, the stockmen requested that these actions be taken:

1. Renegotiate with high Mexican officials on plans for resuming the interrupted slaughter and burial program.
2. Immediate construction of a fence along the present quarantine line about 250 miles south of the U. S. border.
3. Build new beef canning plants in the "clean" states of northern Mexico and continue to run those now operating.

HOW PRICES DEFLATE

Consumer Resistance Does It

Those same forces which recently knocked down prices of food and other commodities in a spectacular outburst have been quietly at work all during the past year.

Rising supply in a number of lines of goods has caught up with demand, and in some cases it has bumped into demand and money supplies on their way down, according to an analysis by the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

Poultry, eggs, potatoes, oranges, canned fruit juices, certain canned fruits and vegetables, preserves and jellies all have had little private recessions of their own during the past year. By the end of 1947 the prices of most of these items either had leveled off or were actually below the levels of a year previous, the study says.

In manufactured goods, the supply of small radios recently has overflowed the level of demand, with prices skidding in many cities. Large radios are very close to current demand, as are washing machines, stoves and deep-freeze units.

As long as consumers demand goods despite rising prices, the study pointed out, the manufacturer will pay higher and still higher costs for materials and labor, rather than have his production shut down and his flow of goods to the consumer cut off. Retail stores buy his finished products despite higher manufacturing costs because they know their customers want the goods.

But when enough consumers indicate they will not pay increased prices, then manufacturers and stores stiffen their own resistance to higher prices of materials, wage boosts and the resulting price markups for the finished goods because it is evident that such further increases will prevent the products from being sold.

When demand falls off and meets rising supply, the result is a halt in the price rise and often a sharp downturn. Sometimes consumers, merchants and manufacturers all decide that prices are going to keep on declining and therefore cut their buying still more all along the line.

Downward price spirals usually start in that way, the study observed.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Attack on Anderson

IN ALL probability the department of agriculture, the largest governmental agency in Washington, needs no bolstering of its defenses from this column. However, recent broadcasts of certain commentators and the statements of certain newspaper columnists, together with those of politicians who know better, all heaping abuse on the department and the secretary of agriculture for action in the purchase and sale of farm produce leads this reporter to remonstrate.

To top it off, we recently sat through the most absurd and utterly ridiculous tirade to our knowledge ever made on the floor of the United States senate. The speaker was Sen. "Pappy" O'Daniel of Texas and his mouthings were so bitter and so far from the truth that even his colleagues could not tolerate them. Because the secretary of agriculture engaged in the purchase of grain and other farm produce and sold much of it at a loss, O'Daniel called him a criminal and a Communist and, using other epithets, even called upon him to resign.

Senators Scott Lucas of Illinois, Carl Hatch and Dennis Chavez of New Mexico took it upon themselves to answer the Texan. Said Senator Lucas:

"Whatever Secretary Anderson is doing in connection with the buying of grain, he is proceeding under a mandate of the congress of the United States. Week after week I have listened to the senator from Texas occupy the floor of this august body with a tirade of invective which frequently astonishes me. So far as the senator from Illinois is concerned, he has almost reached the saturation point."

Senators Hatch and Chavez spoke in like vein.

The truth is that the secretary of agriculture is under direct mandate of congress to buy and sell, even at a loss, agricultural commodities.

Local counties have been enriched by two of the largest payments in history from government bureaus. As their 25 per cent share of receipts taken in by the forest service, 642 counties containing national forest land collected $4,546,723. Another peak payment was the $7,939,487 distributed by the bureau of land management to 22 states as their share of collections for grazing, mineral leasing, timber and potash fees on public lands.

'Small' Business Is Right

This reporter is interested in the small business of the Home Towns of the country so we have attempted to follow hearings of the senate and house special small business committees. They have had many hearings but what they have accomplished for the benefit of small business we are unable to report. Both committees have asked to be extended for the balance of this session. The senate committee, which got an original appropriation of $50,000 and another $50,000 in July last year, has just received another $15,000 and has asked for $50,000 more for the balance of this session. The house committee got $65,000 at the first session and $70,000 for this session. That adds up to $300,000 of your money.

Just for the Record

Senators Taft of Ohio, Brooks of Illinois and Jenner of Indiana comprise the trio at the heart of opposition to the Marshall plan. They would wreck it by making it into a European WPA. Senator Jenner recently made a long speech outlining his stand on the plan. When he had finished, Senator Tom Connally of Texas said:

"The senator from Indiana has delivered a very interesting and comprehensive address. I just wanted to inquire whether the senator is for or against the Marshall plan."

Old Issues Revived

The long drawn out battle between margarine manufacturers and the dairy interests is expected to reach new intensity at this session. Nub of the fight is over federal taxes imposed on margarine. Apparently margarine makers would be satisfied to see colored margarine taxes cut to the same level as the present levy on uncolored margarine. In 16 states revenue from cottonseed and other oils is more than that from butterfat.

STALIN GOES MUSICAL

What Stalin wants is music which has something of the rhythm of Gromyko and the lyrical beauty of a Vishinsky speech. He has listened to the music on the Voice of America broadcasts and is determined that the Russians shall never be captured by a couple of crooners from Pinsk or Minsk.

—*—

We can imagine a scene at the Kremlin should any Russian come up with "Too Fat Polka."

SONG COMPOSER:

"Here's a silly ditty,
You can sing it right away,
Now here is what you say;
Say it while you may."

STALIN: "Stop! The opening line is too bourgeois. You start off with the premise that the song is silly. In Russian music nothing can be silly. And that line 'you can sing it right away' is a waste of words. Only a stupid Britisher or American has to be told he can sing a song right away."

COMPOSER (resuming):

"Here's a silly jingle,
You can sing it night and noon,
Here's the words, that's all you need,
'Cause I just sang the tune."

STALIN: "How decadent! Jingles! Bah! This song is an attempt to introduce commercials to the Soviet Republican. It is a capitalistic plot."

—*—

COMPOSER:

"Oh, I don't want her,
You can have her,
She's too fat for me,
She's too fat for me,
She's too fat for me."

STALIN: "What nonsense! The Soviet mind rebels against any such philosophy. The question of weight never stops a Russian. Only a weakling nation declines a dance with a woman over a point of poundage. Unless you wish to find yourself in Siberia, you will change it to something like this:

I don't want him,
You can have him,
He's a Marshall planner;
He's too dumb, he's too corrupt,
He's too much of a warmonger for me.'"

COMPOSER: "If you'll hear me through, it goes on like this, sir:

'I get dizzy, I get numbo
When I'm dancing with my jumbo.'"

STALIN: "Did Marx get dizzy dancing? Do you find anything in Lenin's works about getting numbo, however great the task? A Russian is strong and resolute If he dances with a jumbo he does it like a man. Change it to something like this:

'I get mystic, I get fistic
With a girl that's capitalistic.'"

—*—

COMPOSER: "Please hear the chorus:

'Can she prance up a hill?
No! No! No! No!
Can she dance a quadrille?
No! No! No! No!'"

STALIN (suddenly enraptured): "Wait! You've got something there in the true Russian spirit of the times. Cut out every line in the song except the ones with the 'No! No! No! No!' in it."

COMPOSER: "Very good sir."

STALIN: "And listen. . . . Put in more 'Noes!'"

Lose hinges are a common cause of sagging doors, and often the mere tightening of the screws will correct the trouble in a jiffy. However, if there is some warping of the wood, a planing job probably will be necessary.

Two Seek Judgment In Lawsuits In Garner

Roy Berhow has filed a petition in the Hancock County district court against the Fairmont Creamery Company in which he seeks judgment in the sum of $7,427.92 for turkeys alleged sold them and which the defendant failed to remove. It is alleged that turkeys were sold from 3 farm and the birds from 2 farms removed.

W. W. Henson has brought action in district court at Garner against Leonard Stuart asking $315 with interest and costs for settlement of merchandise purchased by the defendant.

KNOW YOUR TRAFFIC LAWS

According to the law of Iowa any driver of a vehicle which collides with an unattended vehicle shall stop immediately. He shall then locate and tell the owner or operator of the unattended vehicle his name and address. If no one can be found, the driver shall leave a note in a conspicuous place, giving his name and address and relating the circumstances of the accident.

Many times drivers return to their parked cars to find crumpled fenders or a smashed-in grill. No one saw the accident; no one knows who did it. But the damage was done, usually through no fault of the driver of the parked car. Collisions of this kind are common when the streets are icy.

The operators of vehicles which cause this type of accident think they are getting away with something and in most cases do not realize they are disobeying a law. Traffic laws are founded on ordianry courtesy, and a courteous person does not try to escape his liability if he damages to the property of another.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

There is nothing amiss with this pretty miss. Just follow her tip and you'll be making Iowa's officers of the law happy and save yourself a lot of grief.

The pretty miss is screen actress Dorothy Malone and she's showing Iowa motorists where their 1948 revalidation clips should go—on the upper right corner of their 1947 license plates. Sheriff Brower and Highway Patrol Sergeant Lou Krujer suggest to anyone who has not yet displayed the little clip on his car or truck license plates, and does not yet have his 1948 registration card displayed on the steering column of his car that he do so at once.

Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred W. Kahl has asked law enforcing agencies throughout the state to begin picking up all car owners driving on the highways with delinquent plates and registrations beginning April 1. The penalty for failure to display the revalidation clips and the registration cards may be a fine up to $100.

The steel shortage forced the state to use clips this year instead of new plates. New plates will be issued in 1949 but, because of the continued steel scarcity, they will be aluminum with a painted black background and white letters, according to Kahl. The 1948 revalidation clips cost the State approximately $40,000 while the 1949 aluminum plates will cost approximately $190,000, or 19 cents per pair, Kahl added. He indicated that the $150,000 saved through the purchase of clips for 1948 can only be used for maintenance of roads as provided by law.

Revalidation clips were not considered practical for 1949, Kahl adds, because the 1947 plates will have gone through considerable wear and tear by that time.

NEW 1948 FISHING FISHING LAWS OUT

Regulations governing the 1948 fishing season are being printed and the new laws will be in the hands of all county recorders, conservation officers, and other agencies authorized to sell licenses during the first week of April. The State Conservation Commission has by administrative order made numerous changes in the regulations.

Most important to anglers has been the removal of length limits on some of the most popular panfish, including crappie, perch, silver and yellow bass, sunfish, bluegills, rock bass, and trout. All of these fish, regardless of size, may be kept by anglers during the coming year.

The daily bag limit and possession limit on bullheads has been removed. The daily catch limit on catfish has been reduced to eight per day from fifteen, with the possession limit reduced to sixteen. The daily catch on walleyed and northern pike has been reduced to five with a possession limit of ten. The daily bag on trout remains at eight with one day's catch allowed in possession.

The crappie season has been advanced a month and under the new regulations opens May 15. The season on smallmouth bass, largemouth bass, sunfish, bluegills, and rock bass will open this year June 1 instead of June 15 as in the past.

The first open season in Iowa this year on protected fish begins April 15 on channel catfish, May 1 on trout. The season on minnows opens on May 12th and on all other fish except those in the bass family May 15. The season on the bass tribe opens June 1.

MAIL CARRIERS TO BEGIN GAME COUNT

More than 1,00 of Iowa's 1,400 rural mail carriers will make the first survey of pheasant, quail, and rabbit populations on their respective routes beginning March 29. The census will continue for six days, during which time game counts will be made on more than 270,000 miles of rural mail routes. The game tallies will be mailed to the Conservation Commission where they will be tabulated and analyzed by Commission biologists. The rural mail census is to be made during the same period that conservation officers are taking the annual spring pheasant census.

The carrier count beginning the 29th is the first time this method of game censusing has been used in Iowa, although several other state departments have used this method successfully. Other carrier counts will be made during July, September and January.

Rural mail carriers who have not received census blanks and wish to cooperate in this program may receive the tabulation sheets by writing to the State Conservation Commission, 914 Grand Avenue, Des Moines.

HANK HOOK, KGLO TELLS GROUP OF NEW FM BROADCASTING

Editors and wives associated with the Hawkeye Press Club were entertained with a "bang" at Mason City Saturday evening. The famous Allstots provided thrill after thrill with their skillful pistol exhibition. The Mason City police sergeant and his wife, winners of numerous national pistol championship honors, climaxed the show with a daring act in which he shot pieces of chalk away from the ears, hair and mouth of his wife.

Mrs. Allstot showed skill, as well as confidence in her husband's aim, when she picked off tiny targets with the pistol in horizonal and upside-down positions.

Providing the commentary for the act was Hank Hook of the KGLO staff, who followed with a report on the operations of KGLO-FM.

It was stressed that FM (frequency modulation), the newest system of broadcasting, is catching on like a grassfire from coast to coast because it is virtually free of static, interference and fading—and, in addition, offers realistic tone quality.

Opening of KGLO-FM this week, he said, mean an additional program service for listeners. It is on the air daily from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., and may be heard at 101.1 megacycles or channel No. 266 on the FM dial.

It was also pointed out that a survey shows more than 3,000 listeners in North Iowa and Southern Minnesota have already provided themselves with radios having the FM band, or with special FM receivers, without which FM broadcasts cannot be heard.

New studios, transmitter, tower and program facilities have been installed for KGLO-FM, Hook continued. An exclusive feature on KGLO-FM this spring and summer, he said, would be play-by-play reports of Cub baseball games directly from Chicago every afternoon.

TREES AVAILABLE FOR WILDLIFE AND EROSION PLANTING

Orders for trees for erosion control, water conservation, and wildlife plantings on farm land are still being accepted by the State Conservation Commission. The trees are available from the State Forest Nursery operated by the State Conservation Commission in cooperaion with the United States Forest Service under the provisions of the Norriss-Doxey and Clark-McNary Acts of Congress.

Included in the list of one-year-old trees are black walnut, black locust, green ash, cottonwood, American elm, white oak, osage orange, burr oak, black cherry, Russian olive, western yellow pine, Virginia pine, and red pine, as well as several other varieties especially designed for wildlife planting. A limited number of multiflora rose are also available at the State Nursery.

Prices range from $5.00 to $13.00 per thousand and no orders are accepted for less than 500 trees.

To encourage replanting of walnut trees the Conservation Commission is this year providing stratified walnuts at $1.00 for 200 nuts in quantities of not less than 200. The stratified walnuts will be ready for planting as soon as the frost is out of the ground. Order blanks and price lists for trees may be secured by writing to the State Conservation Commission, 914 Grand Avenue, Des Moines, Ia.

Finland Fears Reds Seek Control As Stalin Calls for "Defense Pact"; Vandenberg Urges Speed on ERP

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

WHO'S NEXT?
Finland

Finland seemed to be resigned, saturated with the apathy that sometimes precedes extinction.

It was a state of mind that had grown out of a reported request by Josef Stalin of Russia that Finland join up with the chain of Soviet defense pacts that now stretches across Europe.

To the Finns that request was nothing less than a prelude to the same kind of political control Russia had just imposed on Czechoslovakia. They feared their parliamentary freedoms would go by the boards in such a turn of events. But after losing two wars with Russia in less than 10 years, the Finns were able to do little except resign themselves to the Soviet pattern of conquest.

Finland's President Juho Paasikivi was said to be in favor of signing a Finnish-Russian friendship treaty as suggested by Stalin.

His viewpoint, distinguished by realism if nothing else, was this: To turn down the Soviet bid would aggravate Russian-Finnish relations to a dangerous degree. To accept it could mean Finland might get as favorable conditions as possible toward keeping national independence.

At the same time there was concern whether Stalin's request was dictated exclusively by the wish to safeguard Soviet territory, particularly Leningrad, or whether he had something else up his sleeve. So far there were no actual demands of any kind, such as that the Red army be allowed to occupy Finland in the case of war or the threat of war.

On the global scale it seemed apparent that Moscow's overtures to Finland, coming as they did after the seizure of Czechoslovakia, were another part of the Soviet retaliation to the U. S.-sponsored Marshall plan in Europe. The Russians were drawing up the final lines for the conflict and at the same time consolidating their position in eastern Europe.

MARSHALL PLAN:
The Beacon

"This act may well become a welcome beacon in the world's dark night. But if that beacon is to be lighted at all, it had better be lighted before it is too late."

With that exhortation and many other clamoring brass alarms did Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) attempt to spur the senate into swift action on the Marshall plan as it opened debate on the 5.3-billion-dollar program to defeat communism in Europe.

The chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, one of the strongest backers of the Marshall plan, urged the senators to "light the beacon" of economic aid to Europe before "aggressive communism" begins knocking on the door of the New World.

"Help stop World War III before it starts," was the burden of Vandenberg's message.

Denouncing "treacherous Moscow propaganda" that has "charged us with iniquitous American imperialism," he emphasized that the 16 western European nations must be saved from economic chaos.

"This vast friendly segment of the earth must not collapse. The iron curtain must not come to the rims of the Atlantic."

But despite Vandenberg's exhortatory, prospects of swift, full passage of the Marshall plan were by no means bright and shining. In this election year congressmen were being doggedly and ostentatiously conscious of how they spent taxpayers' and voters' money.

PROBE:
Atomic

All of a sudden there was a new atomic security investigation under way to stimulate the jaded interest of the American public.

In the limelight this time was Dr. Edward U. Condon, atomic scientist and head of the government's bureau of standards.

Describing Condon as "one of the weakest links in our atomic security," a house un-American activities sub-committee reported in good faith that he "knowingly or unknowingly entertained and associated" with alleged Russian spies.

To the charge that he was a "weakest link" Condon retorted: "This is gratifying information because I'm absolutely reliable and therefore we have nothing to worry about. The country can relax."

And as far as consorting with Communist spies was concerned—"That's just too vague to talk about. I certainly didn't do it knowingly," he commented.

Nevertheless, two congressional committees leaped into action. Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (Rep., N. J.), under treatment in Walter Reed hospital for a stomach ailment, said he might call a bedside meeting of his full un-American activities committee in order to send the subcommittee report formally to President Truman.

And Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Rep., Iowa) called a session of the senate-house atomic energy committee to study the house group's report.

The report itself was a package of straight-from-the-shoulder charges. It pointed out, among other things, that Condon had been appointed head of the bureau of standards in 1945 on the recommendation of Henry Wallace, then commerce secretary.

Thus was the stage set for two more spine-tingling probes.

OPTIMIST:
New Weapons

Rear Adm. Ellis M. Zacharias, retired U. S. naval officer, came up with another bit of shattering news not calculated to ease the jitters of this already drawn and weary world.

There are now in existence three new weapons which outrank the atomic bomb in pure, unadulterated destructiveness, he said. U. S. science has developed them since the war. They are probably of a bacteriological nature.

Aggression Charted

These are the battle lines of the "cold war" in which the two opposing forces are democracy and communism. The battlefield is Europe, map of which conveys that "this is where we came in" feeling. It is reminiscent of the Hitler drive to the East, except for the fact that this time it is a Russian expansion westward that is changing the color of the map.

PROFITABLE:
Steel

In response to a request by President Truman for a full investigation of steel price increases, federal trade commission and commerce department economists turned up with a story that was not destined to do the steel industry any good in the eyes of the price-whipped American public.

According to data assembled so far, the industry has been piling up profits at a rate unequaled in recent years and, in some cases, is running up net earnings almost double those of 1946.

The appraisal indicated that U. S. Steel, giant of the industry, was leading all companies with a net profit in 1947 of 126.7 million dollars—highest since 1929. Bethelehem Steel pushed up its net profit last year to 51 million dollars, about 10 million more than the previous year.

Other leading concerns either have doubled or more than doubled their 1946 profits.

Stimulus which got the steel profits investigation going was the recent $5-a-ton increase in the price of semi-finished steel—actually the fifth in a series of price boosts. During the first seven weeks of 1948, steel companies have jumped the price of pipe, nails, wire and structural construction steel.

Economists tended to view the steel price hike with alarm because they feared it would offset completely any beneficial deflationary trend which the commodity market drop might have set in motion.

HOMELESS:
DP Bill

Possibly in response to the growing humanitarian sentiment in the U. S. that something be done to relieve the plight of Europe's displaced persons, the senate judiciary committee approved a bill that would admit 100,000 DP's to the U. S. in the next two years.

The measure, now scheduled to be reported out to the senate for action, provides that homeless Europeans who are living in DP camps two and a half years after the end of the war will be admitted at the rate of 50,000 a year beginning next July 1 and ending June 30, 1950.

A three-member commission would be established to handle the program and to formulate regulations "for the purpose of obtaining the most general distribution and settlement of persons." At least 50 per cent of those admitted are to be employed in agriculture, according to the proposal.

Sen. Chapman Revercomb (Rep., W. Va.), chairman of the sub-committee that drafted the bill, said that this provision was intended to prevent the immigrants from settling in large groups in seaboard areas.

Current Events

1. Some southern Democrats have launched a revolt against renomination of President Truman. Prior to Mr. Truman, six vice-presidents have succeeded to the presidency. Two were subsequently renominated for a full term as president. Who were they?

2. Recent photographs of a prominent public figure show him wearing a new homburg hat, gray suit, overcoat, striped necktie and tan pigskin gloves. What was unusual about his attire?

3. Sen. Glen H. Taylor, in a speech announcing his support of Henry Wallace, said: "I am not teamed up with the big-city bosses—Kelly, Hague, Flynn, Curley, Pendergast." With what cities are those men associated?

4. Opera fans recently celebrated the 75th anniversary of the birth of Enrico Caruso. (a) Where did Caruso begin his professional career? (b) Was he a tenor, bass or baritone?

5. The baseball world has been rocked by a new quarrel between two gentlemen known as "The Mahatma" and "The Redhead." Identify each.

ANSWERS

1. The six were Tyler, Fillmore, Johnson, Arthur, Theodore Roosevelt and Coolidge. Roosevelt and Coolidge were renominated.
2. He was in civilian clothes. His name: Dwight D. Eisenhower; retired army chief of staff.
3. Kelly, Chicago; Hague, Jersey City; Flynn, the Bronx, New York; Curley, Boston; Pendergast, St. Louis.
4. (a) In Naples, city of his birth; (b) tenor.
5. "The Mahatma" is Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and "The Redhead" is Larry MacPhail, former president of the New York Yankees.

CRACK DOWN:
Holy Land

It was time to get tough in the Holy Land, the British occupying army decided.

Far from showing any inclination toward peace, Palestine Jews and Arabs were carrying their civil war over the partition plan to even bloodier lengths than ever before.

Weapons and ammunition were being sold openly in the streets. Bombings grew in number and intensity. Open warfare was the virtual rule in Jerusalem. All this might be the natural result of the artificial division of a long-standing state, but the British army had had enough of it.

Force must be used impartially against both Jews and Arabs, Brig. C. P. Jones, commander of the British Jerusalem garrison, told his troops.

In a directive he said: "Prolonged firing between Arabs and Jews within Jerusalem makes life intolerable for its inhabitants. Such disturbances will not continue. Force will be used in incidents of this kind. The army will, if necessary, use weapons more powerful than those available to Arabs and Jews."

It was impossible to decide, the British announced, whether the Arabs or Jews were the aggressors.

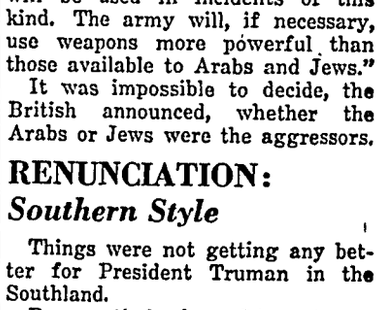
RENUNCIATION:
Southern Style

Things were not getting any better for President Truman in the Southland.

Democratic leaders of two strongholds, South Carolina and Tennessee, brooding over the President's irritating civil rights program, turned thumbs down on him as the party's 1948 candidate.

At the same time the Mississippi Democratic committee voted to withdraw from the party's nominating convention in June unless it pledged itself to fight "anti-southern" laws, meaning the civil rights program.

Nipped by Tuck



Gov. William Tuck of Virginia received a flood of congratulatory telephone calls after he had made a speech denouncing President Truman's proposed civil rights program and asking Virginia voters to ban Truman. He requested joint session of the Virginia general assembly to keep Mr. Truman's name off the ballot next November and permit Virginia electors to choose another Democratic candidate.

What Do You Breathe?

More than 700 persons die every year as a result of air pollution in Chicago alone, and a proportionately large number die from the same causes in other American industrial cities, says Dr. Clarence A. Mills of University of Cincinnati.

Respiratory illnesses, many of which are caused by air pollution, also are responsible for about 7% per cent of all the time lost from work, Dr. Mills said.

Drop Seen in Farm Prices

CONGRESSIONAL mail today from rural areas and small towns of the country points to the drop in farm prices as the only break in the inflationary spiral. Generally these letters say that while the farmers are willing to take a cut from the abnormally high farm prices, something should be done to relieve them of the brunt of the entire price cut—that is, the things the farmer must buy should be cut proportionately.

Insofar as this reporter can find out, however, economists here do not look for much of a letdown in prices for several months.

As for farm prices themselves the consensus is that they will go down gradually until they reach the parity floor, when the government will have to step into the picture and begin buying to maintain the 90 per cent of parity program.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson has temporarily withdrawn from the grain buying picture but he still has about 100 million bushels of wheat to buy to meet the government's export commitments. When he does step back into the grain market, probably about April 1, he will be buying to support farm prices as well as to meet overseas commitments.

As it now looks, the farm income for 1948 likely will be some 16 per cent under the 1947 total or about equal to the 1946 income, which was a record high until topped by 1947. In the meantime, not many farmers were hurt by the spectacular grain drop, most of them having sold before the crash.

Aviation Program Mapped

PUBLICITY-WISE Sen. Owen Brewster, Maine Republican, is taking no chances on being left out of the headlines when his congressional aviation advisory committee presents its formal recommendations.

Instead of leaving the report to his staff to write, he called in the three major press services and invited their help. United Press could not spare a man, but Brewster was able to borrow Jim Strebig from Associated Press and Leon Shloss from International News service. They are expected to give him a big publicity break.

Brewster's committee will recommend:

1. A huge five-year aviation program, building U. S. airpower to such a peak it should obviate the necessity for universal military training. Old planes will be brought out of mothballs until a new building program produces new planes.
2. Coordination between military and commercial air systems; untangling and coordinating the country's air routes; establishing an independent agency to control air safety; unification of armed services aviation.

The congressional committee will blast both the army and navy for failure to achieve air unification. In fact, unification, it will find, is not even halfway round the corner.

College Is 'Mediocracy'

Educators are sounding warnings against the administration's expressed hopes that there will be an enrollment of nearly five million in American colleges by 1960. They say it will mean "educational inflation" and a "tide of classroom mediocracy." They hint that the time might come when the boy who didn't get a college education would be the lad of distinction in any community.

Already our colleges are so overcrowded that there is no more chance of the students getting acquainted than there is in a subway rush. The whole mood of college life is changing. Where a boy used to get a kick out of making the glee club, he now won't sing unless it's for a radio audition. . . . The freshman rush is fading out because the modern student won't wrestle without pay. . . . The old rah-rah spirit is being replaced by something resembling the mood in a wartime brass mill.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Just a Cut and Dried Plot

PHILIP MURRAY, the CIO, and lawyers for the Hollywood-Wall Street moving picture trust may rest serene amid the sound effects, discoursed with wind-machine, thunder-sheet and such mechanical gear by the department of justice. It is just another production schedule whooping along in election year. Each show will be a mint of money for the party.

In the long run, on ceremonial appeal to the Supreme court, Murray and the CIO will be acquitted of violating the Taft-Hartley law in using the columns of the CIO News, a private publication of the union mobsters, to boost their candidate in an election.

Although the plot is cut and dried, does anybody suppose that any other theatrical play is impromptu?

That moving picture anti-trust case has been going on, starting and stopping, for 10 years now. But this is a good year for it. The Hollywood trash are in the grease because of the Communist business, and since FDR died they haven't been so conscientious about getting up the money. This will remind them, in election year.

Everything is going to be all right, though. It just takes time and the right kind of pressure and the right frame of mind in the department of justice. That's all it takes.

'Porkers' Spend Millions

FEDERAL "pork" expenditures represent projects which have only a partisan political patronage value. They represent the ability of the senator or representative to bring home the bacon for his state or his district. They buy votes. Such expense items are found in every budget and appropriation bill passed by congress. No single item calls for the expenditure of billions of dollars but many of them call for millions. Summed up, the total represents a considerable sum of money gleaned from the taxpayers' pockets.

Million Irishmen Attend Largest Political Meeting

Probably the largest political mass meeting in history, says Collier's, was that called at Tara, Ireland, on August 15, 1843, to hear the Irish statesman, Daniel O'Connell, demand the repeal of the union between his country and Great Britain.

It was attended by more than 1,000,000 people, a number equivalent, at that time, to one person in every family in Ireland.

CENTURY OF SERVICE

Railroad Centennial Points Up Stimulus to Farm Progress

WNU Features.

The monotony of the long journey was relieved for the weary farmer nudging his plodding ox team from his farmsite along the Desplaines river to the sprawling little lake-side community which was the Chicago of 1848. The farmer blinked in consternation and even the stolid oxen shied in amazement when they beheld smoke belching from a strange contraption sneaking its way along two parallel rails recently laid along the sprawling prairie.

The contraption was the "Pioneer," a spidery locomotive weighing only 10 tons, which only a few days before, on October 25, 1848, had made its initial run out of Chicago over the new Galena and Chicago Union railroad.

First Link in Chain.

When Jerome Beecher, a Chicago leather dealer, who was riding the new train "more or less for excitement," saw the farmer and his load of hides, he immediately foresaw the possibilities of business. At the end of the line, Beecher bought the hides and then persuaded the railroad, which was not yet open for business, to haul them into Chicago. Thus Beecher has the distinction of being the first person to have freight hauled into Chicago by the "Pioneer," first locomotive to operate out of Chicago.

The business possibilities which Beecher foresaw in the farm-railroad link a century ago expanded with amazing rapidity and today products of millions of farms flow annually through Chicago, now the railroad capital of the nation.

One of the railroads which has provided a major stimulus to agriculture in that great midland empire is the Chicago and North Western railroad system, successor to the early-day Galena and Chicago. The old "Pioneer" itself was the forerunner of a huge fleet of powerful locomotives which today haul an almost constant procession of freight and passenger cars over the Northwestern's vast system.

In observing its centennial this year, the North Western will stage special exhibits at 50 of the major cities on its route. Highlight of the displays will be the ancient "Pioneer," which has been removed from its place of honor in the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry for the centennial tour.

Saga of Progress.

Today's large, highly-mechanized farms, which have developed since the "Pioneer" made its initial run in 1848, would amaze the pioneers who trekked from the East to make new homes in the vast rolling prairies of the Midwest.

When the pioneers arrived via covered wagon in the 1840s to till the soil with their crude farming implements, they foresaw a great future for the country, but they could not have conceived of the developments which would take place in the next 100 years.

In their time, persons who lived a scant 10 miles from Chicago were known as prairie dwellers, and not commuters as now. It took an entire day to bring farm products 10 miles to town and return to the fields.

Working hours were longer on a farm in those days, and the settler who gave up an entire day's time to go to market well might regret having to spend that much time away from the source of his livelihood.

Trains were rare enough in the East, early in 1848, and there were none around Chicago at all. Consequently when a group of men interested in building the Galena and Chicago Union railroad began to sell stock, farmers west of the Windy City viewed the securities as a worthwhile investment.

Undaunted by Depression.

Money wasn't exactly plentiful 100 years ago. The financial panic that began in 1837 had stopped construction of a number of projected railroads.

However, some farmers around Chicago did have cash, enabling them to pay for their Galena stock on the installment basis. Those who were without hard cash but who had both foresight and good, golden grain exchanged the product of their fields for railroad stock.

They knew their prosperity depended largely on good transportation facilities which would take their products to market quickly and bring them needed supplies.

Within a year after the "Pioneer" had made its initial run on October 25, 1848, it was hauling the farmers' products to market quickly and bringing supplies to them.

Piles of Grain Grow.

Farmers began hauling their grain to the end of the railroad line because they could save a full day by using Galena's 10-mile track. They brought their grain to the western terminal in such large amounts that it piled up faster than the "Pioneer" could haul it away.

Railroad officials were enthused over their budding enterprise, for revenue soared to $15 a day! As more and more farmers took advantage of the new method of taking their products to market, freight revenue rose from $463 in June of 1849 to $3,896 in October of the same year. In October of 1860 freight revenue had jumped to a new peak of $200,183.

Other railroads followed the lead of the Galena and laid trackage in the fertile Midwest, and more farmers were attracted by the excellent transportation facilities. Farms were staked out closer together and, as the settler picked tracts along the railroads, rural communities sprang up.

Communities Expand.

Today many of these towns and cities are more urban than rural, teeming with manufacturing plants whose products are hauled by the railroads to all parts of the nation. But many still maintain their basic rural characteristics and serve as railheads for farm products.

Many of these communities are named after railroaders of early days as a tribute to their role in bringing new life to the Midwest.

So gigantic has the business of transporting farm products and manufactured articles become that today 45,000 freight cars are handled daily on the 7,726 miles of track in the Chicago area alone.

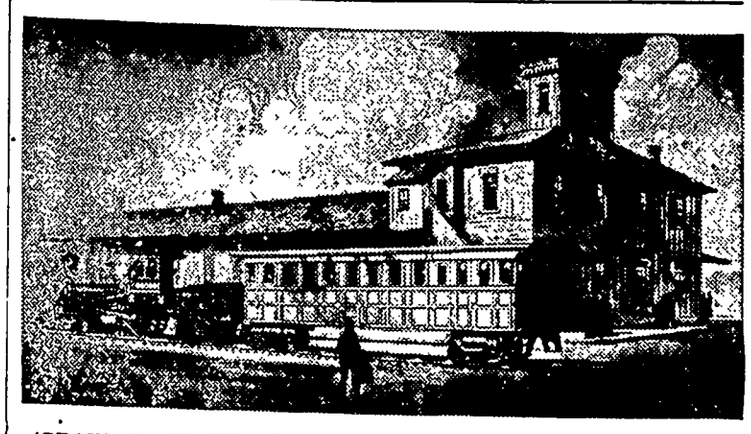
Figures on farm products handled are staggering The Chicago and North Western railway system during 1947, for instance, hauled 40,317,000 bushels of grain into Chicago, according to Chicago board of trade figures.

More than Hides.

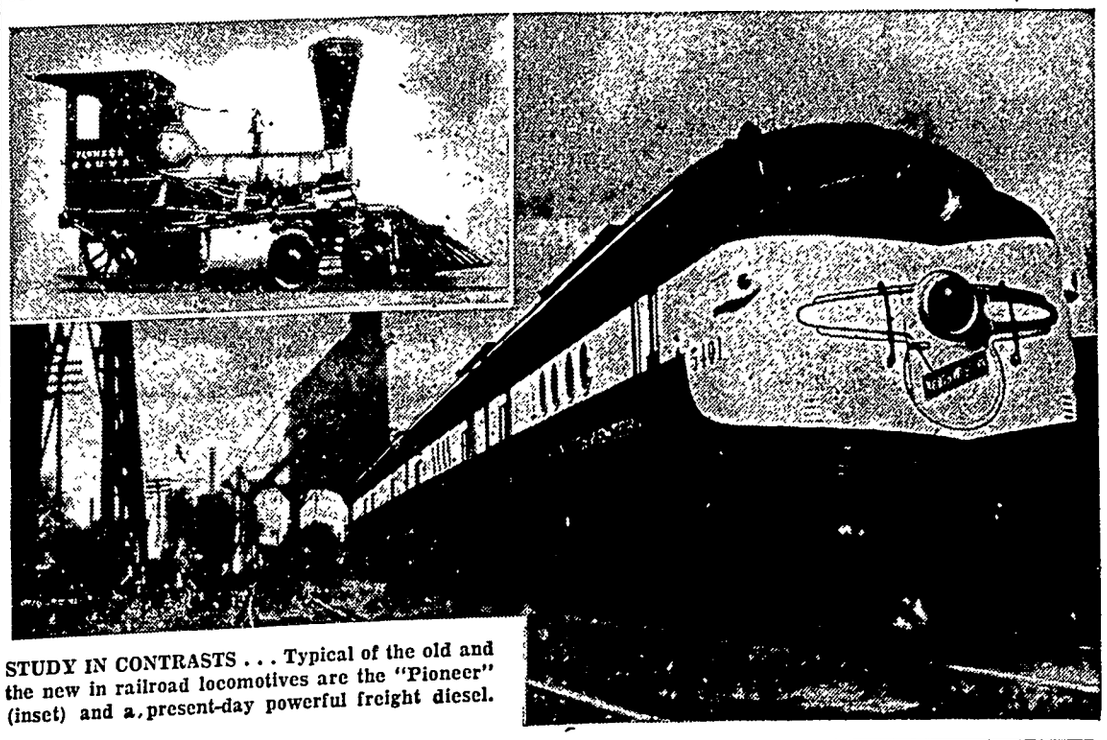
During the year it was the major carrier of grain, bringing in 25,284,000 bushels of corn, 7,050,000 bushels of oats, 3,979,000 bushels of barley and 269,000 bushels of rye.

Other "firsts" set during the year were handling 2,277,200 cases of eggs, 40,929,000 pounds of wool and 10,337 tons of hay. North Western ran a close second in transportation of potatoes, meat, butter, cheese, lard, hides, lumber and tallow. It also hauled more livestock than any other common carrier, bringing in 10,479 cars of animals.

Both agriculture and the railroads have made marked strides since the "Pioneer" brought its first load of hides to Chicago 100 years ago.



'GRAIN TRAIN AHOY!' . . . Armed with a marine telescope, the president of the old Galena and Chicago Union railroad, forerunner of the Chicago and Northwestern system, would perch in the tower atop this station to check progress of the train as it entered Chicago. The "Pioneer" locomotive, which made its initial run out of Chicago 100 years ago, is shown here in front of an old-time station.



STUDY IN CONTRASTS . . . Typical of the old and the new in railroad locomotives are the "Pioneer" (inset) and a present-day powerful freight diesel.

Retired Man Fashions Toys as Pastime

DES MOINES, IOWA. — Fashioning wooden toys for free distribution among children is a full-time pastime for Arthur Hill, retired 73-year-old machinist. Hill, who started his project as a hobby and developed it into a non-paying job when he retired four years ago, gives the toys to churches, schools and nurseries, which in turn distribute them among children.

"There's enough grief in the world," Hill explains, "and I feel I'm doing a little bit to bring happiness."

His main recompense, Hill admits, is "seeing the children's faces light up" when they receive the toys.

He fashions cigar boxes into flat bodied men that move their arms and legs when a string is pulled. From orange crate wood he makes miniature furniture and doll houses for little girls. Red wooden trucks and yellow buses are his favorite toys for boys.

By utilizing waste material, Hill finds that his only expense is for paint and glue.

Novel Scout Troop Aids Hospital

CARVILLE, LA. — Ranking as one of the most unusual Scout troops anywhere in the world, Boy Scout troop No. 36 recently was organized at the U. S. leprosarium here.

Seven patients from 10 to 15 years of age are charter members of the troop. The seven represent three races and four nationalities. One is Italian, two are Louisiana French, one is Japanese-American and three are Negroes.

Sponsoring organization is the hospital's American Legion post No. 188 while Legion post No. 156 of Hammond, La., presented new uniforms for troop members.

Already active in hospital affairs, members of the new troop direct visitors about the hospital grounds, serve as traffic guides, and help assemble the hospital newspaper. They also aided with benefit carnivals for the patients' welfare fund.

Eternal Life

Lesson for March 28, 1948

"THE Lord has risen indeed," and because he lives, we too shall live. Easter is the day that reminds us of this blessed truth—the truth of eternal life. Well has Henry Burton expressed it in these lines:

"There's a light upon the mountains,
And the day is at the spring,
When our eyes shall see the beauty
And the glory of the King;
Weary was our heart with waiting,
And the night watch seemed so long,
But his triumph day is breaking,
And we hail it with a song.

"He is breaking down the barriers;
He is casting up the way;
He is calling for his angels
To build up the gates of day;
But his angels here are human,
Not the shining hosts above;
And the drumbeats of his army
Are the heartbeats of our love."

READ John 21:1-14 for the exquisite account of Jesus appearing to his disciples in the early morning at the sea of Tiberias. They had been toiling all night, and had taken nothing. Bringing their boat near to the shore, they saw one standing there, "but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus."

Dr. Newton

Jesus told them to cast their net on the right side of the ship, which they did, and they caught 153 "great fishes." Jesus then summoned them to breakfast. He had prepared the bread and fish on coals of fire. And they did eat.

BLESSED ASSURANCE

BEFORE his death, Jesus had said to his disciples, "Because I live, you will live also," John 14:19, but they did not fully grasp the meaning of the great words. But that morning on the sea shore, they understood. They remembered that he had died on the cross, and now they were assured that he was really alive, for this was the third time he had appeared unto the disciples after the resurrection.

How happy they must have been! How happy we should be on this recurring Easter season, assured that he is alive evermore. And because he lives, we too shall live.

WHAT IS ETERNAL LIFE?

SUNDAY'S lesson leads us on to the answer to the question, What is eternal life? In Colossians 3:1-4 and 12-17, we have the declaration, "Your life is hid with Christ in God. . . " If we have believed on him — cast ourselves in, implicit trust into his keeping — we have eternal life, which is his gift to every believing heart.

Paul goes on to admonish those who have "entered into life eternal," through faith in the riven, risen, reigning Saviour, to put on the garments of his presence and power and peace — kindness, humility, meekness, long-suffering, forbearance, forgiveness.

The evidence of eternal life is to be found in the fruits of the Spirit in our daily lives.

CERTAINTY OF ETERNAL LIFE

WE READ in John 17:3 this word of further assurance, "This is eternal life, that they know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." And in I John 5:11-12, we read, "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."

In another passage John tells that we know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren.

Easter is the day of eternal hope. It lifts above the fog of earthiness the glory of the blessed hope that fadeth not away. We have God's own testimony that we shall live with him forever, through Jesus Christ, our risen, reigning, returning Lord.

Our Richest Treasure

The Bible walks the ways of all the world with familiar feet and enters land after land to find its own everywhere. Children listen to its stories with wonder and delight, and wise men ponder them as parables of life. The wicked and the proud tremble at its warnings, but to the wounded and the penitent it has a mother's voice. It has woven itself into our dearest dreams; so that love, friendship, sympathy, devotion, memory, hope, put on the beautiful garments of its treasured speech. No man is poor or desolate who has this treasure for his own. —Henry Van Dyke.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Ty's Cow Goes to College

When Ty Martin went to college under the G.I. Bill of Rights, he took one of his Dad's Holsteins and enrolled it in the college herd.

Nobody thought it was odd for Ty to bring a cow to college because that's what a lot of the boys are doing—not only cows, but chickens, sows, and ewes ... for the student-operated farm.

That way the boys pay part of their expenses. They share in both the products and the profits; allocate the work; make their own schedules and rules. They're learning not only how to be good farmers but good citizens to boot. And they're learning industry and moderation—next to milk it seems to me that their favorite beverage is wholesome, temperate beer.

From where I sit, the more education is linked with practical problems of working and getting on together—and practical habits of industry and temperance—the closer we are to its true purpose.

KNOW YOUR TRAFFIC LAWS

The law of Iowa, states that the following shall be the lawful speed limits: In any business or school district-20 miles per hour. In any residence district—25 miles per hour. In any suburban district—45 miles per hour.

According to the National Safety Council, it takes an automobile traveling at 20 miles per hour 21 feet to come to a complete stop on dry pavement. On glare ice a vehicle without chains moving at 20 miles per hour requires 197 feet to stop.

Speed limits are more important than ever in the winter. Greater stopping distances are not the only reason for strict observance during cold weather. In addition to the dangers of skidding, visibility is often limited due to weather conditions. Leave yourself a wider margin for error in the winter months.

Don't be tken by surprise by the pedestrian darting out from behind a car, or by the vehicle popping in from a side street! Take your time in the wintertime and be prepared.

The law of Iowa states that when a driver approaches a flashing red traffic signal, he must stop before entering the nearest crosswalk at an intersection, or at a marked limit line. At a flashing yellow signal the driver may proceed only with caution.

The flashing red and yellow signals are usually used late at night when traffic is not heavy. They are for the convenience of the driving public. They make it unnecessary for a vehicle to wait for a light change even though there is no other traffic in sight.

But they must be obeyed for safety's sake. The tendency late at night when there are few cars on the streets, is to drive fast and to ignore intersections. When two drivers, each thinking he has the only moving vehicle in the vicinity, approach an intersection at right angles to one another, trouble is on the way. That's why the flashing signals are necessary. Do what they tell you to do, and you'll live longer.

Household Hints By Mary Jane

What Makes It So? If cake batter runs out of the pan when baking, it may be due to too small a pan, too slow an oven, too much sugar or shortening, or too much leavening.

If the cake has a moist sticky crust, it is due to too much sugar in the recipe. If the crust is thick and heavy, the recipe may have too much flour, too long baking, too hot an oven, or not enough sugar or shortening.

If a cake humps or cracks on top it may be because it has too much flour or was baked in too hot an oven.

Course texture is due to too much leavening, not enough liquid, insufficient creaming of shortening and sugar, or too slow an oven.

1. Add ½ teaspoon of soda to boiled frosting and it won't run.
2. Hazard Hints:
   Toys, on floor or stairs.
   Litter, poor housekeeping
   Unlighted stairways
   Hurrying on stairs
3. If you car drivers would take time to paint your hub bolts with aluminum paint, it would be much easier to change tires at night.
4. When frying link sausage, place a toothpick thru the ends of 4 or 5 sausage and turn them all at once with a pancake turner.

Food for Thought

"Design Your Food to Suit Your Background," said a heading in one of those home magazines, and it set us to thinking at once. Our vittles had been more or less unsatisfactory; could it be that they were not linked with the right background?

The article read: "You want to serve a thick pheasant soup, french bread, cheese and a tossed salad. Nothing wrong with that, if you've got pottery petite Marmite (or something comparable), a woven breadbasket, a big wooden salad bowl, a substantial cheeseboard and some colorful table mats or cloths. But if your yen is for a green turtle soup with sherry, trout, Amandine, broccoli Hollandaise, endive and an almond souffle, you can bring out translucent china, sparkling crystal and sheer organdy. There must be a sense of fitness between what is served and your table accessories."

Maybe that explained some of our dissatisfaction eating at home or out; the china hadn't been translucent with those fish dinners. And what of the organdy?

"The texture and quality of the food must have the same degree of fineness as the table settings," the article went on. "The color of your food in relation to the table service is a consideration. You must ask whether you wish to feature the food or the table. There will be times when you want to play up the background and play down the food."

That explained everything. Those lunchrooms hadn't been considering color harmony between chow and table decorations at all . . . we had, in fact, had lunch that day in a place where they had played down both the food and the background. And at home this could be the trouble, too. We called in the wife.

The Little Woman crowned us with something that was not, obviously, translucent crystal. When we recovered our senses we were having hamburger, with a catch-as-catch-can background, a complete neglect of design and no regard for color harmony. No Amandine, no woven basket. But the catsup matched the mood.

The Home Town Reporter in Washington

By WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Human Nature Prevails

SURELY you remember the rosy picture presented by Sen. Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio), its author, to the effect that the voluntary anti-inflation act, passed at the special session in December after days of debate in the senate and under "gag" rule in the house, would end the spiral of high prices and curb inflation.

All the big boys in the monopolistic industries were supposed to be eager to comply and get down here to Washington to sign agreements bringing down prices and allocating scarce materials—no compulsion, no government interference—just one big happy family—all eager to help the consuming public make those pay checks reach farther.

But unhappily, insofar as anyone knows, there hasn't been one single solitary agreement to bolster up Senator Taft's rosy picture or to justify house majority leader Charlie Halleck's brusk: "It is this or nothing."

Halleck

One lone voice on the majority side in the senate predicted what would happen, and it has happened. That voice came from Sen. Wayne Morse (Rep., Ore.). Said Senator Morse:

"Does any senator think we are going to change human nature by the adoption of legislation which says in effect, by way of a slap on the wrist, to industry, 'Now boys, just stop making such great profits; now you get busy and lower the prices,' and to labor, 'Don't start another round of wage-increase demands.'"

And so Big Steel, instead of lowering prices, has increased its price $5 per ton on steel, slapping down little business dependent upon steel all over the country, and labor has notified the steel industry it expects wage increases at impending contract negotiations.

The President demands a probe. Senator Taft demands a probe. But there's no law forcing big business or labor or anyone else to do anything and the people must stand by and take the rap. There are the anti-trust laws, but. . . .

If collusion can be proved it will take months to make a case against the Big Steel companies and, in the meantime, unless they back down, the price hike stands.

It appears to this reporter that the GOP leadership in congress again has outfumbled Mr. Truman and that whenever the President's political fortunes ebb some vehicle always is provided for him to bounce back.

He did it after his tilt with John Lewis; it happened after the bungling first session of the 80th congress. Now again the President has skidded to a new low because of Henry Wallace and his third party movement, the recalcitrant South, his weak partisan speech at the Jackson-Jefferson dinners and his vacillating policy on Palestine. But a new opportunity awaits and Mr. Truman again may jump back into popular favor as a new David battling the modern Big Steel Goliaths on behalf of the people.

Some 200 delegates sang the praises of the advancement of the women folk in all fields of labor, professions, business and the arts — a continued march to equality with men. Which reminds this reporter of the famous toast credited to the late Elihu Root: "Here's to the ladies. God bless 'em, once our superiors, now our equals."

Farm Program Mapped

After months of hearings, a senate agricultural subcommittee has drawn a long-range agricultural program measure for presentation at an early date.

Among other provisions it includes support prices for farm products based on parity of income rather than parity of prices, a new parity formula based on present production costs, extension of benefits of social security to farm people, expansion of farmer-owned and controlled cooperatives, coordination of federally sponsored farm credit agencies and adequate soil conservation.

Rural Library Service

The senate has passed a bill to extend library service in rural areas and an identical bill has been reported out favorably in the house. The bills provide for library demonstrations in areas where there is no library service and sets up an appropriation of $25,000 a year for five years for each state. In addition, another section says the federal government will match up to $75,000 a year put up by the states for further extension.

RAS'BRIES

By SETH BABITS

AMONG the million-odd things Spence wanted to do was visit Topley's. He'd had a yen for Topley's back there on the desert wastes. He craved it as a cat would catnip or a homesick Eskimo, an iceberg.

And now, as he hurried his chunky form up the narrow street, the blue neon above Topley's window blazed welcome in letters two feet high.

Spence slid into a seat. He breathed, "Razzberry soda, please. Topley special."

He closed his eyes and envisioned a monument of pink and white.

A girl's voice, clear and soft, reached him.

"Ras-bry soda," she informed. "Without ras-bries."

He raised his head. Her eyes were warm and gray. An amused smile bowed her lips.

"Without—" he faltered.

Her manner humored his confusion. But Spence didn't see that. It struck him she was part of the soda. That the dream also took her in.

He watched her scoop out a gob of ice-cream, drop it into a tall glass, squirt in a crimson syrup and heard the harsh gurgle of carbonated water. The glass was placed before him.

He placed his lips to the straw and pulled. Coldness luxuriously flowed over his tongue, daubed his palate, trickled down his throat and touched off revelations of deliciousness he'd almost forgotten. It evoked imagery. Lying face upward in a shallow mountain lake . . . elastic stars shimmering on waters above . . . night winds whispering of giant pines . . . drifting . . . drifting in a rowboat . . . and a girl beside him . . . gray-eyed and pretty . . . a girl like . . . and he looked up. He felt the impact of her presence.

She said, "You enjoyed that?"

Enjoyed! He'd known the pricelessness of a cold glass of water. He grinned.

"Hit the spot like a letter from home."

Spence expected a smile, but she merely picked up his empty glass and erased the moist ring beneath with an efficient stroke of a damp cloth. He felt he'd missed the target, but wide. He rose awkwardly and plunged a hand into his pocket. His coin vibrated on the counter. A frustrated ring.

The cash register crr-unged dismissal. Spence half-wheeled to go. In turning, his eye caught the tab, NO SALE! The girl's hand swept to her blouse pocket. The clink of metal told him his coin had joined others.

It was none of his concern, yet the act had been so brazen. He heard himself saying, "Don't they treat you right, here?"

Spence couldn't make out her expression. "They do," she answered succinctly.

"I saw you pocket that money."

"So what?" her coolness irritated him.

"If the owner caught you—"

"There's nothing he could do about it," she began to straighten a row of glasses before her. The gesture tokened disinterest in his opinions. More, it infuriated him.

"I wouldn't have believed it," he managed.

Instantly he was sorry for her. He noticed that dark lashes rested on her cheeks. He realized also his heart was thumping and there was a quaver in his voice that he couldn't control.

"Why don't you ask for a raise?"

"I can't—"

"Then quit. Get another job."

A tall man loomed in the doorway. He was thick shouldered, and muscles like Idaho potatoes bulged his arms, laden at the moment with two big paper bags.

Spence glanced at the girl. Beneath her coolness, he thought he detected an undercurrent of excitement.

She said courteously, "Did you get everything?"

The man shrugged his shoulders and laid the bags on the counter. "Yeah," he grunted. "Exceptin' powdered sugar." His tone was gruff. He tore the bag down the center.

Spence stared. There, tucked in between two packages lay a jar of blouse pocket. "I've got two new quarters," she offered.

"Swell," he glowed with delight. He placed a fifty cent piece on the counter. "I just need about six more," he said as she rang up the money, "and I'll have enough for the kid's birthday. Thanks a lot, Miss Topley."

Spence was up. He was past the threshold and into the street. A detaining hand touched his shoulder. He brushed it off.

"Pu-leez," and a slim figure twisted around and blocked his passage.

"What's the big idea," he demanded.

"I couldn't help it. Once you got started—I couldn't stop you. How about having a super special—with me?"

A tall man loomed in the doorway. He was thick shouldered, and muscles like Idaho potatoes bulged his arms, laden at the moment with two big paper bags.

raspberries. Atop the pile glistened another of cherries, bright, red, full, exciting and prophetic of delight.

Vaguely, he could hear the man counting. Meaningless numbers. He'd have to have a Topley special first, then take care of the girl. Spence regarded her expression. Injury dominated her fair face and a pensive smile hovered about her lips. It rebuked him.

With sinking heart and forward thrust of lean jaw, Spence gulped and announced:

"Sir, I want to talk to you."

"What's botherin' you, son?"

Spence cleared his throat. "You look like a regular guy," he began. "Now, supposin' you had a conscientious employe. You'd want to keep her, huh?"

"You said it," the man nodded vigorously.

"Now, if you had a person like that and you felt she was competent to take care of the store," Spence took a deep breath and plunged, "would you give her a raise if she was to ask you. Would you?"

"Guess so," the man acknowledged.

"How much?"

"Well," the man's thick shoulders heaved. "Maybe ten," he said at last.

"You heard him," Spence turned triumphantly toward the girl, "I'm a witness."

She nodded. Her eyes were glowing.

"If you'll excuse me, son," the man was saying, "I'm kind of busy. I got a lot of deliveries to make." He handed a paper to the girl. "Here's the bill," he remarked.

"Thanks. I'll file it. Oh, yes," Spence saw her reach into her

So You Think You Have Moods

A young navy lieutenant, not too long out of the service, told me over the luncheon table the other day that he became very much discouraged over himself. I pointed out he hadn't any reason to be. He has a good job. He's doing it well.

"That's just the trouble," he said. "I'm not doing it well. I know I'm not. One day I feel sure that I have everything a man needs to be successful and happy. Then the next day I'm clear down in the dumps. It's my moods. Isn't there anything a person can do about moods?"

I told him, as I am presently going to tell you, that of course there is something anyone can do about his moods. I told him furthermore something he never heard of before, that having moods is perfectly normal, perfectly natural, and a good rather than a bad thing.

We know a good deal more about moods now than we did a few years ago, for now we know that at certain times we are going to be happy, regardless of how things break for us, while at others we are going to feel depressed, also regardless of how things break.

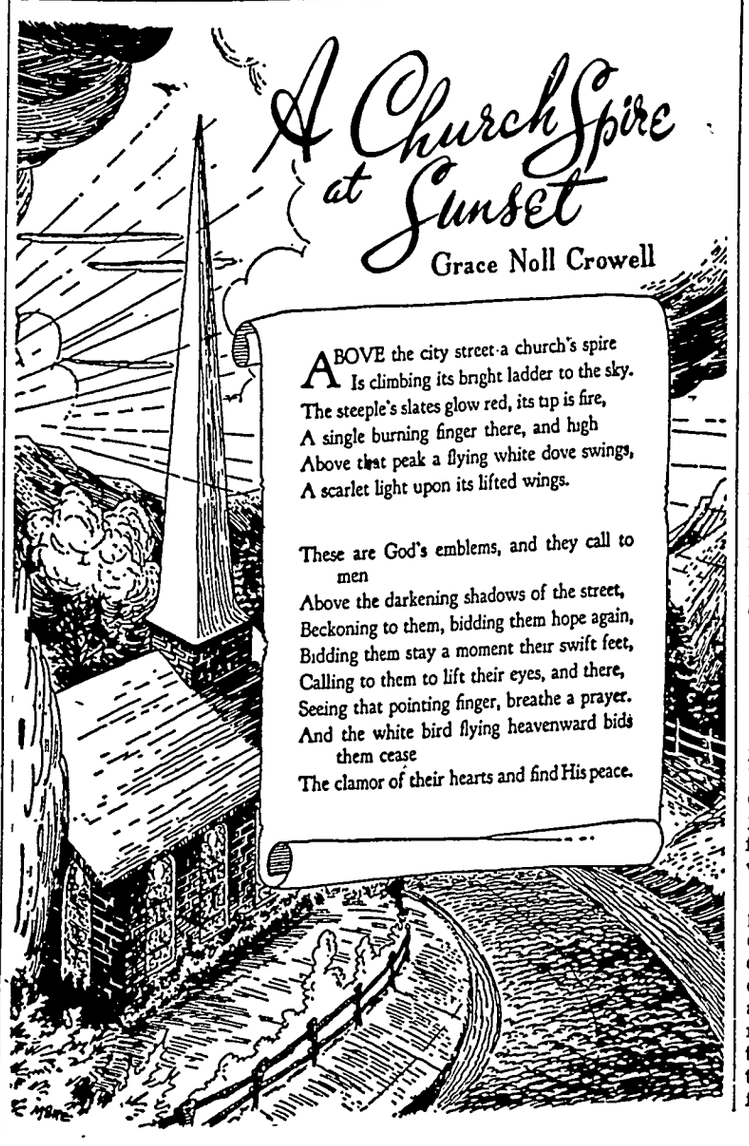
Largely responsible for this information is Dr. Rexford Hershey of the University of Pennsylvania, one of the first scientists to study our emotional curves.

By his researches Dr. Hershey proved that we all have our ups and downs and these occur with regularity. We are elated, cheerful, pleasant, unpleasant, peevish, grouchy. That is one cycle. Then we become elated, cheerful, pleasant, and so forth, again. Our lives are a series of cycles—emotional cycles.

These cycles, moreover, appear with almost exact regularity. With some persons they appear every month; with others every two or three months. Highly emotional people go through their emotional cycles often in less than two-weeks' time, then start all over again; they are always in a dither. But long or short, each of us has his emotional curve.

Maybe you are wondering what you can do to control this curve. You can't control it, but you can disguise it, so that regardless of how you really feel, you put your best foot forward where the rest of the world is concerned.

And how do you do that? It's simple. Just remember that we take our emotions from our actions, not our actions from our emotions. In other words, to feel cheerful, just act cheerful. The next time you reach the low point of your emotional curve, try that. Act cheerful, talk cheerful, and you will be cheerful.



A Church Spire at Sunset

Grace Noll Crowell

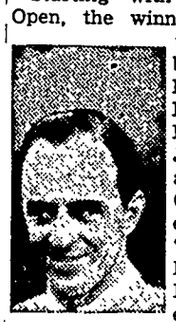
ABOVE the city street a church's spire
Is climbing its bright ladder to the sky.
The steeple's slates glow red, its tip is fire,
A single burning finger there, and high
Above that peak a flying white dove swings,
A scarlet light upon its lifted wings.

These are God's emblems, and they call to men
Above the darkening shadows of the street,
Beckoning to them, bidding them hope again,
Bidding them stay a moment their swift feet,
Calling to them to lift their eyes, and there,
Seeing that pointing finger, breathe a prayer.
And the white bird flying heavenward bids them cease
The clamor of their hearts and find His peace.

Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

THE ancient and honorable game of golf is looking for a standout — one who can be labeled the champ. So far no such person has propped himself against the skyline of fame.

Starting with the Los Angeles Open, the winners of this year's tournaments have been Ben Hogan, Lloyd Mangrum, Bobby Locke, Dutch Harrison, Jimmy Demaret and Sammy Snead. Close up and threatening we have had "Skip" Alexander, Dick Metz, Johnny Palmer and several others who Sam Snead have ripped the hide off par to no avail, with winners beating the Old Man by 15 or 16 strokes.



One of the thrills was to find Snead locating a long-lost putting touch, which brought him the Texas open title in 264 for the 72 holes, just 20 under par. Wherever he finishes, Snead still carries a big gallery, having the type of swing big galleries love to watch—full and free with complete lack of effort.

Snead, Hogan, Demaret and Locke are the gallery favorites, being possessed to a large degree of that indefinable ingredient known as "color."

Color is something the galleries or the crowds like, something with a definite human appeal. There must be better definitions, but we'll let you think them up. Ruth and Dempsey had it to a greater degree than anyone else.

Locke is playing as well as he did last year, but so far he hasn't been able to leave the pack behind. The pros will all be in Florida at an early date and from Florida the trek will be into the Carolinas and then to Augusta, Ga., for the Masters, which should be a nectarine full of juice this season with so many possible winners playing over a championship course.

Keep Swinging

Recently we visited here and there with a number of leading professional golfers. The idea was to milk them of any helpful advice that might remove a few strokes from the scores of any readers.

Here was the consensus: "The idea is to keep swinging—to swing every club. Many golfers seem to think the game is divided into three elements — wooden club play—iron play—and putting. This isn't true. Every golf stroke should be and must be a swinging motion.

"You certainly swing your wooden clubs. Many figure the iron shot is a hit. It isn't. Any iron you use must be a swing. This is also true of putting. You must swing the putter —not use it to stab or jab. Watch Horton Smith or Locke putt. The trouble most bad putters have is that they don't swing the putting blade. You can get twice as much power from a swing as you can with a hit or a punch."

This advice came from such golfers as Locke, Hogan, Demaret and Snead.

Snead has been swinging every club except his putter. He was jabbing and stabbing with this money-making blade until he hit San Antonio, where he started a smooth swing in motion.

"When you get the puttin' miseries you are a lost soul," Snead told me. On a 420-yard hole he had just driven more than 320 yards over a baked-out terrain. His approach with a wedge had stopped eight feet from the cup. His first putt ran three feet past and he blew the next one—a five in place of a probable three. That's what Sammy meant by the "puttin' miseries."

"The toughest part of a big golf tournament," one veteran said, "is still trying to concentrate through 72 holes. There are times when it is hard enough to concentrate on one hole."

Ethics in Boxing

There is one ring division that should have set any number of records—in place of cracking up. This is the middleweight bunch.

It was discovered that Rocky Graziano, acting as a soldier, had deserted the army, serving 8 or 10 months for this escapade. It also was charged that he had boasted of breaking out of service and earning many dollars. Which he did.

As far as Graziano is concerned, the main argument has been along two lines:

No. 1. Granted he was guilty, which he was, he has served his sentence and has paid the law's penalty. Isn't that enough? Why punish him further?

No. 2. A war deserter should not be allowed to make a $250,000 killing by running away. His penalty should have been death before a firing squad or at least 10 years in stir. A weak-minded court let him off too easily. If many young men find in time of war you can desert and come back for a clean up, why hang around?

School Kids From 6 to 60 May Become the Law

The time may come when the law makes people from 6 to 60 do school work, a group of teachers said recently.

Their reason: A good education is the world's best defense against war.

The prediction came from a 10-man commission which looked over the public school system for the American Association of School Administrators.

The commission said grownups should continue studying so they can keep up with "the new era of world events which suddenly has been ushered in."

In Manual Training we are making corner shelves, benches, hall trees, and lawn decerations.

The Freshman and Sophomore girls are making dresses, skirts and blouses as their projects in Home Economics.

SENIOR LADS AND LASSIES
—By Esther Klinge
KHS

There are not many weeks left for us Seniors in K. H. S.(we hope) and we are trying to have as much fun as possible.

In History we have been studying (?) about Means of Transportation and Communication.

Shorthand has been very interesting these last three days and I wonder why. Don't tell anyone, but Mr. Patterson has been skipping school again. But we don't mind! You may do it any time you wish, Mr. Patterson, and you have our permission, gladly!!

Every morning when we come into the English room, Mrs. Harvey thinks we should be ready to work. I have heard her mention something about personality and human relations. Friday morning was one time we enjoyed our class very much as we worked on the school paper and we all talked as much as we liked.

Bookkeeping is getting to be rather a deep subject for shallow minds like ours. We have been studying about "Notes and Trade Acceptances." Mr. Patterson has been skipping out of that class too, but we don't mind that either!

The Senior class play is getting under way now. We have started to have practice at night.

We had a visitor the other night at band practice. We greatly appreciated it when Mr. Bulka brings his dog, Andy, because he's so cute.

Mr. Patterson and the first 6 basketball boys went to Iowa City Wednesday morning to see the State Tournament. We knew we wouldn't need to tell them to tell them to have a good time, because they would anyway. Wednesday afternoon we listened to the games in study hall and we heard Mr. Patterson talk.

TOP-DRESS WHEAT TO BOOST YIELDS

Winter wheat yields in Iowa canoften be increased by spring top-dressing seedlings with a nitrogen fertilizer. According to Iowa State College agronomists, 80 percent of the fields in trials conducted over the state during the past 4 years responded profitably. And the nitrogen applications produced higher quality wheat.

Size of the increases depends on the amount of nitrogen already present in the soil. The trials showed that the largest responses were obtained on fields where legumes had not been grown for 2 or 3 years.

Applications of from 20 pounds of nitrogen per acre (63 pounds of ammonium nitrate) up to 40 pounds (125 pounds of nitrate) gave most economical yields. Increased applications did not give proportionate increases.

Fields capable of producing 30 or more bushels per acre should never be given nitrogen, since the nitrogen will cause lodging and ultimately decrease the yield, the agronomists say. The trials also indicated that fall application of nitrogen fertilizers is not so desirable.

The quality of the grain, in increased protein content, improved with each increase in amount of nitrogen applied.

On soil deficient in phosphorus or potassium, these fertilizer elements should be added. From 200 to 300 pounds of an 0-20-0 or 0-20-10 fertilizer should be either drilled or broadcast in the fall when the wheat is planted. The nitrogen should not be aplied until spring, the emphasize, when the wheat is from 5 to 10 inches high. Then it should be top-dressed with from 60 to 125 pounds of a 32-0-0 fertilizer.

Return From The South

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Dutheridge returned home Friday from Florida where they spent several months during the winter. They are not "newcomers' in the south, as they have spent a couple of winters there previously. They came north with some of the birds to get their farm work ready for spring seeding.

RECENT IMPROVEMENTS NOTED ALONG THE MAIN "DRAG"

It's been "fix-up" time along the "Main Drag" for the past few weeks. Our roving reporter made a few notes about some of the new things in the commercial field.

Art Wellemeyer for some time has been improving his basement room and enlarging the work shop and has purchased a number of gadgets for repairing and upholstering furniture.

Wellemeyer has also beautified his building with a new tan awning that reaches about 48 feet across the front of the building.

The boys at the Creamery went all out for really something nice in the way of a new truck for hauling cream. On a new chassis they had the very latest type of all-steel dairy body installed. The body is streamlined and completely enclosed, insulated and has a stainless steel floor. It's a real beauty and sanitary to the first degree.

Don Christians has been cleaning up his barber shop and it is bright and clean with new paint and paper.

That's not a new Grocery Store that came to town, but Kluck's have really given their store that "new look." All the high shelving has been cut down to the modernistic trend and the interior of the store redecorated in pale blue. Nice job, fellows!

At last the big doors arrived for the Hancock County Coop. Oil Association Super Station and were installed the past week. The new doors are the over-head type and really give the new building a final touch of splendor.

Down at the far end of town the Felco boys got caught in the spring fever that's been going around and during the balmy, warm spring days of the past week they resided the feed storage building, using imitation brick siding. Looks fine and makes the building weatherproof.

During spare time all winter "Fritz" Arnold has been revamping his Oliver shop until now the job is nearly finished. Fred has a very inviting place.

Some of the other boys along the Main Drag are contemplating some improvements in their business this spring.

MR. AND MRS. BUNTENBACH GAVE FAREWELL PARTY FOR DAUGHTER

One Hundred And Fifty Enjoyed Banquet And Party At All Veterans Center

Ms. and Mrs. Ed. C. Buntenbach held a surprise farewell dinner and party in honor of their daughter, Larry Wicks, at the All Veterans Center on the North Shore of Clear Lake Saturday evening which was attended by some 150 employees, business associates and friends of the Buntenbach family.

The three course dinner was served in the spacious dining room of the club and decorations were carried out in the Easter theme. Favors were small wax candles shaped like baby chicks and ducklings. The tables were lighted with candles and decorated with bouquets of flowers.

After the dinner Mr. N J. Brown of Austin, Minnesota, gave a short talk in which he told that the party was in honor of Larry Wicks as a farewell. Larry is now attending a school for airline hostesses in Minneapolis and gave up her work at the Garner sale barn to enter a new career. She had been supervisor of the office at Garner for some time and will be greatly missed by her many friends.

Mr. Jim Conroy, of Britt, who has been an employee of Mr. Buntenbach for seventeen years, presented Larry with many beautiful and useful gifts from the Sale Barn "Gang," business associates and many friends. She responded very graciously and very cleverly injected humorous remarks that brought rounds of laughter. Mr. and Mrs. Buntenbach were loudly applauded for their generosity in putting on such a fine dinner and party.

After dinner a nine-piece orchestra provided music for dancing while others enjoyed visiting and getting acquainted with each other. Everyone had a wonderful time and declared that the Buntenbachs were splendid hosts.

County-Wide Dental Clinic For Pre-School Children

ATTENTION MOTHERS OF CHILDREN, AGE 2 TO 6

We are encouraging all children starting town or rural school fall 1948, and other children from 2 years on to take part in a county-wide program April 6th through the 9th. The Public Health Council, schools, PT A's, and Legion Auxiliaries are actively interested and helping promote this program

Dr Olin Hoffman, director of the state dental division, will examine these children's teeth free of charge, and talk individually with the mothers.

As you know only a well child makes the greatest progress in school. We hope that parents will make sure their child has been checked by the doctor and dentist, and is immunized against smallpox and diphtheria before school starts this fall.

At the conferences you may receive the free dntal examination. Eyes will be checked for these beginning youngsters. We will discuss nutrition and weigh and measure all of the children. This will be an excellent opportunity to observe and discuss any difficulties children may have that may influence their school progress. Children with speech difficulties should be called to the nurse's attention. We can make plans for the speech specialist to see these children when next she is in the county. Children with poor eating, sleeping and other daily habits are not going to make the progress in school that a well-adjusted child does. It is a strain, at best, for a child to meet and work with a new group as he does when entering school. A child who does not see well is seriously handicapped in school. Feel free to discuss any health problems with the nurse. Help yourself to the health literature available at the conference.

Following is the schedule for these conferences. In the town schools.

Tuesday, April 6th:
Kanawha at 9:00 A. M.
Corwith at 2:00 P. M.
Wednesday, April 7th:
Klemme at 8:30 A. M.
Goodell at 10:30 A. M.
Hayfield at 2:00 P. M.
Thursday, April 8th:
Garner at 9:00 A. M.
Britt at 2:00 P. M.
Friday, April 9th:
Crystal Lake at 9:00 A. M.
Woden at 2:00 P. M.

All children starting town and rural school are invited by their school and teacher to participate in this program. Mothers with children from 2 on attend also. The earlier we begin health protection, the better, healthier and happier babies and childen we will have. It's far cheaper and more pleasant to prevent illness. We're looking forward to seeing you at the town school nearest your home.

SCHOOL DENTAL NEWS

We have 15 rural schools now who have returned all of their dental cards in preparation for dental health day. Watch your newspaper for news of this day the Rotary Club in Britt is sponsoring.

Garfield Township is ahead with four schools having returned all of their cards. Bingham has three such schools. Amsterdam, Erin, Orthel and Liberty all have 2, 100 percent schools.

Teachers to report 100 percent lately are Orthel 4 with Mrs. DeWard, teacher; Liberty 4 with Mrs. K. A. Schultz; Garfield 5 with Mrs. Charlotte Busch; Garfield 1 with Miss Bernie Eness; Liberty 5 with Mrs. Asa Legge; and Erin 2 with Mrs. Thressa Gault. Congratulations!

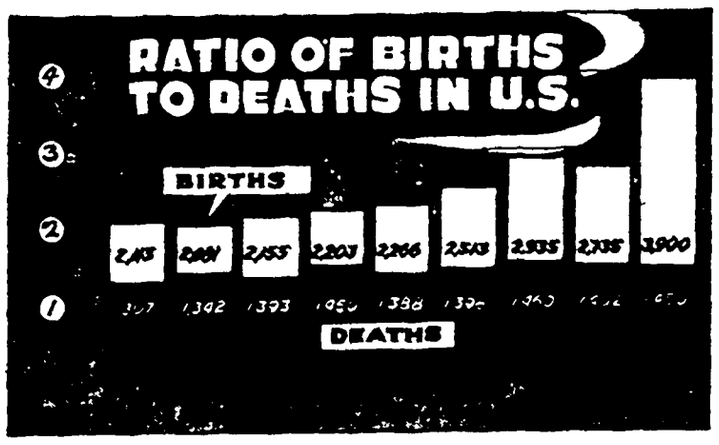
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman, MacArthur Would Accept Presidency "if the People Call"; Great Powers Confer on Palestine

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



The United States is experiencing a steady increase in population. From a range of 2.1 million to 2.3 million in the 1930s, the births rose to 2.9 million in 1943. They totaled 2.7 million in 1945 and then sharply rose again to about 3.9 million in 1947. This sharp rise in births has had the effect of increasing the population some 4.4 million persons since 1945 and 13 million since 1939.

PRESIDENCY:
Announcements

As far as grabbing the spotlight was concerned, President Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur stumbled all over each other with their coy and almost simultaneous announcements that they would accept a presidential nomination if the people called them.

The declarations by the two men, coming within just a few hours of each other, were perhaps a symbolic prelude to a similar but greater clash of personalities and political forces which it is now possible might develop later this year.

Mr. Truman said he would run for a full term as chief executive if the Democrats would nominate him; and MacArthur opined that he would accept the presidency "if called by the American people" but would not actually seek it.

Taking note of the fact that petitions have been filed in Wisconsin putting his name in the primary there on April 6, MacArthur issued this sonorous statement:

"While it seems unnecessary for me to repeat that I do not actively seek or covet any office and have no plans for leaving my post in Japan, I can say, and with due humility, that I would be recreant to all my concepts of good citizenship were I to shrink because of the hazards and responsibilities involved from accepting any public duty to which I might be called by the American public."

Republicans, however, were going easy in their comments on the general's willingness to accept presidential nomination, confining them, for the most part, to peripatetic remarks about what a highly regarded figure MacArthur is.

Sen. Ralph Flanders (Rep., Vt.) said, "I think General MacArthur would be doing the country a disservice if he left the job he is in until he has put it in such shape he can leave. That's the place the Lord put him."

Other politicians were wondering about the spot that the Lord and Harry Truman was putting them on. Southern Democrats, despite Mr. Truman's announcement of his candidacy, were not budging an inch from their stand opposing him and his civil rights program. Some of the southern states, notably Mississippi, went right ahead with their plans to prevent their electoral votes from going to him.

NEW ATOM:
Thorium

Already well beyond the awesome threshhold of the atomic age, nuclear scientists are continuing to step deeper into the contradictory wilderness of creation and destruction that appeared when the first atomic blast burned up the night and the sands at Los Alamos, N. M.

Latest step is the manufacture of the first small pieces of a new kind of atomic bomb and fuel metal, according to an announcement by Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, atomic scientist.

Where formerly the extremely rare metal uranium 235 was the only practicable substance through which atomic energy could be produced, there now is a new metal, known as uranium 233, made by changing the heavy metal thorium into uranium.

This new form of uranium does not exist naturally on earth, nor is it known to exist in the stars.

Dr. Seaborg reported that a small fraction of an ounce—actually only a few hundred milligrams—of the thorium metal has been made in the Hanford, Wash., uranium-graphite, chain-reacting atomic piles.

CONSULTATION:
Holy Land

Leading experts on global anatomy were getting together in a consultation to determine whether there was any conceivable way in which they could perform a painless bisection of Palestine.

Russia, France, China and the U. S. had been requested by the United Nations security council to hold one of their famous conferences to study how partition of the Holy Land into independent Arab and Jewish states might be effected. Britain, too, had been asked to participate but declined the invitation, although consenting to sit in in the role of advisor.

As the consultation got under way, the United States was reported ready to seek big power agreement on a new conciliation effort in Palestine. Warren R. Austin, chief U. S. delegate, said he felt the talks should deal primarily with the question of "peaceful settlement."

But while U. N. delegates might talk in New York about a peaceful settlement, Arab military forces on the spot in Palestine had vastly different ideas.

Arab Commander-in-Chief Fawzi el Kawkji publicly issued a vow to free Palestine from "the zionist menace whether it takes one month, one year or a generation."

Red-haired El Kawkji, the Arab chieftain who had led anti-British and anti-Jewish revolts in 1936 and 1939, had just returned to Palestine after an absence of nine years. He came back, he said, to fight "partition, intrigue and zionism."

"We came here to fight anyone who stands for partition, be they British, Jewish or an international force."

What the United Nations conferees, none of them eager to apply international power in the Holy Land, could do against this kind of gun-waving local zeal was a problem which so far had them completely baffled.

RUHR:
Solution

One of the major problems of the uneasy peace—what to do with the Ruhr, Germany's prime industrial section—was solved when the U. S., Great Britain and France agreed in a series of conferences at London that they would place the Ruhr under international control.

It was decided also that the economic and industrial assets of western Germany, perennial breeding ground for German war machines, would be enlisted in the Marshall plan for European recovery.

Moreover, the western powers agreed that western Germany should have a federal form of government, providing adequate central authority but protecting the rights of the various states.

Indicative of the manner in which statesmen of the western powers are thinking now was the fact that Germany will be represented in the international control of the Ruhr but that Russia very probably will not.

Recognizing the importance of the Ruhr to the recurring surges of German aggression, the conference communique pointed out that "the purpose of this international control would be to ensure that the economic resources of this area should not again be used for the purposes of aggression and that there should be adequate access to the coal, coke and steel of the Ruhr for the benefit of extensive parts of the European community including Germany."

The communique urged the "necessity of insuring the economic reconstruction of western Europe, including Germany".

EDUCATION:
And Religion

In a ruling that, for good or ill, could stand to affect the moral stature of this and succeeding generations of Americans, the U. S. supreme court declared unconstitutional the use of public school systems to help any religious group spread its faith.

Religion and government, the decision said, "can best work to achieve their lofty aims if each is left free from the other within its respective sphere."

The ruling upheld a protest by a self-professed atheist mother, Mrs. Vashti McCollum, that a system of religious teaching in Champaign, Ill., schools breaks down the wall between church and state. She contended that her son was "embarrassed" by the religious instruction.

Delivering the main opinion, Justice Black held that under the facts shown the compulsory education system in Illinois "assists and is integrated with the program of religious instruction carried on by separate religious sects." He said pupils legally required to go to school for secular education are released from some of that legal duty on condition that they attend religious classes.

"This is beyond all question a utilization of the tax-established and tax-supported public school system to aid religious groups to spread their faith."

It was an issue that parents as well as all other U. S. citizens would do well to consider.

There were two facets which would bear reflection:

The supreme court's decision confirmed a long-standing and honorable theory in the U. S. that there should be no interference between church and state and no influence exerted by one on the other. The ruling would seem to safeguard the nation against the two extremes of a state-controlled church or a church-controlled state.

But at the same time, the broad language of the decision failed to recognize the historical importance of religion in creating civilizations and forming and molding nations. Western civilization grew out of the Christian church. Divorcement of the cause and effect now could be dangerous.

FINNISH:
Aid to Russia

It was with no clapping of hands that the government of Finland decided to accept the proposal of Prime Minister Josef Stalin of Russia to discuss a treaty of mutual military aid.

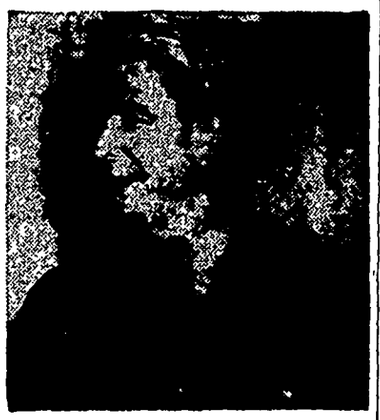
Russia, which needs military help from Finland about as much as the U. S. needs a five-year plan, put the proposal of a discussion to Finland's President Jugo K. Paasikivi within a week after it had swept Czechoslovakia into the Soviet orbit.

Having no alternative, Paasikivi accepted the "invitation" and appointed a negotiating delegation of seven members, including one military expert, government officials and parliament members.

Soviets say they want a binding treaty of mutual military assistance against future German aggression. Talks presumably were being held on that basis, but it was the task of the Finnish negotiators to do all they could to prevent Finland from being chained to Russia in a military treaty.

There was little doubt in the minds of Finnish leaders that this was Russia's first step in a campaign to gain as complete control over that little northern nation as it now holds over the Balkans. And in the final analysis the Finns probably would capitulate in the stark interests of self-preservation.

Military Insurance



Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, director of plans and operations for the army and author of top-secret report on China, told house foreign affairs committee that U. S. must back up economic aid abroad with military support if communism is to be stopped in China and elsewhere. He said, "I don't think I would recommend 500 million dollars in aid to China unless there were military aid to protect that 500 million dollars."

Perennial Blooms

Two Paterson, N. J., brothers, Dr. Philip and Sidney Joffe, have reported the discovery of a chemical solution that will preserve freshly cut flowers forever.

They claim their secret process fixes the cell structure of the flower and preserves its color, form and texture. Only drawback is that the bloom loses its fragrance. The brothers have worked on the solution for the last eight years.

PANIC PITCH

Americans Ready to Go Off Deep End

People of the U. S. are conducting their day-by-day activities in a state of mind that is separated from a condition of acute panic by only the merest veil of self-restraint, says Dr. Frank Fremont-Smith of the International Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Any day now a phony rumor of sudden war or even of sea monsters invading New York harbor might produce wholesale panic. Many Americans are ripe to go off the deep end from just such a scare, no matter how fantastic it may be, Dr. Fremon-Smith contends.

The reason people might be easily panicked is the widespread worry, anxiety or fear over the possibilities of atomic war or of depression.

Economical Buying Cuts Costs for Homemakers

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—According to a recent poll, the topic in which the people are most interested today is the high cost of living. This despite competition with communism, Taft, Dewey, the weather, and why who jumped out of a hotel window clad only in a filmy nightdress.

I managed to get myself into the middle of a controversy on that subject.

It all started when the wife of a machinest in York, Pa., wrote me of her difficulties in making ends meet on her husband's net salary of $53.40 a week (incidentally, bureau of labor statistics informs me that 50 per cent of the workers employed in manufacturing industry earn less than this York machinist.)

Her family includes a boy of 15 and a girl of 6. She outlined her weekly budget as follows:

Insurance	$ 4.57
Food	30.00
Gas and Electricity	3.00
Taxes	1.54
Withholding	1.60
Union Dues	.50
Water Rent (they own their own home)	.36
	$41.57

She pointed out that this total left very little for clothing, dentist and doctor bills, and nothing for the new stove, washer, vacuum cleaner, refrigerator and furniture they would like to have. And "Don't forget," she admonished, "there are a lot of people worse off than we are."

I used her story in a broadcast, and this is the reaction I received from other women correspondents:

An Oakland, Calif., housewife wrote: "When you mentioned that family who spent almost three-quarters of his salary for food, I just had to "sound off" or bust. Either this is an exaggeration by the wife or she is guilty of woeful ignorance of proper dietary requirements. In these days of shortages, I'd like to ship folks like these over to England where we have relatives, who could (perhaps!) 'larn 'er' a thing or two about the wanton selfishness of such extravagance."

This woman goes on: "My husband and I manage nicely on $10 a week for two. I enclose details to prove it. (She did)." And she adds: "I can remember no evening in years when my husband failed to compliment me on his dinner."

She suggests that women who can't cook should attend classes to discover that the "chemistry" of food preparation can be "fascinating and, oh, so rewarding." She herself gained knowledge in public school night coooking classes that enabled her to run a small tearoom in the lean years from 1930 to 1935, and which, from 1941 to 1945, helped her to save 40 per cent of her husband's salary.

Another woman writes concerning a Dearborn, Mich., homemaker who fed "and fed well" her family of six on $75 a month last September. Now, since food prices went down, this woman planned to revise her budget downward. She spent $71.82 for food in November, $58.85 in December and $55.35 in January of this year.

As a sample of her meal planning: On a Saturday noon, (she writes) she may feed her three girls, aged 11, 4 and 2 years, egg sandwiches on bread spread with oleo (mixed with canned milk), a whopping big fruit salad made from pears, plums and peaches she canned last summer, and big glasses of milk. A supper menu might be macaroni and cheese, a vegetable salad, home-made chocolate cookies and fruit for dessert.

A woman from Detroit, Mich., whose family is the same size as that of the York woman's, writes that it costs her only $20 a week to feed her family. And that, she says: "Includes a carton of cigarets for my husband, all soap supplies, polishes, cleansers and additions to my pantry shelf. We average one pound of butter a week, two dozen eggs, 10 to 14 quarts of milk, steaks and chops once a week. My husband takes his lunch—two or three sandwiches, one or two pieces of fruit, lettuce, sometimes another raw vegetable, cakes and cookies. The children (aged 2 and 5) have a hot breakfast and lunch each day. "I think," she says, "that we get well-balanced meals. At least we're all in good health and rarely have colds. It can be done easily if you apply yourself and figure ahead."

And this is accomplished, mind you, in Detroit, where according to bureau of labor statistics, it costs upward of $3,293 a year for a family of four to live modestly.

Wife Achieves Near Miracle

Even more impressive is the food-budgeting record of a homemaker here in Washington, D. C., where, says BLS, it costs more to live than it does in 33 other major cities of the country.

This woman, wife of a navy captain, has a family of seven to feed—herself, her husband, her mother and father, and three strapping boys aged 18, 16 and 13. Also two cats who are fed frozen horsemeat. She spends between $21.80 and $31 a week, and with prices lower, expects her costs to go down.

My first thought was that probably she shopped at a navy commissary, but she does not. She saves money by buying apples by the bushel, oranges by the crate, flour by the 100 pounds and cheese by the five-pound brick. She also "puts up" fruit, jams, jellies and preserves.

My assistant is prone to scoff whenever I receive one of the I-can't-manage - on - what - my - husband - makes letters. She's been keeping track of monthly food bills for herself and her husband since September of last year. She spent $31.28 in the month of September; $31.54 in October, $37.56 in November; $53.36 in December (she had a dinner party for 14 people, and another Christmas day dinner with turkey, et cetera for seven people, and that upped the bills); $45.39 in January, and $29.69 in February. She says the February food bill dropped significantly because they took advantage of the price dip and bought cheaper butter, eggs, flour, et cetera.

Her food bills do not include their twice-a-month "eating out" which costs roughly $10. They also do not include her husband's lunches downtown which come to $1.60 per week.

She explains that her monthly food costs are low because: (1) They buy milk at stores instead of having it delivered; (2) don't eat much butter; (3) her husband doesn't demand meat at every meal, so they have dinner dishes like souffles, baked beans, hearty soups, baked eggs; (4) they shop once a week, going perhaps to five or six different stores to take advantage of special sales items (of course persons without a car couldn't do this); (5) she uses canned milk for coffee, and to make puddings and cream sauces; and (6) shes says she never wastes ANYTHING. (I can believe that!)

With such a variety of figures to choose from, there isn't much basis for getting into a stew about budgets. What it seems to boil down to it that the bill-of-fare is a fair subject for argument, but doesn't leave a man too much to get his teeth into.

A good deal seems to depend on where you are willing to draw the waist-line.

When it comes to checking inflation, we have proved one thing—that the checks and controls are excellent—for the other fellow. Any checks and controls applied to ME though are ruinous, unholy, undemocratic. It all depends on whose bull is gored.

The favorite answer to what is the electoral college is "It's a school where you learn how to vote." It really is an institution where you don't learn that you are not voting for the man you think you are.

N. Y. Court Decision Holds Test-Tube Baby Legitimate

NEW YORK. — A supreme court justice ruled that a child born as the result of artificial insemination is legitimate.

The ruling was made by Justice Henry Clay Greenberg in deciding that the estranged husband of Mrs. Julie Strnad, 31, had a right to visit her daughter, four-year-old Antoinette, who she said was a product of artificial insemination.

Mrs. Strnad claimed that her husband, Antoine, 42, was sterile since birth, an allegation he denied. She sought to prevent him from seeing the child on the ground Antoinette was not the offspring of her ex-mate. She had won a separation decree and principal custody of the child last October.

"Hazards will exist" in a rectangular area approximately 173 miles north and south and 226 miles east and west, the commission said.

The danger will continue throughout 1948.

A nice spread for toast includes strawberry jam and cream cheese.

Make potatoes, cabbage and onions interesting by scalloping them with cheese.

For fruit salads, make cheese balls. For gelatin fruit salads, it's nice to mold the balls with the rest of the ingredients.

You can stuff prunes, dates, celery, tomatoes and green peppers with a combination of cream cheese or cottage cheese with mayonnaise and seasonings.

Aid for Tooth Decay

AT A COST of 80 cents per child, Congressman Frank Keefe (Rep., Wis.) discovered, children's teeth can be treated with sodium fluoride, thereby preventing dental decay in about 50 per cent of the cases.

Public health officials testifying before Keefe's committee told him that sodium fluoride could be mixed in a solution and painted on children's teeth four times in their lives between the ages of 3 and 13—after which most of them could virtually forget about going to the dentist.

The congressman was flabbergasted. He wanted to know why the treatment had not been given to the public.

"The number of dentists is too few," replied U. S. Public Health Director Dr. Thomas Parran.

"It looks to me," said Congresman Keefe, "as though an advertising program would disseminate this information to the people of the country until there would be an overwhelming demand upon the public-health services to make this available to the children.

The public health officials were not able to give a definite answer, but they did explain how simple the sodium fluoride treatment was.

"Our schedule requires application four times during a child's life—at the ages of 3, 7, 10 and 13 years," explained Dr. J. W. Mountin. "The whole thing does not take more than a minute except the cleaning of the teeth and many of the teeth need not be cleaned."

"What does the sodium fluoride solution cost?" asked Congressman Keefe. "Is it very expensive?"

"A gallon of solution can be made for a cost of approximately five cents."

Keefe went on to point out that if the new revolutionary dental program were left merely to dentists, its progress would be much too slow. Therefore he urged that a nation-wide educational program be undertaken. Public health officials said they would consider the matter.

Pacifying the Arabs

HANDLING ARAB CHIEFTAINS is something at which the British have long been adept. We ourselves haven't done badly in recent years. The system is a combination of browbeat and baksheesh. All during World War I, Arab chieftains were kept in line by a constant stream of British silver. During World War II their baksheesh went under a different name—oil royalties.

Today, the kings of Arabia are just as dependent on us as we are on their oil—only more so. They don't want francs, pounds, or even rubles in payment for oil—only dollars. Without dollars their desert monarchies would go up in dust.

This leads to a Palestine remedy. Some years ago Herbert Hoover proposed that the Tigris and Euphrates valleys be developed by irrigation and water power, making them—as in the days of the Garden of Eden—one of the garden spots of the world.

Hoover's proposal now could be carried out for the benefit of the Arabs and as a means of counterbalancing Arab claims in Palestine. The projects could be financed from the vast profits of the Arabian-American Oil Company.

In other words, we pay off the Arabs for their equity in Palestine by setting up a new irrigated homeland for them in the Tigris and Euphartes valleys.

The "Do Nothing" Boys

WHEN THE LAST SESSION of Congress adjourned in July with one of the worst "do-nothing" records in history, Republican apologists freely predicted that the next session, beginning in January, would be one of the busiest and most productive. G. O. P. leaders, it was explained, wanted to chalk up a good legislative record to show the voters in November.

Here is the Merry-Go-Round forecast on what congress will do about major legislation:

PRICE CONTROLS—No action.

RENT CONTROLS—The present inadequate system of rent control will be extended for another year.

MILITARY TRAINING — No action.

HOUSING—Despite the continuing shortage of adequate low-cost housing, the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill will be kept in a deep freeze by congressional leaders. So will national health insurance legislation to provide low-cost medical care for the general public.

TAXES—The Republican 6,800 million dollar tax-reduction bill, which has passed the house, will be reduced to 4 billion dollars in the senate. Despite senate changes President Truman will veto the tax bill and unless Republican leaders write an excess-profits tax into the measure to make it more attractive to Democrats and G. O. P. liberals, senate leaders will not be able to muster the two-thirds majority needed to override the President's veto.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Voters' Weak Voice

IF you are a member of the Democratic or the Republican party you have a weak, diluted voice in the naming of a president of the United States. If you are an independent voter your say about the presidency is practically nil.

This is an amazing fact, but nevertheless true. The threatened bolt of southern states from the Democratic party and the proposed action of Virginia to remove names of presidential candidates from the ballot has pointed up the intricate and complicated process by which we name our presidents and how little voters actually have to say about it.

It goes back to the constitutional provision setting up our electoral system providing for appointment of presidential eelctors in such manner as state legislatures may direct, but holding such electors under no constitutional compulsion to vote for any particular candidate.

For many years, however, under our election system these presidential electors are held as morally bound to vote for the party winner in their state. So long has this been custom, there are some who maintain that the courts would hold that it has been legalized by practice.

In only 18 states, however, is there any provision to give the voter a chance to make himself heard in a primary election of delegates to the national nominating conventions. Only 10 of them have a ballot which allows the voter to indicate his preference among presidential candidates and only nine make provision for pledging delegates. In the other 30 states local or state party conventions choose delegates to national conventions and the only chance the average voter has to express a preference for delegates is in the small precinct unit. After that the whole thing is in the hands of the party bosses in county, district or state conventions.

In the 10 states providing for a presidential primary—Georgia, Florida, Illinois, Maryland, Nebraska, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Wisconsin—the vote is woefully small in comparison to total vote and only in Florida, Ohio, Oregon and Wisconsin are delegates pledged to a particular candidate. In only five states are convention-elected delegates pledged to a candidate — California, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey and South Dakota.

South Lost Influence

Southern states objecting to Mr. Truman's civil rights program complain they lost their influence within the Democratic party when the two-thirds rule for nomination was abolished in 1936.

But under this year's distribution of 1,234 delegates in the national Democratic convention even the two-thirds rule would not give the South a veto either on the nomination or the platform. It reguires 618 votes for a simple majority. Under the two-thirds rule it would require 824 votes and 411 votes would block action, but the 11 states in the Solid South have only 294 votes.

These same states have 127 electoral votes out of 531 in the electrol college. With the exception of 1916, for 50 years the traditional pattern of presidential elections has been that when the Democratics have won, the Democratic majority has been sufficient without the South and when the Republicans won, defection of the South would have made no difference.

Rep. Clarence F. Lea of California has had a resolution before congress for many years to give the people a direct vote for president and vice-president. Rep. Estes Kefauver of Tennesse and Rep. Ed Gosset of Texas have similar resolutions pending. Under these resolutions each state would retain the same number of electoral votes it now has but would divide them among the candidates in the same proportions as the popular votes are divided.

* * *

For instance if a candidate got 51 per cent of the New York state vote he would get 51 per cent of the state's 47 electoral votes, not 100 per cent as at present. This would minimize the influence of minority groups in some northern states which sometimes hold the balance of power in those states. Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts also is sponsoring a constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college and provide direct election of the president.

Electoral Practice

In the 1944 election President Roosevelt received 54 per cent of the popular vote and 81 per cent of the electoral college while Governor Dewey, who got 46 per cent of the popular vote, received only 19 per cent of the electoral college. Under our present practice selection of electors is a formality but if Virginia or other states permit Independent judgment of electors their qualifications become as important as any other candidate.

Spray Service Available At The County Extension Director's Office

There's a sure way of knowing when to apply proper sprays to your home orchard this year. Just tell County Extension Director, Paul Henderson, that you want to be put on his orchard spray service list.

You can drop him a card, or stop in at his office in Garner. Then as various orchard sprays become due, Henderson will mail you a card, reminding you that it is time to get the job done, and outlining the type of spray to use. There service is free to anyone in the county. Henderson says it is already time to apply a dormant spray to the orchards.

Apples trees do not need it unless scale insects are present or unless DDT was used extensively last year. That probably won't mean a great many orchards in this vicinity Henderson said. There is some oyster scale in northeast Iowa.

When spraying is necessary, use one and one-half gallons of dormant spray in 5 gallons of water, or one cup of the spray in three gallons of water. Apply before growth starts, and when there will be no danger of freezing temperatures for 24 to 48 hours.

Where spots of anthracnose are showing on the canes of black raspberries a simialr liquid lime sulpher spray should be applied when leaves are out about one-quarter of an inch.

CHOOSE PLANTINGS FOR HEIGHT AND HARDNESS

Maybe you're thinking of what might be done this spring to improve the home grounds. usually, says Margherita Tarr, Iowa State College landscape architect, the best plan is a grassed area in the front yard with shrubs around the house.

Small flowering trees or low-growing evergreens planted at the foundation of the house seem to make the house belong in its location, she says. Only a few shrubs are needed; it's their placing that counts. How many plants you'll have depends somewhat on how much of the foundation shows. You won't want plantings all around the house, nor the same kind of plants all around.

Consider, first of all, when you're choosing shrubs, the height they'll be when grown. Choose the best height for the location. Greatest height should be at the corners of the house, with smaller plantings at the entrance. Avoid planting under windows which will block interesting views. In a border, the tallest plants should be in the back.

Hardiness is the next point to think about. The sun or shade and the amount of moisture needed as well as resistance to insect pests and diseases enter in. You'll also want to thinks of the density, shape, color and bloom of shrubs you choose.

Buy good strong healthy plants, says Miss Tarr, from nurseries known to be reliable.

Nationwide Campaign Against Rats To Be Spearheaded By U. S. Government

The United States government is spearheading a coast-to-coast campaign by farmers against rats.

A hungry world, the leaders of the campaign say, cannot afford an estimated 200-million-bushel loss in grains eaten or spoiled by rats every year. Nor can Iowa farmers afford to pay from their pockets the state's share of the annual rat damage.

Community Project

One or two farmers alone can hope to accomplish very little in driving rats from their premises, but in a community can band together to accomplish a great deal. Using up-to-date poisoning and trapping measures, rat-proofing buildings where grain is stored or fed to livestock and poultry, and eliminating good hiding places will cut down the rat population in any area.

Extension Service To Help

In Iowa the Agricultural Extension Service will work with the State Department of Agriculture and the State Department of Health in helping farmers rid themselves of rats. April 1 has been set as the date to begin the work.

County extension directors will be available for advice and help in local rat control campaigns. Members of the central staff of the Extension Service will conduct demonstrations.

The rat population of the United States is thought to be about the same as the human population, and three-fourths of the rodents live on our farms. Practically every farm harbors some rats, biologists say, even if they are unsuspected.

Four-Point Program

Iowa State College advocates a four-point program for local control of rats. It consists first of cleaning up rat harbors—piles of lumber, junk and other hiding places. Then prebaiting is begun by placing bait in rat-infested areas for several nights. This helps to determine just how many rats are present, and it gains their confidence. Next, poisoned bait is set out for a single night, preferably using ANTU, Red Squill or barium carbonate. Finally, buildings are rat-proofed by using concrete, tin and hardware cloth to make it difficult for any rats to work their way through walls or floors.

Farmers or communities planning a rat control program are advised to see their local county extension director, or write directly to Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College, Ames, Ia.

DEEP LITTER WILL CUT CHICK LOSSES

It Helps Chicks To Build Up Coccidiosis Immunity, Whitfield Says

Severe outbreaks of coccidiosis in poultry can be prevented by building up immunity in chicks before warm, sultry weather begins, says W. R. Whitfield, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

The immunity-building plan is a simple one, and a labor-saver as well. Use deep litter in the brooder house from the time the baby chicks are first put in until the end of the season, says Whitfield.

Add new litter from time to time when needed, but don't clean the house during the brooding period.

How It Works

The system works this way. deep litter stays dry and retards developments of coccidia. Frequent stirring of the litter prevents chicks from taking in the massive doses necessary for starting the disease on a rampage, and immunity is built up. By the time warm, damp weather (favorable to rapid development of coccidiosis) arrives the chicks have developed some immunity to the disease.

The deep litter program has been used successfully. Iowa farm flock owners have cooperated with the College Extension Service for the past 3 years, "and have reduced the difficulty with coccidiosis so well that it is now difficult to find flock owners who do not use the plan," Whitfield reports.

Out of 36 owners who had one or more broods of chicks last year, 22 reported no attack of the disease and 14 reported slight trouble. Those with the deepest litter suffered smallest losses and reported less evidence of coccidiosis.

Program Steps

If you have had trouble with coccidiosis, and want to use deep litter this year, here is what Whitfield says to do:

Start with a minimum of three inches of litter, preferably corncobs, shavings, or some other nonmatting litter. Don't change it from the time the chicks are put in the house until the cockerels are sold and the pullets have gone to summer range shelters.

Keep droppings mixed with the litter by frequent forking or raking, particularly in the late spring brooding. Matting of the surface of the litter is not safe at any time, least of all when chicks are small. Add new litter when the old becomes soiled or when the depth is not sufficient to keep conditions good. (Depths of 5 to 6 inches have proved the most satisfactory.)

Watch litter around the edge of the brooder and around the waterers. Keep these areas stirred and dry, because here is where coccidia thrive and are most apt to become infective.

Don't turn chicks out of doors immediately following a rain. Warm weather of June and July, combined with water puddles which may be teem with coccidia, makes conditions just right for a real outbreak of coccidiosis.

PRICES OF DAIRY PRODUCTS STABLE

Will Not Follow Sharp Decline In Other Commodities Economist Says

Don't look for any sharp drop in the price of dairy products.

"Although prices of most dairy items will decline seasonally, they are likely to continue higher than a year earlier, at least through mid-year," according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College agricultural economist.

He points out that prices of milk and manufactured dairy products declined less than seasonally from mid-January to mid-February in contrast to sharp declines for grains and some other commodities.

Butter Prices

Wholesale butter prices in mid-February were slightly lower than a month earlier, and 17 percent higher than a year earlier. Prices of milk for fluid use were 7 percent higher than in February 1947. For other manufactured dairy products, February prices ranged from 6 to 50 percent higher than a year ago.

Kutish said production of all major manufactured dairy products has been lower this year. There is a slightly smaller output of milk on the farms, and more of it is going directly to the consumer as fluid milk and cream.

Milk Production

Milk production in January was down 6 percent from a year ago. That was because of unfavorable weather, unfavorable relation between dairy and feed prices, and 4 percent fewer cows, Kutish said.

But Kutish had one cheerful note for the consumer. He thinks milk output for the first half of the year will not be as much below 1947 as the January and February output has been.

AROUND IOWA

EARLY BIRD

Recently we reported that Iowa's first robin showed up in Denison on February 25. Anamosa reported that the first robin of the year was seen in that City on February 21, and Audubon produced a still earlier robin, February 19. One thing is certain; after the recent big freeze, we bet those birds are sorry they came!

ESCAPED

Four Iowans, Mr. and Mrs. George Baxter of Belmond and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kesler of Armstrong escaped serious injure recently when their car struck a patch of ice and rolled over three times. The accident occurred during a vacation trip near Cheyenne, Whyoming.

FIVE GENERATIONS

In an unusual picture recently, the Corydon Times-Republican showed five generations of ladies all in one picture, ranging from 78 year old Mrs. Dora Brown of Humeston, on down to the great-great-granddaughter Cheryl Ann Vandenburg, 12 months.

MAD DOG?

While protecting some school children from a dog recently, Frank Connell of Iowa Falls was bitten. The animal was foaming at the mouth and acting queerly. The dog was killed and taken to Iowa State college to see if it was "mad". Mr. Connell will testify that even if it was not mad, it did not seem very pleased!

NO WATER

Residents of Marcus experienced a minor dry spell recently when a motor in the town water pumping station broke down. The motor is 350 feet underground and was out of commission about a week. Meanwhile, residents were obtaining water from local wells, some of which were pumped dry the first day. Hardware stores reported qnite a run on buckets and milk cans.

DIES

Mrs. W. L. Boyd of Pocahontas learned recently that her aunt, Mrs. Herrick, of North Dakota, died at the age of 99—just a few months short of her 100th birthday which would have occurred next September.

TWICE

Misfortune struck twice in one day for Roscoe Hulbert of near Aplington. After injuring his hand in a buss-saw, losing three fingers, he was being driven to the clinic at Waverly. A truck just ahead of the Hulbert car stopped suddenly and Mr. Hulbert was thrown against the windshield, giving him a severe bump on the head.

FROZEN

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Christensen of Graettinger flew to McCook, Nebraska recently, to be with their son Dean. A midnight breakdown of his automobile during the recent cold wave resulted in frozen feet for the son, who started across country and was located by a plane the next morning.

TELEVISION WEATHER

It is now possible to get weather reports by television. What fun to sit in front of the screen and watch what the elements are doing play by play!

—*—

"Tune in," we said to the wife the other day, "and see if you can get a couple of pre-April showers."

"Who are they playing today?" she asked absent-mindedly.

"It's the weather I'm after," we explained. "It might be very interesting."

"Are you kidding?" she asked.

"Not at all. The U. S. weather bureau is broadcasting by television the complete weather formations, showing the cold and warm fronts, the dry and wet areas and everything."

"I don't think I would care for it greatly," said the missus. "There must be other things more exciting."

—*—

"What could be more exciting?" we demanded. "Picture the warm front all lined up waiting for the cold front to kick off . . . the opening whistle! . . . the clash of weather front against weather front! . . . sunshine out to beat rain! . . . the light southerly breezes taking on the heavy nor-easter!"

"Who's sponsoring today's weather, Ford, General Motors or somebody's beer?" asked the wife.

"It hasn't a sponsor yet," we explained.

"It will get one if it is bad enough," she sighed.

"Tune in and get it, will ya?" we pleaded.

"Not unless I can win prizes through it," she said flatly.

—*—

It was useless to argue, so we tuned in without her. It started off fast enough. A low pressure area from the South came swooping across the screen at a great clip. A high pressure area, off late, came tearing out of the northeast corner full of pep and swinging in all directions. Presently a snow front leaped into the fight but something went wrong with our television set and on the screen we beheld a lightweight boxer, two hockey teams and something that looked half tenor and half hot wave. All we could make of it was that tomorrow's weather would be somewhat cooler, with westerly rabbit punches, considerable rough ice work followed by heavy rains and light opera.

—*—

We are through with television weather until it perfects a suitable jingle.

Who Wants To Be Cheap?

The break in commodity and stock prices, in forcing down prices generally, is going to be hard for the long-soaked public to take. Getting accustomed to being handed change from a ten-dollar bill is going to require a lot of stamina.

—*—

And what a strain it is going to be on us all when we find a salesman and saleslady acting as if the customer rated a little higher than insect life!

—*—

Can Mr. and Mrs. Public be permitted to buy things at sharply reduced rates all of a sudden, or does good judgment require that they get the blessing gradually, by a tapering off system? How will a housewife act when she can get a quart of milk, a custard pie or a frosted layer cake for less than a day's pay?

—*—

Hornswoggled, gypped, blitzed, gouged and run ragged for some five years, are we going to be fit to take it standing up when we can buy a $2,500 house for less than ten grand; when an auto can be had at the list price by merely phoning the agent; when a schoolboy will shovel the snow off our walk for less than $2 an hour and when we find a little courtesy on the phone when we call up to give somebody some business?

—*—

We think not. After you have been going through a concrete mixer for years, life outside of it seems unreal and unsatisfactory.

Prophet Among Exiles

Lesson for April 4, 1948

THIS quarter we study the Captivity and Return of the Jews, using the Books of Ezekiel, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi. Sunday's lesson is found in Ezekiel 1-4 and 33:1-9.

Dr. Newton

It would be well for us to read again the history of this most interesting man Ezekiel—how he came to be among the captives by the river Chebar. He is one of the most attractive personalities in the Old Testament — a man of surpassing culture and charm—and yet enabled to "sit where they sat."

A MESSENGER OF GOD

EZEKIEL could never have adapted himself to the role of ministering to the captive slaves apart from the knowledge that he was the messenger of God — the messenger of God's hope to broken, beaten souls.

God spoke to his people through Ezekiel. He speaks to his people today through chosen messengers —parents, teachers, the Bible, the Holy Spirit. God may be speaking to you today.

HEAR YE THE WORD

EZEKIEL'S approach to the Jews in captivity was by the authority of God's direct message to them through him. Ezekiel was faithful to God's appointment and mission. He knew that what he had to say to the Jews meant their hope of release and return.

He studied their plight. He studied their mood. And then he spoke to them. But not only did he speak to them, telling them what God wanted them to know, but he moved among them. He loved them.

He had God's message, and he went in God's mood of compassion. We cannot help people until we understand them and love them.

GOD'S WATCHMAN

EZEKIEL reminded the people that he had been sent from God as a watchman, and he told them what terrible responsibility was upon him in warning them to repent and return unto God. Read Ezekiel 33:1-9.

If the watchman faithfully warns the people, and they refuse to heed the warning, their blood will not be on his hands; but if he fail to warn the people, their blood will be on his hands. Here is a lesson for every teacher and preacher and parent today.

And in this same 33rd chapter, Ezekiel goes on to declare God's attitude toward all sinners. "Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live —turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die?"

A WATCHMAN UNTO EXILES

"SON of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel," Ezekiel 3:17.

This was the explicit commission of God to Ezekiel. And grandly did Ezekiel accept and execute to the limit of his ability that commission.

The Jews were far from their beloved home. They were driven by hard masters. They could not sing the song of the Lord in a strange land. They had hanged their harps on the willow trees.

With a sensitive soul, Ezekiel comes to them with the word of hope. He reminds them of the goodness and mercy of Jehovah to their fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He lifts their drooping spirits with clear and ringing words of promise. He pleads with them to confess their sins and claim the pardoning mercy of a loving God.

He used numerous means of gaining their attention — symbols of their former communion with God. Patiently he traced the dealings of God with them and their fathers before them.

They listened, and all who heeded the pleas of the faithful watchman were saved and restored to faith in the goodness and mercy of God.

We, too, are watchmen among exiles. Let us learn the high art of Ezekiel in our ministry as watchman.

The churches will fail if the lessons of Sunday are forgotten on Monday and are laid aside for special observance on only one day of the week. — Wayne Morse, U. S. senator from Oregon.

QUESTION OF ANGLES

By FREDERICK SKERRY

A TRIANGLE? Sure, if you think in geometrical figures. But counting Mary Hill with the three men you'd have a square, wouldn't you?

Anyhow, we were on the Wild River bridge job. A nice change it was, too; with Barret Falls Center only a mile away; no construction camp in this picture. You could get room and board in somebody's house or you could take a room only and eat out. And the boys who hadn't been too quick in grabbing a room and board took their morning and evening meals at the Elite Lunch—that is, those who had got a peek at what was inside the three-sided counter, I did myself.

And Mary Hill was very good for the eyes. Fresh and sweet and cool-looking she was in her white rig, even on the hottest day—and lovely to look at. I figured she was 28 or 29.

That steel crew, though, was a new breed to Mary Hill. A happy-go-lucky bunch, as ready for a scrap as a frolic, working hard and playing hard. One night when I was almost the last to leave Mary said: "I suppose the danger you fellows are in all day makes you gay and light-hearted when you get away from it. Men fall sometimes, don't they?"

"Not often," I said. "It looks worse than it is. A man is careful. You get used to height."

By this time the competition for Mary was all but general. I was on the side lines, you might say. Being field engineer, I was some older than most of the boys—not so much, but enough to make me conscious of the difference. Jack Benz, Clem Sask and Dave Johnson seemed to be favored. Benz, a good-looking, wise-cracking chap, eventually monopolized Mary's time.

Dave Johnson was the quiet, serious kind, and an A-1 bridge jack. But, now that he seemed out of the running, he quit coming altogether. Clem Sask and Benz were not talking.

Working from both ends, we were now almost ready to join steel. Jack and Dave and Clem were together on the down river truss. They'd put the head of a strut or a diagonal in place for the riveters, then go down to bolt the foot. Dave was on a hanging platform below when Jack went down, leaving Sask to tighten the bolts, Jack had no sooner stepped on the platform — hadn't time to anchor his safety belt — when Clem Sask dropped a spanner. Clem let out a yell. But that seven-pound spanner was on its way and bounced off Jack's head.

And Jack toppled to follow it down to the river. All of him but his legs was off that six by six platform. But that was as far as he went because Dave had grabbed a suspension line and had thrown himself across Jack's legs. Then he reached down the other hand and took a fistful of Jack's over-all—and whatever was underneath it — and pulled Jack back. And it all happened while you'd be striking a match.

An ambulance took Jack to the nearest hospital, a small one in small town twenty miles away. I guess they felt at the hospital that this job on Jack was too much for them because they delivered Jack to a big city hospital.

We put it down as an accident. But I wished it hadn't happened between that particular pair. The news got to the Elite before we did, and Mary shared the general gloom. Later Clem asked for his time—which was just as well.

A few days later Dave began to eat again in the Elite. And I quit staying late to look at Mary when she wasn't constantly on the move.

A few weeks afterwards we were practically finished with the bridge; half the crew had left. One night I went to the picture house and saw Mary and Dave sitting a couple of rows in front. I figured that Dave was making up for lost time. After the show, while on my way to where I slept, I crossed the street just as a car popped out of a cross street. I got it in the right leg.

Evidently a busted leg wasn't too much for that little hospital in the next town; anyhow that's where I landed. Dave was waiting when they'd got my leg set and in a cast. I had been wondering about him and Mary, but he was no talker. But I was sure I'd find out something from Mary, if I could see her.

And I did see her the next afternoon; she walked into my room not a minute after visit-time began. But the only news she let out was that Dave had heard that Jack was getting on all right but would be laid up for a long time.

For three weeks Mary came every day.

Then the crew was through with the bridge, and Dave, making a last evening visit, was as dead-pan as ever. That puzzled me, and I banked on Mary being less shut-mouthed.

AND, thinking of her, I realized that once out of the hospital I'd see little of her. I had that load on my mind when she came next afternoon looking pleased as Punch. She told me how the gang had bid her good-bye the day before.

Then she said, "I had quite a compliment last night, Charlie: Dave asked me to marry him."

"Congratulations, Mary!" I said. "Dave is a grand guy." And I meant it.

"Yes, he is," she nodded. "He'll make a fine husband--for some girl who wants to worry about him while he's climbing over bridges. But I had to turn him down. I'll marry nobody I have to worry about at the start. That's that. Now look, I just talked with the doctor. He says you can leave here in two or three days, but you'll have to go easy on that leg, even after the cast is off. He's getting crutches for you. Now I have it all figured out. I have a perfectly good house and oodles of room, and nobody in it but myself — except when Ann James is there doing housework—and that's where you go from here."

"Listen, Mary," I put in. "You've been an angel of kindness. But there's a limit, I know what these small places are, Mary, and I won't have you talked about on my account . . ."

"I see what you mean. She looked down at me, and her eyes were dreamy. "Of course it would be nice . . ." I said nothing, and she wagged her head and looked at the ceiling.

"My heavens! Did a woman ever work harder for a man?"

That didn't make sense. "What man?" I said.

"You! Who else, for goodness sake?"

"Listen, Mary," I said. I felt all hollow inside. "Don't kid me—not about that."

"I'm not kidding—anything but."

And Jack toppled to follow it down to the river. All of him but his legs was off that six by six platform.

She reached out and grabbed my hand. "Charlie, you are dumb! Did you think I was a district nurse, or something — coming here every day?"

"But—" I could hardly speak. "I thought — well, with Jack and Dave . . ."

"Business, dear," she cut in. "I own the Elite Lunch, so why wouldn't I build up good will with the customers? You never asked me out."

"Not because I didn't want to," I said. "But all those fellows, Jack and Dave—"

She gave a kind of snort. "You didn't think a woman would be interested in the only man around who didn't seem interested in her. No. So I had to find out all about you from those others. And you had to go and get yourself hurt for me to get a good chance at you."

"Listen," I said, "A minute ago you said you wouldn't marry anybody who climbs bridges."

"I know I did," she admitted. "But your climbing days are over, Charlie—so Doc says."

That stopped me. Still, I could always have a good berth in the plant —or some other plant. My tongue seemed tied, but I managed to make it work. "Would you marry me, Mary?"

She was off the chair like a flash and sitting on the edge of the bed, holding my hands. "He's said it!" she laughed. "The dumb bunny has actually said it! Would I . . ."

So after all, you might say that the affair turned out to be a pentagon.

Enamel-Coated Tin Cans Play Part in Atom Role

In experimenting with radioactive chemicals from the atomic piles at Oak Ridge, plant scientists of the U. S. department of agriculture have stopped using the familiar clay pots and jars in their greenhouse experiments. Instead they are using inexpensive tin cans coated with enamel. After each experiment they discard the cans and soil that contains the radioactive material, and bury them deep in the ground to get rid of them.

The reason is simple. In checking the action of the radioactive chemicals moving out of the soil and into and through the plant, the scientists make use of the delicate "tracer" method. Counting instruments detect and record the passage of charged molecules as they pass through the plant tissues. It is necessary to have exact knowledge as to the radiant energy present at the start of the experiment. This is possible by using fresh soil, a new container and exactly measured quantities of radioactive chemicals.

But if a clay container had been used previously, the pot would have become at least slightly radioactive, and so would add some unmeasured radioactive energy that would complicate the experiment. It would disturb what the scientists term the "control" of conditions.

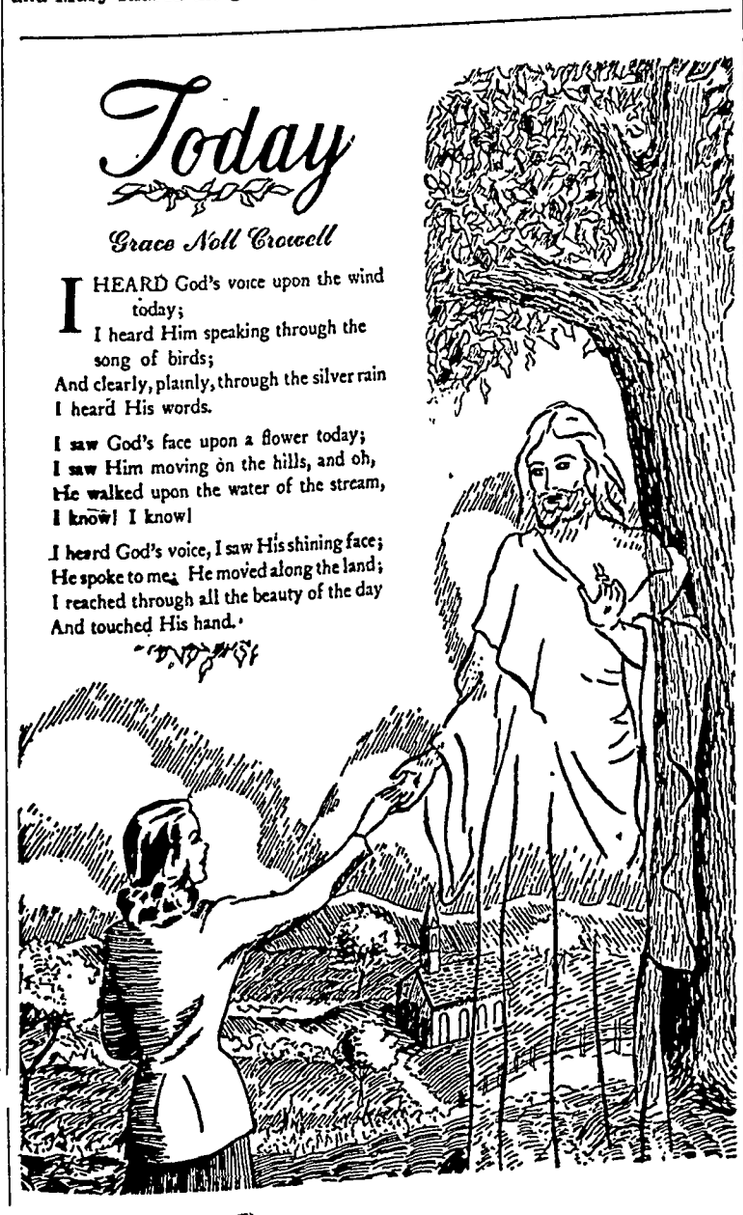
Today

Grace Noll Crowell

I HEARD God's voice upon the wind today;
I heard Him speaking through the song of birds;
And clearly, plainly, through the silver rain
I heard His words.

I saw God's face upon a flower today;
I saw Him moving on the hills, and oh,
He walked upon the water of the stream,
I know! I know!

I heard God's voice, I saw His shining face;
He spoke to me; He moved along the land;
I reached through all the beauty of the day
And touched His hand.



Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

ST. PETERSBURG happens to be baseball's headquarters in Florida, with the Cardinals and Yankees surrounded by the Red Sox, Tigers, Reds and Senators, with the Braves and Athletics not too far away. Here at least are most of the pennant contenders. But baseball isn't all they talk about.

The athlete, relaxing under the soft moon, is likely to talk about anything after the day's work is over. On this particular occasion we had a mixture of Yankees and Cardinals in one group and they were talking about the boxing game. They were talking about the mistakes that Joe Louis could make if he listened to Sol Strauss and Madison Square Garden, rather than follow his own native instincts.

Strauss is interested 98 per cent in the money side and 2 per cent in the sporting side which is natural in his position. Jersey Joe Walcott, no whirlwind as a fighter, deserves a far better break than he has been offered.

The ballplayers all knew this. They were somewhat amazed at the stand Louis had taken in regard to the June fight. They couldn't understand how Louis had slipped so far, especially in connection with a fighter from his own race. Apparently they knew little about the inside motives of the fight game and couldn't understand why any fight manager should get 10 per cent, much less 30 or 50 per cent. They plied their trade without any per cent. You had to agree with them here. I've never known a fight manager worth 15 per cent. Even 10 per cent is a high cut. A few can qualify beyond this mark.

"At least we don't have to be mixed up with those punks," one star outfielder said. "We are on our own. How did fighters ever get mixed up with managers, anyway?"

There could only be one answer. Around 90 per cent of all fighters are too dumb to know any of the answers. They needed someone who could add. One exception was Gene Tunney who happened to be considerably smarter than any manager around. Jack Dempsey got smarter a little later on. Among the smart fighters today we can give you Gus Lesnevich. The odds are he is no 30 per cent sucker.

The general opinion was that any fighter who ever paid a manager more than 10 per cent was too dumb to get anywhere in his own sport. This seems to be a reasonable assumption.

Baseball's Hall of Fame

That smothered growling you may or may not hear is coming from a cluster of old-time ballplayers and old-time sporting writers. It is tied up with baseball's Hall of Fame.

The old-timers are complaining that a flock of younger writers are picking modern players and are packing the dust of forgetfulness on many famous stars of the past. The indictment is worth looking over for it seems to be true.

For example, among those missing are Mordecai Brown and Johnny Kling, the famous Cub battery of 40 years ago that fought Mathewson and Bresnahan to a standstill. . . . Kid Nicholls, rated by Christy Mathewson as the best pitcher he ever faced. Nicholls starred in Boston. . . . Eagle-eyé Jake Beckley of the Reds. . . . Harry Heilmann . . . Jimmy Foxx . . . two great hitters.

Brown and Kling plus Brown and Archer fed the Giants and other National League teams enough poison to kill off a dozen zoos. As great a pitcher as Matty was, Brownie beat him in their last nine meetings.

It is too late for Brownie now so far as any personal thrill is concerned, but many of his fans would appreciate the delayed and deserved honor.

The longer these forgotten old-timers are left off, the deeper they are shoved back into obscurity. Their chance of making the upland country grows bleaker year after year.

Baseball's Hall of Fame is too great an institution to be overcrowded. A galaxy that knows Ruth, Cobb, Cy Young, Mathewson, Alexander, Walter Johnson, Eddie and Jimmy Collins among so many others should be more carefully watched.

It is a mistake to take in too many at one sitting. It is better to have too few. Once they are in, they are in forever. Certainly a group of stars that doesn't carry the names of Mordecai "Three-Finger" Brown and Kid Nicholls can't be called complete.

The dungeon of oblivion is a tough citadel to break open. From now on, the Hall of Fame should be more carefully watched and guarded. It is certainly no frivolous or empty honor. At least it shouldn't be.

Race Outlook Good

New Jersey and other eastern tracks are looking in the general direction of the best racing season in many campaigns. This doesn't mean the largest crowds and the heaviest mutuel play. It means the best horses and the most interesting season.

Birthday Party Held For Editor Friday Night

Friday evening a number of folks came to the R. A. Jorgenson home to help the Editor celebrate his birthday which was Wednesday, March 24th.

The Editor has a rule that he only plays bridge when there is snow on the ground. The weather man was against him . . . not only was there snow on the ground but the electricity went on a spree and most of the games were played under candle light and an old kerosene lamp.

After the games the Editor accumulated a fine lunch (provided by the visitors) and also a tie that is "conservative" enough to wear to a prize fight! The Editor was not expert enough to win any of the prizes.

Deyoe was elected state superintendent in 1911 and the family resided in Des Moines since that date. Surviving are 2 stepchildren, Allen Deyoe of South America and Dorothy Deyoe of Des Moines.

Impatience Kills Pedestrians

Are you always in a hurry? Lots of people are They scurry around like dry leaves in an autumn breeze. They flit hither and yon, accomplishing little, but leaving the impression that their time is the most precious commodity on earth.

But life is precious, too. Every three minutes two pedestrians are killed or injured somewhere on our nation's highways.

Chances are that most of these people were in a hurry. They took the short way across the corner of the block, instead of the safe way at the marked intersection. They stepped out from behind a parked car instead of looking both ways to see if the road was clear.

IMPATIENCE is the nation's Number One Highway Killer. Time is precious—sure! But not enough to pay for it with a life. Lost time can sometimes be made up, but death is permanent.

Teach Them To Drive

"The chief function of the high school is to teach our young people to do better those desirable things they are going to do anyway."

Thorough knowledge of the laws of the road and practical application of mechanical operation of a motor vehicle is not only desirable for our high school students, but is a necessity in the economic life of our country.

No one is in a better position to render the youth of this nation a great and humanitarian service than is the educator planning driving education and driver training in our high schools.

Wayne Rasmus of Garner, a twin brother of Dean Rasmus of Klemme, suffered a broken leg Thursday of last week and is recuperating in the Forest City hospital. Wayne on his motorcycle and a car got into a mix-up at an intersection and Wayne was thrown off of his machine which evidently tipped over on him, causing a fracture.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

COUNTY PRINTING

"It seems mighty pecular that a printing shop, such as this one, is able to do satisfactorily and economically job work for the state printing board (we have 3 jobs in the shop now), yet some of the county officers must have so much of their work done outside of the county (including the purchase of record forms and books; this means local tax-paying printing firms derive no benefit whatsoever from the transactions. In fact, in recent proceedings amounts exceeding $1,400 were expended by county offices for supplies, records, etc. with out-of-the county printing houses and supply firms. Perhaps, a county printing board is needed, or isn't that the answer."

The above editorial appeared in the Garner Leader last week.

The Editor of The Klemme Times supports Mr. Elling's views with a loud "Amen, brother."

The Klemme Times has done considerable State printing for the past three years . . . and some of the jobs have been large ones, one job requiring nearly a ton of paper! Several State jobs are being processed in our shop now.

There is not a single job that goes out of the Court House but what can just as well go through the hands of the local printers. If it should be even a large leather-bound, ruled record book, that can be handled, or anything in the way of printing of any kind, size or type.

We believe our county officials have just gotten into a "rut" as it is so easy to hand an order out to a salesman when he calls. Perhaps they do not realize that ANY printing can be handled right here at home and perhaps even save the tax-payers money besides.

CHICKEN GROWERS MAKE NEW PLANS

Cheaper Feeds and Steady Egg Prices Mean A Smaller Flock Reduction

Farmers have changed their minds about raising chickens this year. They will probably have bigger flocks than they originally planned.

The recent sharp decline in prices of feed, coupled with little change in the prices of eggs, is responsible, reports Francis Kutish, Iowa State College agricultural economist.

On February 1, surveys showed that farmers intended to purchase 20 percent fewer chicks than last year. Recent price developments have made it likely that the reduction will be only about 10 percent.

Turkey Outlook

But the outlook for Thanksgiving turkeys next fall is still gloomy. There is an 18 percent decrease in the purchase of turkey poults this year. Even though the feed situation is now more favorable, there aren't enough hatching eggs to assure a big turkey crop. The number of breeder hens on farms Jan. 1 was one-third below last year, and the lowest on record.

Not only that, but storage stocks are down, too. It all adds up to about one-fourth less turkeys for the 1948 holiday season, Kutish said.

Educational Trip

Mrs. Quinten Stille took her rural pupils on an educational trip Thursday when they went to visit the Library. Each pupil selected a book to take home to read. Mrs. Stille has taken her pupils on several educational trips which the pupils enjoy and also learn "what the rest of the world is doing."

Entertained At Court Whist

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Neuberger entertained a group of young people at their home east of town Sunday evening as a farewell party for Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Kluckhohn who will move to Stanhope, Iowa.

A nice lunch was served and Mr. and Mrs. Kluckhohn were presented with a nice gift.

Mason Plan Big Meeting

There will be a special meeting of Bethel Lodge at Garner this week Friday evening when work will be put on by a group of men from Des Moines. All Masons are invited to attend.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Masaryk's Death Crystallizes Red Menace as U.S. Prepares to Act; Spring Rash of Strikes Breaks Out

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

MASARYK:
Death in Prague

Whether Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, took his own life or was liquidated by the Communists really didn't make any difference.

The Communist government had announced that he had leaped to his death from a first, second or third-floor window (U. S. newspaper readers could choose their own version) of the foreign office ...gue.

...ter reports by "highly authoritative persons" insisted that Masaryk had been murdered by Communists. An alleged "eyewitness" testified that he had seen Masaryk's body after its reported fall to a concrete pavement and that it bore no evidence that the foreign minister had died in such a manner.

Supporting the murder theory was the fact that Masaryk was reported to have met President Edouard Benes the day before his death, and the two were said to have planned something the Communists wished to prevent.

Unidentified Czech officials who have escaped from Prague reported also that President Benes was a prisoner of the Communist regime.

But whether Jan Masaryk, son of the founder of the Czechoslovakian republic, had been murdered or goaded to suicide by his intolerable position, one thing was certain: Communists had killed him just as surely as if they had put a pistol to his head and pulled the trigger.

If Masaryk took his own life it was not just because he was seeking an escape, but because it was the last service he could do for his country—throwing light, by his own destruction, on the terrible, destructive force that is communism.

NERVES:
Warlike

The alternate, ostentatious flexing of muscles by the United States and Russia was, it appeared, shifting in status from a cold war to a war of nerves.

There were the unmistakable signs of the military preparing to reassert itself. Many reserve officers had received letters pointing out that, although they were not being called to active duty immediately, they would do well to prepare themselves for such a possible eventuality.

In the Pentagon building in Washington, army planners were working late at their desks. Procurement officers were reported to be showing great interest in cement factories, since cement is vital in building underground shelters and fortifications.

Russian troops were said to be massing in eastern Germany, but no one would venture to say whether this was true bluff, a threat of retaliation to the Marshall plan and union of western Europe, or a show of force intended to influence the coming elections in Italy.

But President Truman himself precipitated the worst outbreak of war jitters when he publicly proclaimed that his faith in real world peace had been shaken.

In this crisis the U. S. government was stressing these points which embodied administration policy for meeting the situation:

1. The European recovery plan should be carried out promptly.
2. The U. S. encourages formation of what Marshall called a political association in western Europe as the first step toward restoring stability.
3. Spread of Communist governments anywhere in the world, including China is opposed by the American government which will do everything in its power to block communism.
4. The U. S. will continue to work for world peace wherever possible.

Finally, any estimate of the situation must include this inescapable conclusion: Neither Russia nor the U. S. wants war now; and, more important, neither could afford to fight one. This particular decade continues to be a period worked by a shifting of forces and consolidation of strength where it will do the most good if and when the real showdown comes.

The Way Out

Added to the list of the world's numberless martyrs for liberty was the name of Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, son of Thomas Masaryk who was the first president and liberator of the country.

STRIKES:
Miners

Widespread strikes in the nation's soft coal fields were touched off by John L. Lewis' latest foray into the national scene, a demand for $100-a-month pensions for his miners.

The United Mine Workers leader had asked rank-and-file "reaction" to his charge that coal operators had "dishonored" the 1947 contract by failing to grant pensions. And his miners produced the exact reaction he wanted as almost 200,000 of them in 11 states quit to support Lewis' stand at the very outset of the difficulties.

It was not a strike in the technical sense of the word. Lewis, in all his power, simply had nodded his shaggy head and his men, quick to catch the signal, walked away from their jobs.

The current mine contract does not expire until June 30, but it provides that the miners need work only as long as they are "willing and able."

Impact of the soft coal walkouts showed first in the nation's steel industry where output is threatened if the shutdowns continue for any length of time. Many of the closed mines are "captives" whose entire output goes to the steel companies.

Packers

Fraught with an even greater immediacy than the mine walkout, however, was a nationwide strike for more pay by 100,000 members of the CIO packinghouse workers.

The strike went off as scheduled despite an urgent request by President Truman asking the packing companies and workers' representatives to maintain the status quo without interrupting negotiations until April 1, at which time a board of inquiry was slated to report to him on conditions of the strike.

In reply to the President, the union strike board rejected his proposal because, it said, the packing firms would not agree to placing even their wage proposals into effect during the negotiation.

As the strike began, government records indicated that the entire nation would come to feel the curtailed meat supply after the first week, with some areas more severely affected than others.

GOVERNMENT:
Expensive

Total per capita cost of running the federal government for one year has zoomed $201 since 1939, according to a report by the Tax Foundation. It now is about $270 a year, compared with $69 in 1939.

Total estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1948 are 3.7 billion dollars. War and its aftermath accounted for almost 23 billion of that.

But the blueprint for 1949, said the foundation, registers an increase. It quoted President Truman:

"In the fiscal year of 1949, 79 per cent of our expenditures reflect the cost of war, the effect of war and our efforts to prevent a future war."

TREATY:
50 Years

Communist expansion was going to meet a roadblock if the nations of western Europe had any voice in the matter.

Britain, France and the Benelux (Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg) nations adopted a 50-year treaty for a political, economic and military union of western Europe in an out and out move to check the communism that threatens their independence.

Delegates from the five countries completed their efforts after more than a week around the conference table. The alliance was a direct out-growth of the union of western European nations suggested in January by Ernest Bevin, British foreign secretary.

The treaty was believed to bind the nations to mutual assistance in the face of aggression, mutual aid in the economic field, co-operation in improving their living standards and a measure of coordination of colonial resources.

It was just a beginning, but a good one. In the eyes of U. S. government leaders the alliance was not only a desirable but necesary element if the Marshall plan for recovery is to work at all.

SAY UNCLE:
Palestine

People continue to ask the Arabs and Jews of Palestine to stop their futile wrangling.

France, China and the United States sent an appeal to the Jews and Arabs of Palestine and also to the six Arab state members of the United Nations, asking them to take steps to promote a truce in the Holy Land fighting.

There was no real confidence among delegates of the three nations that their request would be heeded. Russia, the fourth country taking part in the big power talks on Palestine, refrained from joining in the appeal because the Soviets have taken the typical stand that there is no need for the big powers to consult with the Arabs and Jews.

Most observers thought the truce appeal looked like wishful thinking. For one thing, no group among either Arabs or Jews in Palestine is in a position to control its dissident members and thus guarantee a truce.

Moreover, the idea of a military truce does not bear upon the heart of the problem. The United Nations is still committed, on paper, to partition, while the Arabs adamantly continue to reject that proposal and the Jews assert just as strongly that they will accept nothing else.

ACCIDENTS:
Women's

Accident rate among girls and women has been reduced by about one-half in the past 35 years as a result of modernization of the American home, according to statistics compiled by Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Illustrating the reduction in home hazards, the statisticians said, are the shift from oil lamps and gas for lighting to the electric light bulb, replacing of the traditional coal stove by the modern gas or electric range, and use of central heating instead of stoves and fireplaces.

Headliners

IN DETROIT . . . Gary Batherson (right) saved Marlene Padar's life when they broke through the ice on a pond where they were playing, then suffered painful aftermath of heroism when Marlene insisted on bestowing a big smooch on his shrinking cheek.

IN CRANSTON, R. I. . . . Frank Trifolgio, serving a four-year term for automobile theft, escaped from state prison by stealing a prison automobile.

IN TORONTO . . . Mary Richardson attended the annual convention of the Prospectors and Developers association, was the lucky winner of the door prize—a genuine gold brick.

IN DAYTON . . . Garret H. Pumpley, only fireman at a school having 13 furnaces, was ordered to bed by his doctor to recover from a bad attack of overwork.

IN PECATONICA, Ill. . . . A farm horse, marooned on an isolated piece of wooded farmland for more than a week by flood waters, was kept from starvation by fodder dropped to him from an airplane.

Consumer Income Up

Consumer income rose in January to a record high annual rate of 210.8 billion dollars, the commerce department announced.

The figure for December was 210 4 billion dollars. The January rate, according to the department, was 7 per cent higher than the 1947 average of 196.8 billion.

January's increase over December came despite a slight downturn in wages and salaries.

SHIFTING WORLD

Nobody Worries About 'Tissick' Now

City dwellers of 300 years ago—the inhabitants of London in the year 1648, for instance—were only half as likely to be killed in accidents as are the metropolites of today.

But they were several times as likely to die from tuberculosis or other diseases with such fearful names as spotted fever, purples, rising of the lights, plague in the guts, tissick, imposthume and others, says a study of early and present-day mortality by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

The king's horsemen were the fastest traffic to contend with in 1648. The automobile was still 250 years in the future.

Science Talent Quest Shows Aid To Progress

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—I don't often go into such intimate matters as private murders in these columns, but I have been impressed lately to see the results of the untrammelled spirit of modern youth, whose repressions and inhibitions have been removed by thoughtful parents who use reason instead of the cruel discipline such as I have suffered—having to go to bed without supper, for instance, when I was impudent to my elders, or being kept in the house for throwing my arithmetic at the cat instead of doing my homework, or having my mouth washed out with acme soap when I used language unbecoming a future commentator.

Recently a pretty little brunette who was irked by having to leave the city to dwell with her parents in some dull rural area of Missouri rebelled. After shooting Mama and Papa, she stuffed them behind the sofa and tried to dispose of their property. Then there was the poor little seventh-grader who smarted under thoughtless taunting by a farmer who thought the youth displayed poor form in sawing wood The boy shot the old man and dumped him in a creek.

There was the 18-year-old girl from Portsmouth, Va., who playfully sprayed five G.I.'s with revolver shots in a shooting gallery, and the six girls, aged 14 to 16, who beat up their female gym instructor in a Bronx high school.

Of course I am not old-fashioned enough to encourage corporal punishment, but it does seem that a little less sparing of the rod might have prevented spoiling the crime record of the peaceful communities from which these youngsters came.

Perhaps it wouldn't have helped, though, when the nations of the world set such bad examples.

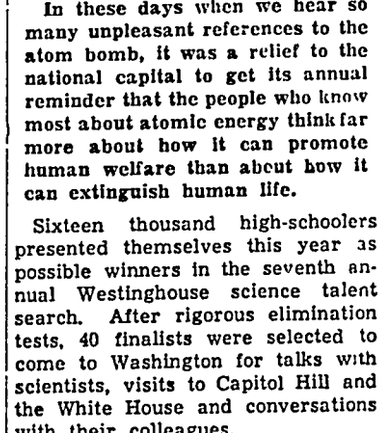
I couldn't help thinking of a paragraph in the concluding chapter of that highly important and revealing book by former Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Said Hull (and I can see him leaning back as he dictated, looking over the wide sweep of the Maryland landscape, letting his thoughts go back over the rich days of his years): "We have a desperate need for more religion and morality as the background for government. The religious and moral foundations for thought and conduct require strengthening here as well as throughout the world. There is no higher civilizing influence than religious and moral concepts Corruption and tyranny can be driven out of government only when these concepts give men the faculty to recognize such evils and the strength to eliminate them."

In these days when we hear so many unpleasant references to the atom bomb, it was a relief to the national capital to get its annual reminder that the people who know most about atomic energy think far more about how it can promote human welfare than about how it can extinguish human life.

Sixteen thousand high-schoolers presented themselves this year as possible winners in the seventh annual Westinghouse science talent search. After rigorous elimination tests, 40 finalists were selected to come to Washington for talks with scientists, visits to Capitol Hill and the White House and conversations with their colleagues.

These 40 students have a reasonable assurance of scholarships of $1,000 each from various sources, aside from the search awards, while the two lucky top winners each are given $2,400 with which to continue their studies.

There was another interesting thing about this year's awards—the revelation that America still is drawing heavily on the Old World for its scientific talent. The boy who won the top prize was born in Budapest.



Andrew Kende displays his experiments with new solvents to reduce explosion hazards.

He is Andrew Kende, a 15-year-old chemist, a handsome youngster, five feet eight inches tall. Of the 40 finalists, five were born in Europe, and 26 parents of the 40 finalists were foreign-born.

The girl winner was 17-year-old Barbara Claire Wolff of Flushing, L. I., (where the United Nations has its headquarters although there is no connection). All the contestants must have worked on a special scientific project, and Miss Wolff devoted her time to production of phenocopies. Now, if you raise fruit, you will be interested in this, although you probably wouldn't recognize a phenocopy if you met it on one of your strolls through your orchard.

A phenocopy is a change—a change in the body-shape of a fruit fly. The fly itself will not be permitted to get at your fruit. Its eggs have been dyed and irradiated, observation of which processes in the long run probably will help the fruit industry. When Miss Wolff isn't dying eggs—and irradiating them—she is editing her school paper, playing badminton, studying, and, we suppose, practicing the modern dance and enjoying her clubs, which include math, cancer and microscopy organizations.

Young Kende's project has to do with removing or reducing explosion hazards in the chemical processes by which such modern synthetics as the silicones, sex hormones and some synthetic rubbers are produced commercially. Some day, thanks to him, men and women may be able to face the most alluring hormone or the most explosive overshoe or automobile tire in comparative safety, and may even be able to walk right up to a silicone and slap it on the back.

The 40 finalists were reminded by Watson Davis, Science Service director; Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard college observatory, and W. W. Waymack, atomic energy commissioner, that it is not, enough these days, however, for scientists to stick to their scientific last, letting the rest of the world go by.

As Dr. Shapely put it: "Don't be so laborious in your laboratories that you ignore your responsibilities as citizens." And as Waymack warned: "Nowadays the scientists must not only aid in the creation of knowledge, but in the dissemination and use of that knowledge for the general welfare."

Unfortunately, there are all too few trained scientists in this atomic age. As the report of the President's scientific research board pointed out, the technological and scientific progress of this country depends upon one-half of 1 per cent of our population—some 750,000 persons This small group comprises the trained manpower—the scientists, technicians and engineers upon which the operation and the expansion of our economy depends. And those actually engaged in scientific research, technical development or teaching comprise a much smaller group within this pool—only 137,000 persons

The science talent search and similar projects undertaking to discover and encourage youthful scientific talents are helping to ensure the future security and prosperity of the United States which depend as never before on the rapid extension of scientific knowledge—not only because the laboratory is the first line of defense in wartime and the scientist is the indispensable warrior, but also because scientific discovery is the basis for our progress against poverty and disease.

Ex-G.I.'s can upset the budget again this year. In its attempt to trim Mr. Truman's spending, congress makes no allowance for nearly 500 million dollars still unclaimed in terminal leave pay due enlisted men. The President's bulging budget set aside only five million dollars for this item, just 1 per cent of the total possible cost.

* * *

In contrast to the usual Hollywood practice, the government's film production includes none of the usual "thrillers." Latest 25-minute short subject made by Uncle Sam bears the prosaic title, "Toward a Uniform Plumbing Code." Other recent "sockeroos" cover movies on blister rust control, Japanese agriculture, foot and mouth disease.

Some of the people who say they would rather be right than president don't get the chance they deserve.

WASHINGTON'S DITCH . . . Great Dismal swamp canal, first surveyed by George Washington, here goes through the forbidding swamp which has piqued the curiosity of men for generations.

Army To Restore Canal Through Famous Swamp

By WNU Features

Oldest man-made waterway in the United States again will carry pleasure and business traffic through one of the most fascinating areas in the world with restoration of the Great Dismal swamp canal, often referred to as "George Washington's ditch," to its standard nine-foot channel depth. Work will be done under direction of army engineers.

The canal, connecting the Elizabeth river in Virginia with Albermarle sound in North Carolina, is in use today but lack of engineering attention in recent years has prevented full use of its facilities.

The nickname, "George Washington's ditch," stems from the fact that Washington himself surveyed the canal in 1763 and later invested in a company which proposed to drain the Great Dismal in an ambitious land development scheme.

The canal, dug by slave labor, was not navigable, however, until 1822.

Drainage Cuts Area

The canal originally cut through one of the most famous swamps in the world—one which has piqued the curiosity of men ever since they first came to its green edge and were repelled by its desolate defenses. But now drainage has shrunk the area from 2,200 to 750 miles and the canal itself leads through considerable cultivated land.

The canal is fed by the "feeder ditch," a straight canal which brings water from gloomy Lake Drummond in the very heart of the swamp. Navigable for small boats, the feeder ditch is the usual entry for explorers and curiosity seekers.

George Moore, the poet, was among literary lights who have been fascinated by the Great Dismal. He visited the lake in 1804 and while there wrote his "Lady of the Dismal Swamp."

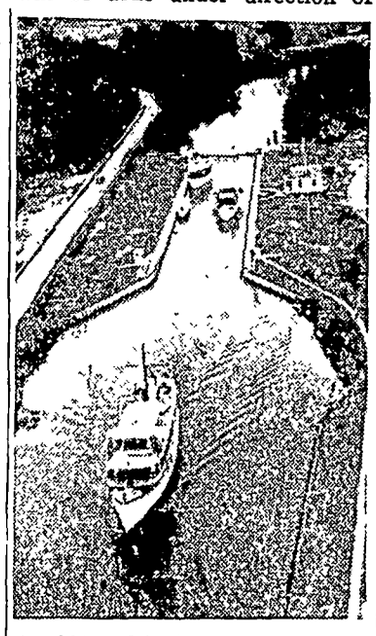
Probably the first white man to penetrate the swamp was William Byrd, who named it. In his Dividing Line History, Byrd relates that his party often could progress at the rate of only one mile a day. He adds that he "liked no part of it."

Subsequent expeditions have revealed the swamp rich in flora and fauna. Owned mostly by lumbering interests, the swamp has yielded large harvests of gum, cypress and other timber. It now is proposed to preserve it as a national forest.

Deer and bear still abound in some portions although not in as large numbers as previously. At one time a hunter killed 30 bears in a single year. Birds which nest on the ground are scarce but Lake Drummond and tributaries are considered good fishing waters. Copperhead snakes also are prevalent and are reported to have fallen into boats from overhanging boughs.

Juniper water flowing out of Lake Drummond is a deep red and is considered by most "swampers" to have tonic values. At one time it was taken aboard ships for drinking water, since it reputedly would not grow stale. In fact, one enterprising man bottled it in Baltimore for sale as a health-giving beverage.

Curiously, Lake Drummond occupies a depression which is on a ridge higher than the rest of the swamp. For this reason it is considered likely that the swamp could be reclaimed entirely but a proposal to do this several years ago brought protests from nearby farmers, who claimed the swamp had a beneficial effect on local weather.



CANAL LOCKS . . . One of the two locks on Great Dismal swamp canal, which take care of a nine-foot drop in the terrain.

Easterner's Yen Realized at Sale

CANON CITY, Colo.—Because he "just got a bug on owning a ghost town," Cecil R. Miller, Cincinnati electrician, bought one at a delinquent tax sale here.

Miller, chief electrician for a Cincinnati newspaper, saw the former mining town of Whitehorn, 60 miles northwest of Canon City, during his summer vacation. After persuading the county to offer it for sale, he returned here by plane to purchase the 332 acres for $1,550.

Vets Seek Entry Into Poor House

MONTROSE, Colo.—House-hunting World War II veterans here are trying to get into the poor house.

Long abandoned, the county farm and poor house recently was sold for $10,000 and the new owners plan to use it for veterans' housing.

Irritated by Tickets, Motorist Sends Bill

PORTLAND, Ore. — Irritated with the way traffic officers gave him parking tickets, Carl A. Peterson decided to do something about it. So he mailed City Auditor W. E. Gibson a bill for $6.80 to cover repairs on his windshield wiper, which he contended had been broken three times by patrolmen attaching the tickets.

Old Way of Milking Works, Police Insist

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—The old-fashioned way of milking cows may not be as fast but it gets the same results, Milwaukee police insist.

During a power failure a woman called police headquarters to complain she was unable to milk 24 head of cattle because there was no power to operate her milking machine and asked what to do.

"Lady," said the desk man, "I guess you'll have to do what you did before you had that machine."

Rajah Returned from 'Dead' Wins Domain

LONDON—Claim of a "dead" rajah to a vast Indian domain that had been contested in Indian courts for a quarter of a century was upheld by the privy council, highest judicial authority in the British empire.

Victor in the protracted legal battle was Ramendra Narayan Roy, second son of the rajah of Bhowal, who claimed he was revived by a rainstorm and rescued from a funeral pyre in 1909. He said he had lived with beggars for 12 years.

The council's ruling dismissed the appeal of Ranee Bibhabati, who said she was the widow of the claimant. She insisted her husband died at Darjeeling in 1909 and was cremated.

The privy council decision was against a majority decision of the high court of Calcutta granting title to the estates, which yield $400,000 a year.

Democrat chiefs are grim over the report that Time-Life publinsher H. Luce's private poll shows 15 million are for Wallace. That's about 10 per cent of the population . . . Jim Farley threw a private party for 27 political writers. Said he wouldn't consider running as veepee on any losing ticket and he feels sure the Trumanagerie can't win . . . The presidential situation is a mess. Truman won't listen to Wallace. Dewey won't listen to Taft and Eisenhower won't listen to the people. . . . NBC banned Spike Jones' version of "My Old Flame" long ago. "Too gruesome." Pretty smalltime, too . . . This is the opening paragraph of Time's International section: "Every month brings a calamity graver than most major battles. Millions pass into slavery between one week and the next. The fate of whole continents swings with a day's news. A fifth of the world's people are involved in actual war. No place, from the Congo to Spitsbergen, is safe. Nobody is secure." . . . This is the news weekly that repeatedly chastised us for "frightening the people" and "warning of the danger of another war."

Columnist Marquis Child's report: "Until the disaster to Czechoslovakia there was a comforting feeling here in Washington that the danger of war was something fairly remote, a matter of five or seven years. The comfortable assurance has vanished." . . . Some fellow-newspapermen try to make our predictions look bad. But the fellow-travelers in Europe make them look good.

Postcard Poll This is the final report on the "I want to see ——— as our next president" postcard pool. Over 100,000 postcards came in.

Wallace	19,374
Dewey	10,221
Vanderberg	5,817
Truman	5,060
Stassen	4,684
Taft	3,331

I can't resist adding this footnote. Bricker of Ohio, who for years has been getting away with the counterfeit claim that the people of this country wanted him for president, polled exactly 105 postcards. This columnist (tsk, tsk) polled more than 500 Politically speaking, this means that the only thing Bricker can carry is his suitcase.

"No, she isn't."

"Are you sure Dorothy Parker isn't there?" insisted the voice.

"Positive," Bob assured.

"Well," the phone caller persisted, "how do you KNOW Dorothy isn't there?"

"Because," he replied, "this is the men's room at the Waldorf."

The End of Don Wahn: Philip Stack's name must be familiar to you. He has been contributing to this column over the name of Don Wahn for 25 years. His offerings always popped up in other places . . . In an army magazine signed by someone else, usually by a G.I. hoping his girl might see it. . . . But many times a chorus girl or plain Jane Doakes would open her purse and reveal several of them clipped or torn from the column. His last note was in the handwriting we were so familiar with for a quarter of a century: "I am incurably ill," it said, "I leave everything to my wife. Goodbye, Phil Stack." And then at 10 minutes past midnight Phil jumped from the Gibson firm's offices. A cab driver racing north said he saw the body plummeting down. Now he is gone and the last Don Wahn he submitted was set in type for the very night he jumped, darn it.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: Ezekiel 18; 34; 36 22-38, 37:1-14.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Ezekiel 34: 25-31.

His Message to Exiles

Lesson for April 11, 1948

CONTINUING the theme of last Sunday's lesson, we go further into the ministry of Ezekiel as God's messenger to a people in exile. For this Sunday we have chapters 18 and 34, and portions of the 36th and 37th chapters.

Dr. Newton

The 18th chapter opens with a revealing rebuke to Ezekiel. God tells him expressly that he is not to say any more to the Jews that "the fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Isreal. Behold, all souls are mine." And then God adds, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

GOD'S LOVE AND CARE

ALL through these chapters in Sunday's lesson, two solemn truths appear—God's love for his people, manifest in unwearied care; and the responsibility of each soul for the sin which such commits against God.

This truth, or these truths, I should say, are equally applicable for us today. As Ezekiel was sent to remind the people of God's love and care, so must we, early in our youth, accept the responsibility of accepting his love or rejecting his love.

We cannot claim his care if we despise his will. That is the message of Ezekiel for us.

WHAT GOD IS LIKE

NOWHERE in the Old Testament is the love of God more manifest and compelling than in Ezekiel 34:11-27. I hope that you will open your Bible to this passage. Here the Bible speaks in words that burn with the compassionate love of God for sinful souls.

"I will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and I will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day . . . And I will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers."

One is reminded here of Jesus, when he said, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

A NEW HEART

"A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you," Ezekiel 36:26.

Here we have, perhaps, the sublimest sentence in the prophecy of Ezekiel. God is speaking. Ezekiel is merely the messenger — the voice, as John the Baptist delighted to describe himself.

Ezekiel has faithfully declared that each individual is responsible unto God, and just as faithfully he has proclaimed God's love and care, and now he adds the third great truth, namely, that God waits to bestow the new heart and the new spirit to every repentant soul.

A new heart and a new spirit. That is what the Jews needed. That is what the world needs today—a new heart and a new spirit. Only God could give a new heart then, and only God can make such gift today.

EZEKIEL'S MESSAGE FOR US

WOULD we listen to Ezekiel today? He has the message we need above all other words that may be spoken. He called the Jews to repentance of sin. That is what America needs today. Boys and girls need it. Men and women need it. And just as God waited patiently to bestow the new heart and spirit to Israel in the long ago, so does he wait to grant us today a new heart and a new spirit.

"Our God, our help, in ages past,
Our Hope for years to come;
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."

There's No Substitute

"I thoroughly believe in a university education for both men and women, but I believe that a knowledge of the Bible without a college course is more valuable than a college course without the Bible. Every one who has a thorough knowledge of the Bible may be truly called educated, and no other learning, or culture — no matter how extensive and elegant—can be a proper substitute."

Household Hints By Mary Jane

Last-Minute Scallop:

As the name of this casserole dish implies, it's a wonder dish for the tired working gal, the homemaker who gets home late from her bridge club or from a day of shopping.

It consists of a combination of hard-cooked eggs, canned or cooked peas and well seasoned white sauce, and some left over meat, or canned shrimp.

If your are forsighted enough to keep a few eggs already hard-cooked in your refrigerator, the dish can be assembled in a jiffy.

-gredients:

6 hard-cooked eggs, 1 cup of cooked meat or canned shrimp; 1 cup canned or cooked peas, 2 cups well seasoned medium white sauce, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, three-fourths cup buttered crumbs.

Method:

Add lemon juice and onion to white sauce. Arrange layers of sliced eggs, meat, and peas in a shallow breasod baking dish, top w.th sauce and a generous layer of crumbs. Bake in a 425 degree oven about tweny five minutes, or until the sauce is bubbly and the crumbs are nicely browned.

When it comes to topping casseroles, there are any number of choices other than buttered crumbs. Use any dry crisp cereal, rolled to the desired fineness of crumb and toss with melted butter or crisp corn shreds usually used as appetizers give a nice brown crust and corn flavor. Potato chips make a good topping, too. Or you can try crumbs and nuts rolled fine. Brazil nuts and almonds lend themselves well uses of this kind for they are not sweet and the texture is crisp and crunchy.

"Pal" is no more. A dog, who used to cause a few raised eyebrows in Rerfield because he was frequently found sleeping on the hood of his owner's car in the downtown district, was struck by another car recently and was killed. Pal belonged to Seymour Dalen and was also an "honorary member" of the Redfield fire department.

WOULDN'T TIP

A ten pin which wobbled, but wouldn't tip over, kept George Delperdang of Remsen from having a perfect bowling game there one night recently. The mishap happened on the first frame. Mr. Delperdang then rolled 11 consecutive strickes and followed them with a twelfth, which didn't count, just to see if he could do it.

Septic Tank Overflow Can Contaminate Water

A field tile system or an open ditch is not the proper place to dispose of the overflow from a septic tank.

Any disposal system which might tend to pollute water supplies is dangerous, says Harold Beaty, Iowa State College agricultural engineer.

The tile disposal field should be at least 100 feet from water sources, if possible, and it should always be at a lower surface elevation. The site should slope away from the house, and away from the source of water. Gentle and unshaded slopes free from trees or shrubbery are best.

Root-free locations are important because the open-pointed tile cannot be "root-proofed." Porous, well-drained, gravelly or sandy soil allows greater purification. In heavy soils a gravel fill of from 18 inches to 2 feet can be placed in the trench under the disposal tile.

Allow sufficient area, where available, to enlarge the field later if needed, Beaty advises.

Even the Magnetic Poles Succumb to Wanderlust

Victims of wanderlust, both the north and south magnetic poles are constantly on the move. Further evidence was provided by Adm. Richard E. Byrd's expedition to the south pole, during which geologists learned that the south magnetic pole has moved possibly 70 miles westward in the last six years.

The south pole, they decided, is somewhere in Victoria land about 1,000 miles northwest of Little America. Exactly where it is nobody knows. The geologists, measuring the earth's magnetic field at Little America, found changes since 1941 which indicate that the pole has moved roughly 70 miles farther away from Little America.

Why the magnetic poles have wanderlust is not known. What causes the earth's magnetism and what magnetism is also are mysteries.

The magnetic pole actually is not one single point, but a number of points or poles over a fairly large area. These points change position, and the whole area embraced by these poles also moves. It can be compared to your hand. Hold your hand palm up and bend the fingers like prongs. By wiggling the fingers you change the position of the finger tips. By moving the entire hand you move the whole area of the finger tips.

Over each of these points a perfectly balanced magnetic needle will dip vertically downward. On the 1911-1914 Australasian Antarctic expedition led by Sir Douglas Mawson, one party probably got within 50 miles of the then magnetic south pole. They measured a dip of 89 degrees 43½ minutes, just 16½ minutes from the vertical.

Home Baking's Tantalizing Aroma Will Fill Air Again

During the war a great many women who had been pie and cake bakers took to the corner bakery or the packaged product. This was largely because they couldn't get supplies. Sugar and fats were short and wartime flour brought unexpected and not always happy results.

Will they go back to baking at home, now that fats are obtainable, flour is as fine as it ever was, and the sugar ration extended?

There are straws in the wind which indicate they will. One grocery broker ventures a guess that sales of pie crust, biscuit mixes and cake flours have quadrupled since the end of the war.

A recent survey shows that 85 out of 100 women make pies at home and that 13 per cent of those 85 use prepared pie crust.

When sugar allotments are increased there will be promotion in the retail stores to encourage the sale of home baking items. "Now You Can Bake Again" is the story, and it will be tied in with products such as cake flour, baking powder and baking chocolate.

Bees Are Invaluable

The work performed by bees in pollinating crops on farms is worth more than 10 times the value of the honey produced, beekeepers for the extension service insist. Honey and beeswax are the products of honeybees, but bees do much more than harvest nectar and make wax. Their help in the production of seed and fruit by pollination is invaluable. Unfortunately, bees are killed in some localities because poisonous insecticides are applied to open blooms where the bees feed. As a result, the bees may die before reaching home or may carry home poisoned food for other bees in the hive. In this manner, the colonies are weakened to such an extent that many die out completely. Dusts, especially if applied by airplane, are particularly dangerous, drifting dust sometimes killing bees a mile or more from the field being dusted.

Boon to Fishermen

War surplus rope preservative, designed to protect ropes on ships and rafts in the Southwest Pacific from fungus and rot, is proving boon to fishermen in the Great Lake region and as far away as China. For some time it looked as though the government would be "stuck" with 11,800 gallons of the preservative, stored in rusting metal drums, because rope manufacturers were not interested in chemicals that would turn their product green. Then the preservative was offered to fishermen and in less than three weeks the entire lot was sold. Fishermen in the Great Lakes region, Virginia, New York and the Carolinas took three quarters of the preservative and the balance went to UNRRA for shipment to China.

New Fabrics

New fabrics are soon to be put into production. They include nylon staple yarn which will be made both fine and coarse. This yarn can be used alone or in blends with any other fibers. Blends of this new type of nylon yarn will make fabrics more durable, more washable, cooler and more crease-resistant. Nylon staple yarn will nearly eliminate the darning of socks because of the strength and elasticity of the fiber. Shrinkage of rayons always has been a problem. Various rayon companies are working on a treatment for rayon fabrics which will make them more stable. These treated fabrics will be spoken of as "definized."

'Eating of the Greens' Is Not Limited to Irish

The wearing of the green may be Irish, but the eating of the greens is universal—or should be. Greens are rich in vitamin A and good sources of vitamin C and iron. Nutritionists say the average American could well eat as much as 50 per cent more green and yellow vegetables.

Since vitamins disappear as vegetables wilt and wait, use green vegetables fresh—the fresher, the more vitamin C; the greener, the more vitamin A. To enjoy leafy vegetables at their best, whisk them from grocery or garden to table with only a brief pause in salad bowl or cooking kettle. When they must be held for a day or so, keep them cool, damp and lightly covered. Pile loosely to prevent crushing.

To keep greens bright, home economists of the department of agriculture say to cook them quickly—just until tender—season simply with salt and meat drippings or other fat, and serve at once. Usually no water needs to be added in boiling greens since the water that clings to the leaves is sufficient. Cover to speed cooking. Don't dump any pot liquor down the drain—valuable vitamins and minerals are dissolved in it. Use surplus juices in soup, gravy or a vegetable cocktail.

Quick-cooking greens are good bets for hurry-up meals. Approximate boiling times are: Spinach, shredded cabbage, 5 to 10 minutes; beet greens, quartered cabbage, 10 to 15 minutes; turnip greens, 10 to 20 minutes; collards, 20 minutes, kale, 10 to 25 minutes, and broccoli, 15 to 25 minutes.

Helpful Suggestions Listed For Flower Arrangements

Equal balance, harmony between parts of the arrangement and rhythm are essential points to be emphasized in original arrangements of flowers, according to extension specialists.

Flowers should be placed against a neutral background which doesn't compete with the arrangement for attention. Trays, pictures, mirrors, candles, figurines or books make appropriate backgrounds.

Bright gay flowers add sparkle and gaiety while cool colors suggest a quiet beauty. Some flowers, such as jonquils, lilies, daffodils and goldenrods, are enjoyed for their beauty in line. Violets, pansies, lilacs, asters and larkspur are attractive when arranged in a mass so that the color can be appreciated.

Vases with simple outlines and soft in color are most usable depending on the character of the room. Needle holders are popular and useful. Wire holders will hold many thick stemmed flowers and branches. Pieces of fine chicken wire may serve the same purpose if fitted securely into a vase. Children's modeling clay will secure the holder to the container. A fisherman's tackle box makes a good place to store holders, shears, clay, wire and other supplies.

Flowers cut in the early morning or late afternoon and placed immediately in a deep container of water keep the best.

Language Copyright

The British Labor government has purchased the copyright for basic English, paying the inventor about $108 a word. C. K. Ogden, originator of the simplified language, has transferred his copyright to the crown for $92,000. Basic English uses 850 words, compared to more than 414,000 in the current Oxford English dictionary. The coalition government decided in 1944 to develop basic English as an auxiliary and administrative language. The appropriation was for the semi-official British council, which the government helps support. The council already has paid Ogden $92,000 "in full and final settlement of all claims by him or the Orthological institute" which he heads. A government white paper said that, "in consideration of this payment, Ogden has agreed to assign his copyright to the crown."

Sugar Merchant Roosevelt

The Roosevelts, Rhinelanders, Livingstons, Bayards, Cuylers and Van Cortlands had been in the sugar business for years prior to the Revolutionary war. As far back as 1689, in the days of Leisler, a sugar refinery had been built on Liberty street in New York City. In 1725, a Mr. Hooper was granted a monopoly of refining sugar in New York City. It is thought, however, that the bulk of the sugar consumed in this country before 1789 was from Philadelphia refineries. The old type refinery had two large kettles or copper broilers into which lime water was placed, to which was added 5,500 pounds of sugar and 3½ gallons of bullocks blood and the white of eggs.

New Disease

A newly-recognized disease, characterized by chills, fever, sweats and backache, followed by rash, is described in the Journal of American Medical association. The journal, terming the ailment "rickettsialpox" because identical strains of rickettsias, or minute germlike organisms, were isolated from the blood of patients, said the unclassified disease was first reported in June, 1946, in New York.

COTTONWOOD RETURNS AS SOURCE OF LUMBER

The native cottonwood is gaining new importance in Iowa.

The wood is light in color and weight, takes paint well, is tough and moderately strong. It is used principally for lumber, veneer, pulpwood and excelsior, and is desirable for containers. Under dry conditions it is satisfactory for roof boards, sheathing and studding.

Cottonwood is one of Iowa's fastest growing trees, growing from 3 to 5 feet per year in early life, and reaching a sawlog size in 18 to 20 years. A planting of cottonwood can produce 1,000 feet of lumber per acre yearly over a 35-to 40-year period.

The cottonwood makes a desirable farm crop because of its ability to thrive on overflow bottomland where other crops can't grow. Transplanted, it will do well on nearly all Hawkeye state soils, says Richard Campbell, Iowa State College extension forester.

Plantings can be made inexpensively, Campbell says. The natural seedlings can be pulled on sandbars or on overflow land along creeks and rivers. One year old seedling are preferred, since they pull easier and are easier to handle. Before planting, the roots should be pruned back to a length of 10 inches and the tops to a length of 18 inches. Planted 6 to 8 feet apart, trees should be cultivated for the first year to keep down weeds.

Modern Budget Requires Complicated Arithmetic

Two and two equal four. Right! Simple arithmetic, first grade style! But despite rumors to the contrary, thousands of American housewives today are finding simple arithmetic just won't work when it comes to making present high prices and the same old budget get along well together. These days, two and two have to equal five, or even six—complicated arithmetic, household style! Home sweet home would be a madhouse of unpaid bills if it weren't for little everyday dollar-stretchers like these new ideas to budge the household budget.

Save even a tablespoonful of dinner's leftover vegetables snugly in the refrigerator. In a few days, there's the basis for a crispy, wholesome vegetable salad, economically made family-size by adding a little celery, lettuce and perhaps a tomato.

Speaking of leftovers poses an old problem of what to save them in. It isn't too unusual to throw away a bit of this or that just because there's no place to put it, but so often it's from these bits that easy-on-the-budget stew, hash and salads are made Save empty mayonnaise jars, mason jars or any other containers with screw-on lids.

Let butter or oleo, whichever is to be spread on bread or toast, come to room temperature before using.

Frequently scrubbed and waxed floors can be given more economical treatment than floors less harshly used. Take the kitchen floor, last stand for muddy boots and drippy umbrellas, that has to be scrubbed and rewaxed once or twice a week.

Today's dollar-stretching household arithmetic is a complicated and ingenious pattern of simple little economies—bright feathers in Mrs. America's cap.

Official Grading of Meat Aimed to Protect Buyer

Housewives will notice on marketing trips that more and more meat is showing up with the purple stamps of official grading.

About 60 per cent of commercially produced beef, veal, lamb and mutton now is being graded under this federal meat grading service. This is several times more meat than was being graded before the war. Home marketing specialists say this big increase in meat grading is largely due to the demand of consumers that the grading be continued and meat be priced according to grades.

During the war, many homemakers came to know and rely on the purple grade stamps as guides in buying meat. Not only housewives, but also many institutions, hotels, restaurants, food chains and other big buyers have learned that federal grading makes purchasing easier, more economical and satisfactory. Meat is graded by men carefully trained according to department of agriculture standards.

Official grades seen most often on retail markets are U. S. Choice, U. S. Good and U. S. Commercial. Homemakers can use these grades to make better meat buys.

Butter Substitute

Norway's margarine is about 80 per cent whale oil and Norwegians consumed over 34,000 tons of whale fat last year Of the country's total production of 83,615 tons of whale oil, more than 40 per cent was set aside for the margarine industry. Improved methods of refining and hardening have made today's product much superior to older butter substitutes using the same ingredients. Vegetable oils and butter have been so limited that without whale oil a serious edible fat shortage might have developed. An increasing number of uses now are being found for both fish oils and whale oils by the Norwegians, to replace the fats which were a major part of the prewar margarine consumed in that country.

Plastics For Home

Many homemakers are making use of plastic fabrics because of their beauty, ease of care and versatility. Plastic fabrics are of two general types. There is a "plastic film" fabric, made entirely from plastics and used as raincoats, shower curtains, baby pants and bowl covers. Another type of plastic is "plastic-coated" fabric. This is made by coating various textiles such as nainsook, marquisette, sateen and chambray. While plastics are highly stain-resistant, water proof, wind proof, moth proof and mildew proof, care should be given them. They should never be ironed or kept near heat. Moth crystals will cause some kinds of plastics to become soft.

Increase Returns

Successful poultrymen are getting higher returns and are marketing higher quality eggs by following six practices. They are (1) provide clean nesting material and enough nests so the hens will not crowd; (2) gather eggs three or four times daily to prevent dirty or cracked eggs; (3) cool eggs promptly, preferably in wire baskets which will let air circulate freely around the eggs; (4) hold eggs in a cool room, 45 to 60 degrees if possible, until marketed; (5) market eggs at least twice a week; (6) produce only infertile eggs.

Roughage Can Help Cut Costs Of Calf Feeding

Dairy calves, if fed and managed so that they are well developed at the end of the first year, can be grown the rest of the way on roughage along, says Floyd J. Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Let the calf have the colostrum milk the first 3 or 4 days. Then feed whole milk until the calf is 2 weeks old. Seven or eight pounds for each 100 pounds live weight is enough. Most calves are overfed on milk the first month, Arnold says.

Switch to skimmilk the third week. As soon as the calves are showing thriftiness and aare growing properly, the amount of skimmilk may be gradually reduced until the seventh or eighth week when the calf can be weaned if the milk supply is short.

Top grade hay and a starter grain mixture should be available to the calves at all times. Arnold says they should be accustomed to eating these feeds before the milk is withdrawn from the ration. Any high quality hay—hay that is leafy and green in oclor—will do the job.

Encourage the calf to eat early in life. Roughage seems to be important in maintaining the optimum bacteria flora in the paunch. These bacteria build vitamins and proteins which the calf needs for growth.

Calves prefer a very finely ground calf meal as a starter. An excellent mixture can be made of 300 pounds of finely ground corn, 300 pounds of oatmeal, 300 pounds of bran, 100 pounds of linseed oilmeal, a pound of salt and a pound of bonemeal. Add a pound of irradiated yeast or cod-liver oil per ton of the mixture for vitamins.

After the calf is a month old the mixture can be replaced by a more coarsely ground grain mixture, using the same proportions. The irradiated yeast or the codliver oil may be omitted then.

THE BLIZZARD OF 1888

Elmer Twitchell, charter member of the Society for Perpetuating the Blizzard of 1888, an old northern custom, was at the annual meeting and in old time form. "I will never forgot that storm," he declared. "I got caught at one time between two flakes that weighed more than I did."

"How that snow piled up! My mother called me to the window and said 'Look, it's beginning to snow, Elmer.' Well, sir, before I could look out there were people caught in drifts as far as the eye could see! I remember we sent the hired man to the woodshed, only 50 yards away, for a shovel! And never saw him again until July.

"My father, who was out in the backyard, started to climb a drift on the front steps and when he got to the top he was on the roof of the house yelling 'Excelsior!'

"Remember Tony Paster's theater? Well, sir, every act on the bill that night was blown right out of the theater . they found a dog and pony act frozen in the ice 10 days later and a ventriloquist turned up in August behind a barn in New Rochelle . . . My father told me of a man who drove by sleigh directly into a room on the eighth floor of the old Grand Union Hotel.

"And the wind? Well, sir, it was worse than in a modern presidential campaign. Nobody had the same roof or chimney after that storm. We got a roof from the Eb Andrews barn 60 miles north and a chimney from a factory up around Troy, N. Y. There wasn't a pane of glass left in a house in New York. But it didn't matter as the ice froze in the window frames and lasted all that summer and autumn.

* * *

"These men living in the past remind me of a toy. I am sure you have all seen it. It is a wooden bird called the Floogie Bird. Around its neck is a label reading 'I fly backwards. I don't care where I'm going. I just want to see where I've been."—President Truman.

Our recollection — and we have to go away back—is that it was called the Fataluva bird and that it is was a gag first used by Bob Benchley.

SPECIAL DELIVERY LETTER

Dear Uncle Sam:

For the first time in my life I am worried about you. Never before have I wondered if you could be a dope or a Humpty Dumpty. Never before have you ever seemed to have points resembling a composite picture of Little Lord Fauntleroy, the Fairy Godmother, Little Jeff and Donald Duck.

But now, with Joe Stalin laughing up his sleeve as he and his carefully trained stooges take over country after country with the ease of the man on the flying trapeze, I am doing my wondering in technicolor.

With Communists sworn to your destruction working around the clock right under the beezer, taking orders from the Kremlin and leaving nothing undone to soften you up in the exact pattern employed in Czechoslovakia, you content yourself with shadow boxing, rhumba dancing, thumb-twiddling, goose-greasing and dry runs through a revolving door.

You are interpreting the initials U. S. A. as meaning United States of Amnesia. You are singing it "My Country, 'Tis of Thee, Sleeping Land of Stupidity."

Is there any reason why you can't be a Good Samaritan without shooting the donkey? Can't you be a lifeguard without giving rope?

It is later than you think. It is high time you got smart, alert and on the ball. Are you Uncle Sam or Lady Bountiful? Are you a tough, rugged quick-witted, high-level national wonder man or just a yawning director of a "My Advice to You" program? Are you Uncle Sam or Uncle Sap? I'm just asking.

Yours in complete befuddlement.
Elmer.

"It is quite well known that we communists are not believers in over-throwing the United Etates government by force"—From a statement by a prominent American communist.

Just a teeny-weeny torpedoing, that's all.

Great Britain has spent the four billion American loan in a litfle over nine months. Nobody can keep a penny these days.

"It's all right, Mother," said the youngster. "We got lots of mice in school."

"Yes, but those are white mice," the mother argued.

The kid looked at her in disgust. "Aha," he said. "Race prejudice, huh?"

ther one questioned, "How do know he jumped? Maybe he ushed."

Another said, seriously, "That's right. My boy knew him. He wasn't a coward. If he's in that lake he was murdered."

A siren wailed and the crowd fell back to make room for another patrol car which drew up alongside the green sedan. "There's Old Doc Warren," someone in the crowd said as an elderly man stepped out of the car.

I worked my way toward the cars. I could hear Old Doc Warren talking. "Yes, this is his car. He has been working hard—too hard, but what doctor hasn't these days? So far as I know he has no enemies, but I don't believe my son would commit suicide!"

There was another stir of excitement. I threaded my way back to the rail to see if this time they had really found him.

The boys in the boats were having difficulty hauling in the lines, but when the catch broke water we could see it was just a log.

As they dropped it back the shrill whistle of the interurban reminded me that I was already late for work. I reluctantly pulled myself away and headed toward town.

Down the road I stopped at Phil's Phil-Er-Up. I liked Phil and I could save the city gasoline tax.

"Where's the boss?" I asked the young attendant who dashed out to wait on me, "up at the lake watching them drag for the body?"

"Gosh, no!" exclaimed the boy as he fumbled with the hose. "Has he been having a time! His wife had a baby this morning, a week before she was expecting it!"

Just then Phil came out of the living quarters in the back with another young man. Phil was beaming like the traditional proud father as he pulled his hat down firmly. The other man didn't seem excited.

I heard Phil say, "Hey, Doc, you forgot your hat." He turned to go back. But the other man laughed. "You were too excited to notice that I didn't have one when I walked in here for gas. The wind blew it off as I stepped out of my car on the bridge."

He had kissed her goodby. She had thought no more about it until the police called.

Pittsburgh Council to Abandon Stephen Foster Memorial Home

Once again Pittsburgh is embroiled in a controversy over Stephen A. Foster, one of its most famous sons, as the result of a decision by the city council to abandon the Stephen Foster Memorial home.

Rather than spend $10,000 to rehabilitate the memorial home, the city is giving up the 14-room mansion which some biographers term the "authentic site" of Foster's birth. The once stately place has become dilapidated, with plaster falling, porches collapsing and romping school children peppering its windows with stones.

Three direct descendants of the noted composer may be left homeless as a result of the abandonment. The three, a grandson, granddaughter and great-granddaughter, have lived in the building for more than 30 years. The granddaughter, Mrs. Jessie Ross, 72, has been acting as caretaker for the city.

In its decision not to repair the building, the city council declared that the rambling brick homestead has "ceased to have any value as a memorial." The council therefore is deeding the property back to heirs of James H. Park, wealthy steelmaster who bought it in 1914 and gave it to the city with the stipulation that it be maintained as a museum containing a collection of Stephen Foster mementoes.

Music-lovers of the city later raised $500,000 to build an elaborate Gothic memorial to Foster on University of Pittsburgh campus. This memorial contains the largest collection of Foster's manuscripts and other belongings. It now is the mecca for thousands of visitors who formerly called at the Stephen Foster Memorial home.

Another controversy over Foster raged in 1934 when Henry Ford bought what was claimed to be Foster's "real birthplace" and moved it to his outdoor museum in Dearborn, Mich. William McNair, Pittsburgh's mayor at the time, claimed the millionaire car manufacturer bought "the wrong house." Mrs. Evelyn Foster Borneweck of Detroit, a niece and biographer of Foster, said the composer was born in a white frame cottage which was torn down and replaced in 1865 with the brick mansion which became the Stephen Foster Memorial home. Foster died in 1863.

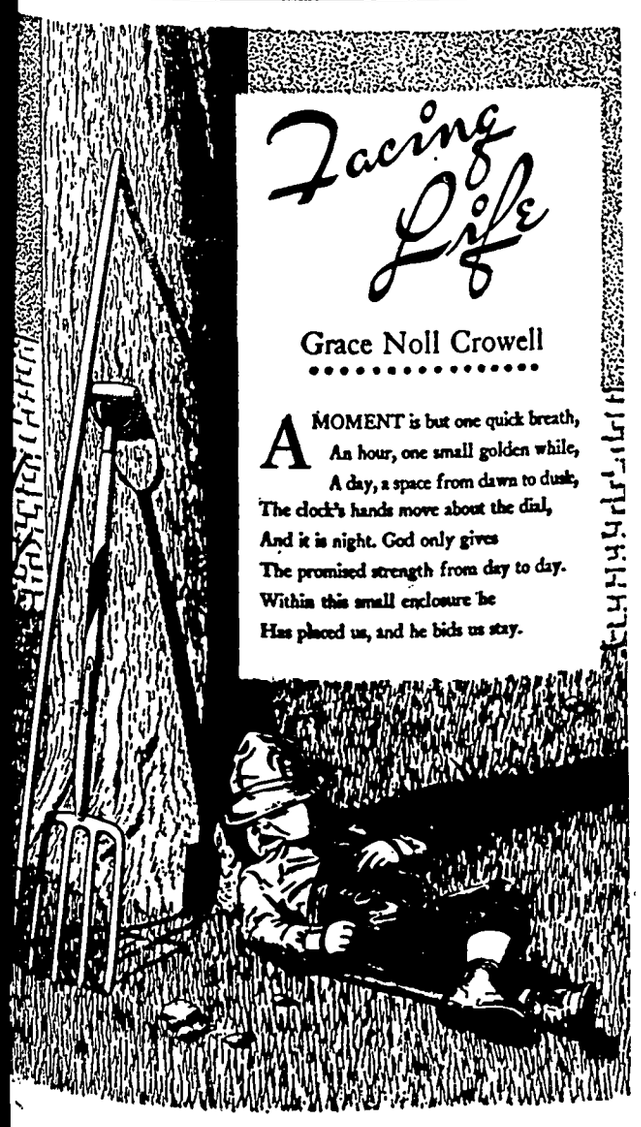
Playing Child Termed Human Caution Sign

A playing child should be a Human Caution sign to motorists, officials emphasize in connection with a nationwide plea for highway safety.

One of every three children who die is killed in a traffic accident, according to the 1947 edition of Accident Facts, a publication devoted to safety promotion. One-third of the accidental deaths of children 5 to 14 years of age are the result of motor vehicle accidents.

Motorists are cautioned to observe the following rules:

1. Always "Watch Out for Kids."
2. Keep clear of bicycles—right or wrong—as they are defenseless against a motor vehicle.
3. Be on the lookout for children darting out between parked cars. Reduce speed and increase watchfulness in school zones and residential areas.
4. Always remember that children have not reached the age of discretion and judgment—drivers must think for them.
5. Children play in driveways and around parked vehicles — always make sure children are out of the way before starting a parked vehicle.
6. Driver—it might be your child!



Facing Life

A day, a space from dawn to dusk,

by GRANTLAND RICE

IF you will pardon us for pointing, big league baseball today has an extremely high average of leadership in its managers now after the golden fleece.

The 1948 crop can match anything we have known in baseball. As they will figure largely in the headlines of the new year they should be worth just a bit more space than they have received to-date.

"Who are they?" Even if you don't remember, they include Joe McCarthy of the Red Sox, Bucky Harris of the Yankees and Lou Boudreau of the Indians. It might be Steve O'Neil of the Tigers also belongs. We are not so well acquainted with his work.

It might be that Connie Mack can be included in this list—we mean 1948—the only year that matters now. You can throw out all the others.

The American league battle will be a hand-to-hand, throat-cutting duel between McCarthy and Harris. It ought to be. They have most of the good ballplayers.

McCarthy is a brilliant manager. But don't underrate Harris, the most human leader of the lot. Harris can handle his squad, and, when you ask him a question point-blank, he answers point-blank, protecting nobody, telling you the truth as he sees it.

Harris is a rarity I haven't seen since the days of John J. McGraw. McGraw, as I knew him, was a helpful friend when you needed a story. So is Harris.

Managers Need Players

Boudreau, a great ballplayer, has never had the material to prove his place. Boudreau might have churned up a mess of trouble this season, if the Yankees and Reds hadn't reached out and lassoed most of the good floating material.

A fellow can be honest, have an honest opinion, and still be wrong. In the opinion of this restless roamer, the best manager in the National league is Billy Southworth of the Braves—possibly the best manager in baseball today.

Next to Southworth, we put Eddie Dyer and Leo Durocher on level terms. Both are something better than good managers. We like Dyer's system of handling his men and working with umpires better but we can be quite wrong here.

Burt Shotton is one of the great managers of baseball. Rickey should have given him 50 per cent of every dollar he took in through 1947.

For all of that Durocher is an able leader. He isn't a McCarthy, a Harris or a Southworth, but he is good enough.

Mel Ott has another chance to prove his place. Ott is one of the most likeable persons in the game today.

Charley Grimm, Johnny Neun, Bill Meyer and Ben Chapman are are good managers. With better material, they might be much better managers. But they will chuck in a number of grenades when the Cardinals, Dodgers, Braves and Giants come along.

Florida, the Beautiful

Florida may have many things that other states lack—and that includes California. In the Everglades, for instance, the state that Ponce de Leon helped make famous has the last frontier of sport, the most famous 10 thousand square miles in the United States.

Here, within a brief whirl of the social softness and glamour of Palm Beach and Miami Beach, you can come upon both beauty and savage wildness, fang and claw, the rattlesnake and moccasin, the copperhead and the coral snake, the puma or what is known here as the panther, bear up to 400 pounds or more; deer, alligator, egret, pelican, heron and crane, almost every known variety of bird life and fish beyond all imagination.

In one day's haul in a small boat we returned with 12 varieties of fish. The boat was half full of fish by 2 o'clock. There were wild duck and geese flying overhead and there was quail in the dryer spots.

The jungles of India and Africa have nothing to match the variety or beauty of the Everglades or its look of wildness in certain sectors.

There are no tigers, lions, elephants or leopards around. But the puma or panther, ranging nine feet from tip to tip, weighing close to 200 pounds, is a replica of the West's mountain lion. The puma isn't a tiger or a leopard, it isn't even a jaguar, but it is still nothing to meet on a narrow trail.

The mangrove swamps and ghost islands here can get you lost in 10 minutes, lost beyond recall, without a guide.

I was lost in less than 10 minutes. "Would I ever find my way back?" I asked, after clearing a few mangrove spots. "Not in a hundred years," my guide said, "unless you can beat a 1,000-to-1 shot."

Florida has something that too many of its people never have appreciated. It is about time they understood. For what they have is invaluable in the long run a more important part of the nation than Washington, D. C.

Moguls Probe Candidates

IT HAS NOW BEEN nearly four years since Democratic party moguls met at a secret White House dinner and persuaded Franklin Roosevelt to accept Senator Truman of Missouri as vice president. They knew then, of course, that the chances of FDR's living through the next four years were slim.

Present at that dinner were Ed Flynn of the Bronx, Mayor Ed Kelly of Chicago, Mayor Hague of Jersey City and Bob Hannegan. Recently almost the same Democratic moguls convened at the White House. And despite the announcemnt that Truman is a candidate, they still hope they can deftly dislodge from office the man they put in.

They know in advance that this would not be easy—for two reasons: 1. The embarrassmant of breaking the news to Mr. Truman. 2. Finding another candidate who can win.

Two years ago this would have been easy. At that time, Truman himself was saying he did not want to be president. But no man likes to retreat under fire, and Mr. Truman's ideas on this are well illustrated by the staunch support given such friends as Ed Pauley and Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham when they were under fire for speculating.

The party moguls promised each other privately that they would be hard-boiled and tell the President the truth—namely that the chance of victory with him at the head of the ticket is nil.

Finding a candidate to take Mr. Truman's place will not be easy. Chief Justice Fred Vinson of Kentucky would be acceptable to the South but wouldn't arouse too much enthusiasm in the North. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is a great administrator and would have the advantage of probably persuading Henry Wallace to withdraw.

It takes time to build up any candidate. And while it's not too late, the sooner the Democrats get busy, the better their chances.

Religion Whips Commies

HARASSED SECRETARY OF STATE MARSHALL has confided to friends that he is more worried than ever about the approaching elections in Italy. He fears a combination of the Yugoslavs and Italian Communists may try to take over. Meanwhile, Francesca Lodge, wife of the G.O.P. congressman from Connecticut, herself born in Italy, has received an interesting letter from an old friend indicating that the religious temper of the Italian people will win out over communism.

"Life here seems to have come to a standstill," Mrs. Lodge was informed. "Everything is paralyzed waiting for the result of the elections.

"A new wave of religious fervor seems to have come over most people. There are all sort of manifestations in the way of the Madonna appearing in several places. At Assisi the great statue on the top of Santa Maria Degli Angeli—the romantic little church where the pilgrims used to meet coming back from the Holy Land, and where Saint Francis lived and where the rose plants have bloodstains on the leaves—well, this big statue for days now has been the center of thousands of visits from people from all over Italy,"

Marshall's Aid Plan

IT IS NOW NEARING ONE YEAR since General Marshall proposed what is now known as the Marshall Plan For Aid To Europe.

When the plan was first proposed congress said it was too busy with routing appropriation bills and shortly thereafter adjourned for the summer.

Last fall, as the European situation got bad again and speedy action on the Marshall plan was urged, congress squawked about going back to work. Too many of its members were away on trips.

Finally when congress was convened there elapsed weeks and weeks of hearings, debate, argument and secret G.O.P. meetings at the home of Kansas isolationist Senator Reed—all at a leisurely pace as if the world were perfectly normal and there wasn't the slightest need to hurry.

Meanwhile Russia has gobbled Czechoslovakia, tightened its hold on Finland and is preparing for an early strike at Italy. After that, France.

Some Republicans—notably Malone of Nevada, Ecton of Montana and Wherry of Nebraska—are too dumb to know what the world situation is all about. But other G.O.P. obstructionists—among them Knowland of California and Ball of Minnesota—are smart enough to realize that a few millions of dollars spent now can save thousands of lives later. So far, however, they haven't.

The debate in congress boils down to the fact that either the Marshall plan is worth voting or it isn't. If it's to be dragged out until after Russia swallows Europe then it might as well be kissed off right now. Congress should make up its mind—and fast!

Putting a 'Punch' in Lunch

Packing a lunch that "packs a punch" and avoiding that day-to-day sameness is a problem of many homemakers. Aim always to include something crisp, something juicy, and one hot, one sweet, one tart or salty, and one colorful food, advise nutrition specialists. Each lunch box should contain one third of the food supply for the day for the person who eats it. Lettuce put in sandwiches is likely to wilt and is better when wrapped separately.

SPEEDED-UP COMFORT for so-called KIDNEY SUFFERERS

Backaches, leg pains, broken sleep, painful passages usually go so much quicker if you switch to Foley (the new kidney-bladder) Pills. They stimulate sluggish kidneys, then ALLAY IRRITATION. That's the cause of most pains, aches, urges once thought entirely due to kidneys. So for quicker, longer-lasting relief, soothe bladder as well as stimulate kidney action. Do this, use Foley (the new kidney-bladder) Pills; they also have direct sedative-like action on bladder. At your druggist. Unless you find them far more satisfactory, DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK.

TRAFFIC NEWS

More than 1,000 Iowa motorists are driving with extra care these days. They received letters telling them that one more traffic violotion means the loss of their drivers license. The first letter was sent out February 28 from the Department of Public Safety.

In 12 cases drivers have committed another violation after receiving the letter and their licenses have been suspended. Suspensions average approximately 90 days.

The letters are part of the Department's "Drivers Improvement Program". They are being sent out at the rate of about six a day now, according to Don Hughes, Supervisor of the program. The backlog which existed when the program began has been taken care of and violations are now handled as they are reported.

Two hearings before District Patrol Sergeants have been granted since the start of the program. As the result of one of the hearings the license was returned to the driver. There has not been a report on the other case as yet. The attitude of the driver and the frequency and flagrancy of the violations determine the decisions of the Sergeants.

Hughes said that if a person does not violate the traffic laws for 12 months after receiving a letter, he will not then be faced with the threat of suspension upon one more violation. However, another violation would start the process again.

Examples of poor driving records which have resulted in suspensions were noted by Hughes. Failure to obey a boulevard stop and speeding caused one driver to lose his license. Another was suspended when he repeatedly refused to dim his lights when meeting other cars at night, while the third motorist can blame reckless driving for the loss of his driving privilege.

FARMERS DOUBLE USE OF COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER

The amount of commercial fertilizers used in the United States now is more than double the amount used by farmers just before the war.

USDA reports show that the average quantity of commercial fertilizers used annually from 1935 to 1939 was 1,465,000 tons. Last year 3,380,000 tons were used, and it is estimated that 3,556,000 tons will be put on farms this year.

Of the fertilizer used, about one-half of the tonnage is made up of phosphorus, one-fourth nitrogen and one-fourth potash.

Grinding, Mixing Feeds For Laying Flock Doesn't Pay

Grinding and mixing feeds on the farm for laying flock doesn't pay for labor and expense it requires.

Iowa State College extension poultrymen point out that tests do not indicate any benefits from grinding or cracking grains for hens. They suggest feeding about a 26-percent protein concentrate rich in vitamins in one trough, with whole oats and shelled corn in separate troughes. This feeding program will save time and give excellent results.

MRS. FRANK WARD TELLS OF TRIP TO COAST

I will describe a few of the interesting places I visited while in California. First I had a ride on the electric train from Berkeley, where my daughter lives, thru Oakland and over the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, the largest in the world and it connects San Francisco with the east Bay Shores. We arrived in San Francisco, saw the skyscrapers, visited a beautiful park, saw the aquarium which has so many different kinds of fish of all sizes and colors, also alligators, seals, very large turtles and different kinds of eels which were all in the same large building. Then we ate a picnic lunch in the park and visited a tea garden, with lanterns, and pagodas, Chinese type bridges, and many beautiful flowers all in bloom. The Chinese food was also served, little Chinese cakes and tea. The park was very pretty with large beds of pansies in bloom, also many other varieties of flowers in the garden. On my next sight-seeing tour I went to the campus of the University of California in Berkely, saw the hills for which Berkely is noted for. On the campus is a tower which is over 300 feet high, going to the top is an elevator. At the top of the tower is a large clock and chimes or bells which are played by means of large wooden levers. From the top of the tower I could see the Golden Gate Bridge, the mountains in the distance, and the Bay area and city of Berkly. It was a very interesting sight. We also saw the Pacific Ocean and world-famous Cliff-House at the western end of San Francisco on the Pacific coast. From its windows visitors may plainly see herds of seals on the great rocks in the water. I saw a herd of them on the rocks. I went inside the Cliff House, which has many souvenirs for sale. In this building were also many types of old musical instruments, and we heard some of them. I picked up some shells along the shoreline and certainly enjoyed the sights and ocean. Their were six or seven large ships out on the water. On my last sight-seeing tour, the Johnston family and myself packed a picnic lunch, and drove by car over the Golden Gate Bridge and then we took the ferry across San Pablo Bay, (this was the first ferry ride the little granddaughter and I had ever taken). We then drove past the San Quentin prison grounds, and on our way to the Muir Woods, along a very winding road which curves upward and one has to watch out for cars coming around many sharp curves. We arrived in Muir Woods and ate our picnic lunch out in the open under large redwood trees. The type growing in Muir Woods are commonly called Coast Redwood or simply Redwood. This tree is the tallest living thing in the world, reaching the extreme height of 364 feet. The largest diameter is about 20 feet and the maximum age is probably not much in excess of 2000 years. I saw the national monument with the inscription: "Here in this grove of enduring redwoods, preserved for posterity, members of the United Nations conference on international organization met on May 19, 1945. To honor the memory of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, thirty-first President of the U. S., chief architect of the United Nations and apostle of lasting mankind." Many of the trees are scarred and blackened around the trunks from forest fires. Large log foot bridges cross the Redwood Creek at intervals and we walked over these throughout the woods. There are many flowers, such as crillium, clintonie and azaleas. Oxalis is found in numbers at the base of Redwoods. Deer are quite common but limit their appearance to early morning or late evening. The tallest tree is 246 feet; the largest diameter 17½ feet. In addition to the trees already named, there is an abundance of ferns The type growing most profusely being the sword fern. Other beautiful ferns are the lady fern, bracken, and woodinardia Birds are numerous and varied, but the majority of them spend their time in the tall trees, and are seldom seen by the average visitor. Fry and fingerling of salmon and steelhead trout are numerous, moving about in pools during summer and fall, and when winter rains have raised the water level in Redwood Creek. On our way back to San Francisco and home I saw many yachts along fisherman's wharf and Chinatown This was interesting too, as crowds of Chinese lined the streets, and we heard so many cars blowing horns and we found out that there had been a Chinese wedding, hence all the noise I bought some souvenirs, pictures and postcards in Muir Woods and then we went home to Berkeley

On Easter Sunday it rained in California, they have had a bad drouth there and needed the rain. I attended the Trinity Methodist Church Easter Sunday and heard the lovely pipe organ music. The choir or large chorus sang the "Hallelujah Chorus" by Beethoven also the Easter Song by Fehrman. The sermon was "Our Easter Faith." The church was decorated with many huge bouquets of Easter lilies. There was also some special music by trumpeters, which I enjoyed.

One Sunday I saw the rose garden. It is a pretty sight about the middle of May or first of June, when all the roses are in bloom. Just a few were blooming when I saw them. Lots of them were in bud. There are many different colors and all are named.

I also saw Alcatraz prison in the distance on my way to San Francisco going over the Bay on Oakland-San Francisco Bay Bridge.

On my way home by train, go-thru Nebraska, near Grand Island, I saw a herd of buffalo grazing. Quite an unusual sight. Farmers were out in fields discing cornstalks.

The grand daughter's name is Laura Ann instead of Susan, we could not hear well when we received the telephone call She is growing and gaining in weight; and of course I think she is real cute. In all, I had a wonderful visit in California.

Yellow Is Nature's Trademark For Butter Chester R. Schoby Says

Declaring that yellow is nature's trademark for butter, Chester R. Schoby, well-known dairyman, today "drew the color line" for the protection of the consuming public in the "fight of the fats."

"Butter is nature's masterpiece," he pointed out. "Four pints of cream go into every pound. No nut, bean or seed oil is used. Butter is a natural source of Vitamin A and other valuable food nutrients, including the newly discovered property, vaccenic acid—the growth factor."

Referring to the economic side, Schoby said: "Butter is the keystone in dairy production and the year-round levelling agent in the distribution of milk and its products. When butter is not distributed, the whole price structure on dairy products is upset."

Schoby has just returned from the ninth annual meeting of the American Dairy Association in Chicago where he was re-elected to the national board of directors, named Iowa member of the executive committee, and elected national ADA vice-president. Also elected to the national board of directors from Iowa were: E. S. Estel of Waterloo and Folmer C. Hansen of Cedar Falls.

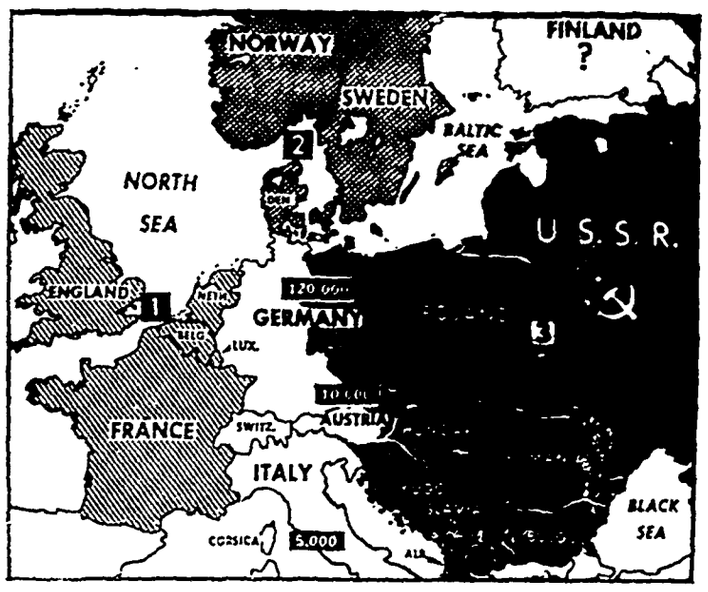
Truman Calls for Draft, Training To Bolster Resistance to Russia; U.S. Reverses Stand on Partition

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



FORCES AT WORK . . . Increasing Communist pressure in Europe has been instrumental in dividing the continent into three component power blocs, all of which are influenced by a fourth force—U.S. policy, symbolized by the presence of American troops in Germany, Austria and Italy. Map shows western bloc (1) of anti-Communist Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands; northern bloc (2) of the Scandinavian countries, daily growing more apprehensive of Soviet tactics and eastern bloc (3) of Russia and its satellites. Present approximate American troop strength is indicated for Germany (120,000), Austria (10,000) and Italy (5,000).

THE PRICE

Peace and War

"We must be prepared to pay the price of peace or assuredly we shall pay the price of war."

Those words, spoken by President Harry Truman to the U. S. congress, could be the seeds of the first genuine, effective foreign policy this nation has had for half a century.

Disregarding any political overtones there might have been in the President's speech, his address to the joint session of congress reflected the realization at the top level of government that any successful foreign policy must be based on the fundamental concept of striking a balance between commitments abroad and the national security or strength at home available to back up those commitments.

By definition, the term "foreign policy" implies that any nation expressing such a policy possesses the strength—in military forces and alliances—to follow it consistently at all times and to defend it just as consistently in case of war.

In that connection Mr. Truman specifically asked congress for power to draft men to build armed strength against the ruthless aggression of Soviet communism.

He asked also for "prompt enactment of universal training legislation," indicating that the draft should be only temporary until universal military training is giving the country the trained men it needs.

Finally, he sought swift passage of the 5.3-billion-dollar European recovery program — the Marshall plan for economic recovery of western European nations which is setting the Kremlin's teeth on edge.

Bluntly the President upbraided Russia for making a travesty of peace:

"One nation has not only refused to cooperate in the establishment of a just and honorable peace, but—even worse—has actively sought to prevent it."

Western Pact

Lending force to Mr. Truman's scattering of the seeds of foreign policy was the fact that, an hour before he delivered his pronouncement, the just-completed five-nation western European pact for common defense against attack had been announced officially.

Under the treaty, Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands pledged one another military aid in the event that any one of them should be attacked.

According to the new "Truman doctrine," the United States would be the principal guarantor of this five-power union. Without such a guarantee of U. S. backing, the western European treaty would be meaningless.

By his declaration in support of the western European pact Mr. Truman seemed to be guiding the U. S. to a point of departure from its historic adherence to the diplomatic enormity of refusing to engage in "entangling alliances" even at the price of its own welfare.

BACHELORS: Declining

Evidence of an innate desire for family life among adult Americans is revealed in a study by the U. S. bureau of the census showing a long-term decline in the proportion of bachelors of both sexes.

On a numerical basis, census bureau figures disclose, the number of single men and women has dropped to the lowest level since 1920, despite a third increase in population since then.

REACTION: Divided

What are the true facts? Just how potentially lethal is the situation with regard to Russia?

Senators and representatives were asking those questions after President Truman's "let's get strong" message. Many of them were demanding answers before they would consent to go ahead with any legislation endorsing a military draft or UMT.

Congress was divided, but the split was not along party lines. It reflected isolationism, discontent with the Truman foreign policy and in some cases an almost unhealthy respect for Russia's power in Europe.

Greatest fear seemed to be that conditions in Europe, as precipitated by Soviet actions, may get out of hand suddenly, despite the efforts of Russia or any other nation to prevent such a development.

Best opinion holds that, while Russia is not now seeking war, the Communists have created a kind of Frankenstein monster in Europe that at any moment could plunge out of control and involve the world in another conflict. Secretary of State Marshall is said to feel this way:

The Soviets are motivated by a sense of urgency to act before the European recovery program begins to function and before the union of western European nations is firmly established. Driven by this feeling of urgency, the Soviets may not be able to avert an incident which would lead to a shooting war.

CONVINCING

Closeted for 50 minutes with Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Defense Forrestal and Secretary of the Army Royall, the senate armed services committee emerged from the conference to throw its weight behind President Truman's plea for quick action to build up America's military forces.

Sen. Chan Gurney (Rep., S.D.), chairman of the committee, reported that 10 of the group's 13 members were convinced that both a limited draft and universal military training have become an "absolute necessity."

Just what the three secretaries told the armed services committee was not disclosed, but it was undeniably powerful information.

ABOUT FACE: Expedience

To many persons it looked as though the United States, in abandoning its support of the Palestine partition plan, had pulled a "Pontius Pilate" on the same scene where the procurator of Judea had washed his hands not quite 2,000 years ago to sanction the Crucifixion.

In reversing its role in the partition struggle, the U. S. proposed that the Holy Land be made a United Nations' trusteeship, giving Jews and Arabs a chance to reach agreement on their own concerning the future of their country's government.

Warren R. Austin, American delegate to the U.N., said that it was obvious that partition could not be carried out except by force, and the U.S. consistently has demurred against the idea of sending troops to Palestine.

It was ironic that the American statement withdrawing support from the partition plan was undoubtedly the death blow to that plan which never would have been adopted by the U.N. in the first place if it had not been for American pressure and influence

TRIESTE: Surprise

In a move that surprised everyone from the Russians to American congressmen, the U. S. proposed jointly with France and Britain that the free territory of Trieste be returned to Italy.

Trieste, long a storm center coveted by both Italians and Yugoslavs, had been made a free state under United Nations guidance in the six-months-old Italian peace treaty.

The proposal was, apparently, a shrewd and calculated move to try to help the anti-Communist forces in Italy win the April 18 election.

It literally put the Russians on the spot, leaving them with little choice of reaction. If they support the western powers' proposal to return Trieste to Italy they will be, in effect, turning their backs on their previous arguments for a Yugoslav Trieste, thereby kicking their Yugoslav cohorts in the face.

On the other hand, if Russia were to side with Yugoslavia it would amount to a rebuff for the Italian Communists. Possession of Trieste is a great political issue in Italy, and it well may turn out now to be a deciding factor in the elections coming up there.

Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito, however, lost little time in answering the proposal of the U. S., Britain and France. He simply rejected the demand and proposed instead that a plebiscite be held in the free state of Trieste to decide whether it should be Italian or Yugoslav.

Moscow diplomats were calling the action "another move toward war." Said one: "The beginnings of international order which emerged after the war are being destroyed."

But to those who were working tooth and nail against the spread of communism it looked like a master stroke, one which might keep Italy and all of western Europe out of reach of the Kremlin.

FOOD WASTE: Rats, Insects

Although the world is crying for food, hundreds of thousands of tons of American foodstuffs are spoiled each year by the depredations of rats, mice and insects—and often by the carelessness of some producers.

Food and drug administration officials say the amount of so-called "filthy food" they destroy every year is enough to contribute "very substantially" to the hungry areas of the world.

"Filthy food" is the legal term for food spoiled by "contamination of rats, mice, insects or other repulsive foreign bodies." It is the job of the food and drug administration to find and condemn filthy food in the channels of interstate commerce and to prosecute those responsible.

Since FDA's power to condemn filthy foods at their destination was taken away a year ago, officials estimate that, as a result, 20 tons of such food appears in retail outlets every day.

RABBITS: Meat Supply

There is one vast source of meat—maybe an inexhaustible one—that the U.S. public might have to consider seriously if beef and pork become as scarce and expensive as it is predicted they will:

Rabbits.

That is a department of agriculture idea. The department suggested that the American people take up the raising of rabbits as a supplementary source of meat to eke out the usual protein fare, destined to become more scarce and costly.

National rabbit week, which was observed during the week following Easter, would be "a good time" for families to plan to produce a "year round supply of this white, delicately flavored, nutritious meat, comparable to breast of chicken," the department hinted.

What does one need to begin raising rabbits? Just rabbits.

Bushed

It takes technicolor to do justice to the whiskers of Gordon Moore of Vicksburg, Mich., who will defend his title as the owner of the world's champion beard in a contest to be held there in July. Beard and mustache are a brilliant and matching red.

Expanding Colleges

By 1950 American colleges and universities will need additional space equivalent to 133 Empire State buildings and several billion dollars to pay for it, which is where the taxpayers come in.

That is the present outlook for higher education as reported by the U. S. office of education. The report, dealing with college and university building needs, is based on a survey of 1,386 institutions.

Jan Masaryk Took His Life In Protest Against 'Robots'

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—For some time after I heard the tragic news of Jan Masaryk's suicide, a strange memory haunted me . . . . I saw—A man and woman alone in a darkened room. They are two of the last three human beings on earth. The rest have been destroyed by an army of automatons—man-created robots. Creatures who have all other human attributes, but no sensitivities, no souls. Mechanically-made, the robots are the triumph of the productivity of the machine.

But they have revolted and turned against their creators. They now are marching on the last human stronghold. The lights go out, you can hear the rhythmic tramp, tramp, tramp of their iron feet. There is a crash of glass as they push, insensitive to pain, through the windows — two revolver shots ring out in the dark as the human beings commit suicide to save themselves from the horrible wrath of the automatons.

That, you may remember, was the climax of the play RUR—"Rossums Universal Robots"—written by Karel Kapek.

I was reminded of it because of one of the first deeds of Jan Masaryk in 1946 when he returned to his native country after the exile imposed on him when Hitler's robots crushed the first Czech republic. When Masaryk returned, he laid flowers on the grave of Karel Kapek, the great Czech author who wrote that prophetic play, giving us the word "robot" and the warning behind it. The words comes down from the old Slavic "robota," servitude.

We have accepted the word.

We have not heeded the warning.

The robots, like the Golem of the Hebrew myth, and the Adam of the Psalms "yet being unperfect" before a soul was breathed into his substance offer a grim warning to us now. Unhuman beings released today, may re-enact Kapek's play on a stage, wide as civilization.

Day after day come the frightened echoes from Europe of the fear of war. And yet no people wants it. If you were to write down all the material demands of the diplomats and the rulers of each nation, and put them in the hands of the peoples of the world and tell them: If you want these you must have war, who would pay the price of war? None. None but a robot, without sensitivity, without soul.

The martyrdom of Jan Masaryk seems to have hurt rather than helped the Communist cause. I spent some time with the former Czechoslovak ambassador to the United States, Juric Slavik, on the evening of the day when Masaryk's suicide was announced.

Slavik believes that Masaryk felt he could serve his country better dead than as a living prisoner, for the ambassador says he was a prisoner. Masaryk, alive, but with every word and gesture filtered through the censorship of the Communist screen, would become a symbol of the spirit of Czechoslovakia surrendered, enchained, a noble and historic name and all it has stood for, besmirched and obliterated. Dead, the name, the spirit, live.

The ambassador recalled an episode in that epic odyssey which has gone down in military history as

JAN MASARYK

The name, the spirit, live.

one of the marvelous achievements of World War I—the march of the Czechoslovak Legion which fought beside the Allies against the Russians, and after the Bolshevists had made their peace with the Germans, fought its way from the Ukraine to Vladivostok, a trek that makes the world's great marches pale by comparison.
